For the parent company, Campeau Corporation reported revenue from real estate operations of $202 million in 1989 compared with $169 million the previous fiscal year. The parent company reported a pre-tax profit of $23 million in 1989 before recognizing its share of losses in its subsidiaries. The comparable profit earned in 1988 was $124 million. The net loss for 1989, after recognizing its share of losses in its subsidiaries of $1.6 billion, a net loss from discontinued real estate assets ($104 million), and after income tax, amounted to $1.7 billion. This compared with a net loss of $34 million in 1988 after recognizing its share of losses in its subsidiaries amounting to $118 million and after income tax.

By segment, the corporation's department stores reported revenue in 1989 of $7.6 billion, up from $6.2 billion the previous year. The increased revenue mainly reflects the reporting of a full 12 months contribution by Federated. Revenue from specialty stores in 1988, which were divested, amounted to $326 million. The supermarket operations of Ralphs recorded revenue of $2.6 billion in 1989, up from $1.8 billion a year earlier with the increase mainly reflecting inclusion of a full 12 months of results in 1989. Revenue from real estate rentals and sales amounted to $309 million on a consolidated basis in 1989 ($202 million for the parent company), compared with $280 million in 1988 ($169 million for the parent company).

Operating profit of the department stores operations was $595 million in 1989, reflecting a full 12 months inclusion of Federated. This compared with $599 million in 1988 (specialty stores added $25 million in operating profit in 1988). The operating margin declined primarily as a result of competitive pricing strategies, increased promotional efforts, and higher selling general and administrative costs.

Operating profit from supermarket operations rose to $158 million in 1989 from $119 million the previous year, mainly reflecting the inclusion of a full year of Ralphs' results which was acquired in May 1988. After adjusting for a non-cash charge of $26 million related to a benefits plan, Ralphs' operating margin rose in 1989 to 7.2 percent from 6.5 percent.

Real estate operating profit increased by $6 million in 1989 to $144 million, reflecting the effects of the disposition of various properties net of increased rentals from existing and new properties.

Consolidated financing expense, including interest and the amortization of financing costs, increased to $1.2 billion in 1989 from $877 million in 1988. The increase resulted mainly from the inclusion of financing costs of Federated and Ralphs for a full year in 1989 compared with nine months in 1988. Additional factors included higher financing expense on working capital borrowings by Allied and Federated.

DALLAS (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Oryx Energy Company (NYSE: ORX) has announced two new Austin Chalk discovery wells that tested at a combined daily rate of more than 1,800 barrels of oil (BOPD) and one million cubic feet of gas (MMcf/D) and extended the company's proven acreage base in the Pearsall Field to the west.

"We continue to be excited about our success in the Austin Chalk," says James E. McCormick, president and chief operating officer of the Dallas-based independent. "When you realize that in January 1989 our production from Pearsall was only about 160 BOPD, our gross production today of more than 15,000 BOPD and nine MMcf/D is most impressive!"

The C. Jasik No. 1, located in Dimmit County about 2-1/2 miles north of Big Wells, tested 1,084 BOPD and 643 Mcf/D through a 34/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 340 pounds per square inch (psi) from pay zones between 6,152 and 10,021 feet measured depth. The well as a horizontal displacement of 3,822 feet and reached a total measured depth of 10,021 feet. The latest discovery extends the potential for Austin Chalk production to the western edge of Oryx Energy's acreage in the Big Wells area. The Jasik No. 1 lies 2-1/2 miles southwest of the Heitz No. 1, Oryx Energy's most prolific horizontal well with a cumulative production of 275,000 barrels since its discovery last fall.

The second discovery, D. Cross et.al. No. 1, flowed 728 BOPD and 359 Mcf/D on a 24-hour production test through a 28/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 220 psi from pay zones between 7,092 and 9,463 feet measured depth. This well has a horizontal displacement of 2,713 feet and reached a total measured depth of 9,463 feet. The Cross No. 1 is located in LaSalle County, 12 miles southwest of Dilley.

The company began acquiring acreage in the Pearsall Field in the late 1980s. The company now has a 100 percent interest in approximately 180,000 acres, plus an option on an additional 58,000 net acres through a recent joint venture. Cumulative production from all Oryx Energy's horizontal wells in the Austin Chalk exceeds two million barrels. By the end of 1990, the company plans to have drilled 85 horizontal wells, about 60 developmental and some 25 exploratory.

Dallas-based Oryx Energy Company is the largest independent oil and gas company in the world, with assets in excess of $5 billion and proved reserves of more than one billion equivalent barrels. Oryx Energy conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners, L.P. (NYSE: SLP), of which it is the managing general partner and 98 percent owner.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Legislation that would halt the outright copying of automotive crash parts -- such as grilles, fenders, hoods and doors -- would provide valuable protection to vehicle owners, an auto industry spokesman contended today.

Kenneth W. Myers, testifying on behalf of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association (MVMA) in support of the Industrial Design Anti-Piracy Act, appeared before the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Courts, Intellectual Property and the Administration of Justice. Myers is marketing manager for the Ford Parts and Service Division.

Crash parts represent less than 10 percent of all vehicle parts and are those most frequently damaged in the more than 35 million vehicle accidents that occur in the U.S. each year.

"Producers of imitation sheet metal -- mostly companies in Taiwan -- merely copy parts designed and developed by auto manufacturers," Myers testified. "Unlike the makers of mufflers and internal parts, they have no investment in the design, engineering and testing of parts, but simply copy someone else's efforts. Worse yet, their parts are not exact copies and are often inferior."

Debate over the quality of imitations and cost savings supposedly derived by consumers through the increased use of the lower-priced copies has held up passage of legislation, leaving the U.S. as the only major industrialized country without protection for automotive designs, Myers said.

The Ford executive also countered claims that passage of the legislation would cost consumers money.

"There is no credible evidence that cost savings for the insurance industry's use of imitation body panel parts is passed on to consumers," Myers testified. "In the same period that use of imitation sheet metal parts increased, auto insurance premiums also increased dramatically. From 1982 to 1989, the total value of sheet metal imported from Taiwan increased fivefold; insurance rates still increased 68 percent, twice the rate of inflation," Myers told the subcommittee.

Myers contended that it is the consumer who will suffer most if imitations continue to proliferate.

WAYNE, N.J. (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The flexible polyurethane foam industry has greatly reduced its use and emission of fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs), according to the results of a survey announced by the Polyurethane Foam Association (PFA).

The survey of PFA members (manufacturers of flexible polyurethane foam in the U.S.) found that the industry cut CFC use and emissions by approximately 45 percent in 1989 from the levels of 1986. This places the industry well ahead of the provisions of the Montreal Protocol, the international treaty governing CFC use.

According to the Montreal Protocol, the industry was required to cut CFC use to 1986 levels in 1989. The treaty requires an additional 20 percent reduction in CFC use by July 1, 1993, and another 30 percent reduction by 1998. The survey by the PFA indicated that the industry was very close to the final 1998 requirements of the Montreal Protocol at the end of 1989.

Last year, the foam industry set a much more optimistic goal than the Montreal Protocol required -- total phaseout of fully halogenated CFCs by the year 2000.

According to Louis H. Peters, Executive Director of the Association, foam producers are moving quickly toward that goal.

"We announced last year that it was our intent to eliminate emissions of fully halogenated CFCs from our production processes and our industry is pursuing a number of alternatives to make this happen," Peters said. "With the rapid reduction in use of CFCs last year and the vigorous pursuit of alternatives, we believe that the industry will continue to stay well ahead of the Montreal Protocol timetable and will easily achieve the industry stated goal of phaseout of use by the year 2000," said Peters.

Peters indicated that the May meeting of the PFA in Arlington, VA was devoted almost exclusively to presentations on CFC alternatives. Among the alternatives reviewed were new foam chemistry, alternative auxiliary blowing agents, and emissions control and recovery technology.

"Elimination of CFC emissions in an environmental responsibility and a business practicality," he said.

Peters said the PFA will continue monitoring its use of CFCs to track further reductions.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Xscribe Corp. (NASDAQ: XSCR) announced today its results for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990. Revenues for the year were $16,208,000, down 26 percent compared to $21,859,000 for the prior fiscal year. The net loss for the year was $2,317,000 ($.36 per share) compared to a net loss of $10,886,000 ($2.14 per share) for the prior year. Revenues for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, were $3,919,000, down 11 percent compared to $4,398,000 for the fourth quarter of the prior year. The company's net loss for the quarter ended March 31 1990 was $698,000 ($.11 per share) compared to a net loss of $5,823,000 ($1.14 per share) reported for the fourth quarter of the prior year.

Suren G. Dutia, Xscribe's president and chief executive officer, commented on the results. "Fiscal 1990 was a year of transition for Xscribe. We began the year with two primary goals -- product development and improved asset management. We feel we have made significant strides toward both. During the year we completed and introduced several new products. In May 1989 we introduced Maestro Court Reporter, our new PC-based CAT (Computer Aided Transcription) system and in August 1989, we introduced our state-of-the-art Stenoram III writing device. In the past few months we have introduced three new products. Our FirstCAT product allows court reporting students to use their mechanical writers with a CAT system. Our new PC-based captioning system makes closed captioning possible on a personal computer. Our DiscoveryBase litigation support software for attorneys has received good reviews within the legal profession. We are hopeful that these new products will help establish Xscribe's reputation as the technology leader in the legal profession.

"Our stronger cost controls and improved asset management have resulted in continued greatly reduced operating costs in the current year. These improvements have been partially offset by the decrease in revenues which are due to increased competition and its resulting price erosion in the mature CAT marketplace. Despite the decrease in revenues, however, we are pleased that losses have been significantly reduced."

Xscribe Corp. designs and markets a wide variety of high-technology software and hardware products for legal professionals, including computer aided transcription (CAT) systems for court reporters, microcomputer-based systems for litigation support, and real-time captioning systems for the hearing impaired.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The Marcade Group, Inc. (NYSE: MAR) today reported higher revenues and lower earnings for the 13 weeks ended May 5, 1990, as reflected in the following consolidated statements of operations.

Revenues for the quarter were $96,865,000 compared with $80,765,000 for the similar period last year.

Net income for the quarter was $851,000, or 1-cent per fully diluted share compared with the $2,433,000, or 4 cents per fully diluted share earned in the 1989 quarter.

Charles S. Ramat, president, stated, "We are pleased to report a profit in what has proven to be a particularly difficult first quarter for the apparel business, The perception of declining consumer confidence and the reality of the financial difficulties that continue to plague the retail sector has led our major customers to reduce prices, to reduce

We anticipate this situation to continue at least through our second quarter, although it may continue to impact earnings for the full year."

GAITHERSBURG, MD (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Oncor, Inc. (NASDAQ: ONCR), announced today that at a meeting of the Association of Cytogenetic Technologists in Santa Fe, N.M., it has introduced the first commercially available DNA Probe Test System for use in the screening of common chromosomal abnormalities, including X and Y sex-chromosome disorders and Down syndrome.

Oncor's DNA probe-based test, performed on a microscope slide during the first trimester of a pregnancy, allows the rapid identification of Down syndrome and screens for other common aneuploidies (variations in chromosome numbers which are related to specific syndromes), especially those pertaining to chromosomes 13, 18, X and Y.

Test results are obtained within one day after prenatal amniocytes are available for testing. "This represents a powerful new capability when combined with classical cytogenetic techniques," stated Stephen Turner, Oncor's chairman and chief executive officer.

Developed by Oncor's Molecular Cytogenetics Division, the In-Situ Chromosome Analysis Test System, as it is referred to, has the ability to characterize chromosomes in cells that are not dividing.

This eliminates weeks of preparation, as the cells can be processed immediately rather than have to undergo growth by cell culture in the laboratory as is done in traditional cytogenetics. In addition, the test is easier to interpret and is much less labor intensive, according to Turner.

Commenting on the test, Dr. Aubrey Milunsky, professor of pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, and pathology; and director of the Center for Human Genetics, Boston University School of Medicine, said, "The introduction of chromosome-specific DNA probes by Oncor opens a new era in prenatal diagnosis in particular, and cytogenetics in general.

"This new technology will not only facilitate and expedite prenatal genetic studies, but will ultimately enable millions of women worldwide who are less than 35 years of age to benefit from prenatal genetic studies not usually offered to them."

"New and major opportunities are now obvious for routine cytogenetics and cancer genetics, and especially all types of molecular-cytogenetic research. Oncor is to be congratulated for introducing its DNA Probe Test System which has enormous medical and commercial importance," added Dr. Milunsky.

The test utilizes DNA probes that allow the identification of chromosome disorders such as trisomies or monosomies. As described in the attached background report, a trisomy or monosomy is the presence of one too many or one too few chromosomes in a normal chromosome pair.

It is usually the presence of a third chromosome 21 - Trisomy 21 - which causes the features of Down syndrome. According to the National Down Syndrome Society, Trisomy 21 occurs in one of every 770 live births in the United States. In addition, one of every 500 births in the United States has a trisomy or monosomy for one of the sex chromosomes.

Using Oncor's alpha-satellite DNA probe technology, the test is highly reliable and requires no specialized instruments other than a fluorescent microscope. "Thus, all cytogenetics laboratories will be able to add this test to their current testing regimen," Turner noted.

BACKGROUNDER

In 1959, Dr. Jerome Lejeune in France, was the first to discover that an abnormality in chromosome 21 was the cause of Down syndrome, a form of mental and physical retardation.

Genetic abnormality usually occurs during cell division where one chromosome sticks to another and the chromosome pair fails to separate, thereby creating one too many or one too few chromosomes. There are 46 chromosomes per human cell consisting of 23 pairs of chromosomes, with one of each pair from the mother and one from the father.

In the case of Down syndrome, there is an extra number 21 chromosome. It is the presence of this third 21 chromosome which produces the features of Down syndrome, or Trisomy 21, the most common type of Down syndrome. Down syndrome occurs in about one in every 800 births in the U.S. and is the most prevalent of all genetic disorders involving chromosome abnormalities.

Some of the more common characteristics of Down syndrome include, mental retardation, improper heart development, susceptibility to infection, respiratory problems, poor muscle tone, oblique slanting eyes, flat face, short limbs, low nasal bridge and small nose, excessive flexing of extremities and premature aging.

Many Down syndrome victims have also been found to develop Alzheimer's disease later in life. With the advancements that have been made, as many as 80 percent of adults with Down syndrome reach age 50 to 55, and beyond.

Although Down syndrome is the most common trisomy, the sticking of one chromosome to another, known as nondisjunction, may also occur in other chromosomes causing trisomies or monosomies (one too few chromosomes) associated with other syndromes which cause severe birth defects and/or sexual disorders. One in every 160 newborns, or approximately 20,000 infants a year in the U.S. are born with chromosomal defect.

The presence of an extra number 13 chromosome, or Trisomy 13, referred to as Patau syndrome, occurs in one of every 25,000 births causing severe mental and physical defects with a 90 percent death rate by the end of the first year.

An extra number 18 chromosome, or Trisomy 18 (Edward syndrome), occurs in one every 8,000 births. It also causes serious mental retardation and other defects and has an even shorter life expectancy of only a few months.

The Oncor In-Situ Chromosome Analysis Test System, a one-day procedure performed on a microscope slide, not only detects the specific abnormalities associated with Down syndrome, it can also be used to screen specific chromosomal abnormalities associated with other trisomies and monosomies.

Also, the detection of X and Y chromosomes allows the identification of sex and sexual disorders, such as males with an extra X chromosome, XXY males (Klinefelter syndrome), or a female born with a missing X chromosome, Monosomy-X (Turner syndrome).

The test system can also be used in the analysis of cancer. The chromosomes of tumor cells frequently contain rearrangements and deletions which cannot be identified by current cytogenetic techniques. Such chromosomal aberrations make the identification of specific chromosomes difficult. Oncor's Test System is able to recognize these specific chromosomes, allowing their use as tumor markers.

MIAMI (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. Bankruptcy Judge A. Jay Cristol has approved a $41 million financing for General Development Corp. (NYSE: GDV) which will be effective through Dec. 15, 1990. The financing was previously agreed to by the company and a group of banks led by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Chemical Bank. It replaces a $10.5 million credit facility which expired on June 13. As of June 13, no amount was outstanding under this facility.

Judge Cristol limited the amount of money the company could draw on the new facility to $17 million ($11 million to pay a secured claim and $6 million for operations) through the end of June, in order to complete a plan for escrowing a portion of funds the company receives from its customers for the cost of developing homesites. Judge Cristol set a hearing June 27 at which he will review for approval the escrow plan and the availability of the remainder of the $41 million.

General Development filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code on Apr. 6 and has been operating as Debtor in Possession under jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court since that time.

In other action, the first meeting of creditors in the bankruptcy action has been postponed from July 27 to Aug. 16. It will be held at Gusman Hall in downtown Miami.

On June 25, General Development Utilities will turn over operations of its water and wastewater utility system in St. Lucie County to the county government as part of a condemnation proceeding. The county will post $45 million with the court as a downpayment on the ultimate value of the system to be determined by a jury trial still to be scheduled.

In Charlotte County, the county commission has voted to begin condemnation proceedings on the GDU water and wastewater system in Charlotte and DeSoto counties.

General Development also announced that it has begun deeding homesites which are developed with roads and drainage to customers who have completed payments for those homesites. It was the first time that this business activity had taken place since the bankruptcy filing.

General Development's commercial division last week closed on two commercial sales totaling $6 million after the Bankruptcy Court approved the resumption of that portion of the company's business.

SAN DIEGO (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - IRT Corp. (AMEX: IX) today announced that, following further consultation with its auditors, it has determined to treat approximately $1 million of debt forgiveness by Citibank as a deferred credit rather than as an extraordinary gain in fiscal 1991. The deferred credit will be amortized over seven years, the remaining life of the Citibank senior subordinated note, commencing in the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

The debt forgiveness, announced in news releases dated June 7 and June 12, 1990, was part of loan renegotiations in conjunction with the June 7 private equity investment of $4 million of convertible preferred stock.

This action has no effect on IRT's reported operating results for fiscal year 1990, announced June 12. IRT reported revenues of $19.3 million and net income from continuing operations of $2 million, or $.37 per share, for the year ended March 31, 1990. Discontinued operations posted a net loss of $299,000, for a combined net income of $1.7 million, or $.31 per share.

The changed accounting treatment, in accordance with Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 15, also results in reclassification of certain balance sheet accounts, including current and long-term liabilities, in the March 31, 1990, balance sheet previously released. The accompanying 1990 balance sheets reflect the new treatment.

IRT Corp. is a major supplier of industrial real-time X-ray systems, with more than 500 systems installed, and is the technology leader in automated X-ray inspection systems with computerized defect recognition capability. CHARLOTTE, NC (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - First Union National Bank is cutting the rate on its Affordable Home Mortgage Loan program following meetings with neighborhood leaders in low- and moderate-income communities.

Effective today at First Union National Bank offices in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee, the rate for qualified applicants will drop from 10.5 percent to 9.75 percent. The new rate will be available for a limited time this summer.

The loans, which First Union introduced in December 1989, are available in amounts as low as $10,000, with as little as a five percent downpayment and terms up to 30 years. To qualify, the borrower's family income must be at or below 80 percent of the median income for the county in which they live.

"This loan program has been very well received throughout the First Union system," said John R. Georgius, president of First Union Corporation. "We know from our conversations with customers and from our ongoing needs assessments in our communities that we can make this product available to more people by offering even greater rate flexibility."

First Union's Affordable Home Mortgage program also offers flexible qualifying criteria. The five percent downpayment may include gifts, may be financed (if included in the debt-to-income ratio) or may include quantifiable sweat equity in some situations. Sweat equity is work performed by the owner that adds value to the property.

The ratio for this special loan program is as follows: the mortgage payment may be up to 30 percent of the borrower's gross monthly income, and all monthly debt payments may be up to 38 percent of gross monthly income. This ratio compares with Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation ("Freddie Mac") standards of 28 and 36 percent, respectively. The loans require no discount points and an origination fee of only one percent of the loan amount.

"The Affordable Home Mortgage Loan program is one part of our ongoing effort to meet the needs of low- and moderate-income residents of the communities we serve," said Barbara K. Massa, First Union Corporation senior vice president and director of community reinvestment. "We're happy to make this product more affordable -- and housing more accessible -- for our customers."

First Union Corporation (NYSE:FTU) reported assets of $39.1 billion as of March 31, 1990.

Ronald E. Foley, Travelers senior vice president for personal lines, said the actions are part of a plan to make the company's personal lines operations more competitive and to focus resources on markets where there is the greatest potential for long-term growth and profitability.

He said Travelers has informed the insurance departments in South Carolina North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, West Virginia, Nevada, Idaho, Arkansas, Oklahoma that the company is leaving the homeowners and auto markets in those states.

The company previously announced that it is not currently writing new auto policies in Pennsylvania and is completing its withdrawal from the California private passenger automobile market.

Agents in most markets have been informed that beginning Jan. 1, 1991, they will be compensated in their private passenger automobile business through a variable commission schedule. The level of compensation will relate directly to the profitability of the auto business they write.

SAN JOSE, CALIF. (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - VLSI Technology Inc. (NASDAQ: VLSI) announced today their participation in the industry's first true step towards industry-wide standards for frameworks. VLSI has successfully implemented the CAD Framework Initiative (CFI) demonstration procedural interface. This allows software tools from different CAE vendors, on different hardware platforms, to pass information back and forth, without generating external files.

Even though this demonstration is a small piece of the framework problem, it shows the maturity and commitment of the industry in recognizing the need for, and making progress in, the development of framework standards. The progress of the CFI Design Representation Subcommittee and the other six CFI subcommittees has been substantial.

As explained by Steve Kompolt, Silicon Tools and Infrastructure product manager for VLSI's ASIC Division, "Our membership and participation in the CFI is yet another step in VLSI's commitment to supply a complete ASIC solution. VLSI has implemented design solutions requiring close integration of its CAE tools with proprietary third- party CAE system frameworks for three years. This integration has gone far beyond a simple EDIF interface, and includes netlists, schematics, and cell compiler data. VLSI is very pleased by the level of participation by the industry in the CFI Design Automation Conference (DAC) demonstration.

"In 1982, VLSI Technology's Design Platform(TM) framework was the first commercial CAE/CAD package to offer a consistent user interface based on a graphical window interface. In addition, VLSI was the first company to offer commercial logic synthesis tools. Our strategy is closely linked to CFI's: to continue to offer innovative ASIC design software which can be integrated with industry-standard frameworks."

VLSI Technology Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets application-specific integrated circuits, and application-specific memories and logic products. VLSI Technology, which has approximately 2000 employees worldwide, had 1989 revenues of $288.5 million.

After provision for depreciation and amortization expense of $1,298,000 in 1990 and $1,090,000 in 1989, net income was $1,877,000 or 20 cents per share, vs. $2,025,000, or 21 per share, reported in the 1989 second quarter.

Earnings before depreciation and amortization for the six months ended May 31, 1990 were $5,980,000, or 64 cents per share, compared to $6,186,000, or 67 cents per share, earned in the comparable 1989 period. After provision for depreciation and amortization, net income was $3,394,000, or 36 cents per share, in the current six month period, vs. $4,166,000, or 45 cents per share, reported a year ago.

Earnings for the quarters and six months ended May 31, 1990 and 1989 include lease termination payments of $271,000 in 1990 and $238,000 in 1989.

In reviewing operating results, W. Pearce Coues, chairman of the board of trustees, noted that at the end of the quarter the trust completed, as previously outlined, the acquisition of title to Yorkshire Plaza, a suburban Chicago shopping center, that had secured a $5 million equity participating loan acquired as part of the Turner Equity Investors

FAIRFAX, VA (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Financial News Network Inc.'s (NASDAQ-NMS: FNNI) Virginia-based subsidiary, Data Broadcasting Technologies, Inc. (DBTI), today announced that it has entered into a five-year agreement with VeriFone, Inc. (NASDAQ: VFIC) to provide vertical blanking interval (VBI) receivers for use with credit card authorizations and other financial transaction automation applications nationwide.

The contract provides VeriFone with rights to DBTI's VBI data receiver technology for financial transaction automation applications. DBTI will provide a limited number of units during a market test period, which is expected to last up to 15 months.

DBTI's VBI data receiver technology has become the state-of-the-art for high-quality, high-speed data delivery and has been successfully employed for applications such as stock quote services for the last several years.

DBTI President J. Scott Dinsdale stated, "We are very pleased that VeriFone has chosen DBTI as its partner to expand the use of VBI data receiver technology in the financial payments marketplace."

Ashok Narasimhan, vice president of market and product development, commented: "VeriFone identified DBTI as a leading developer and supplier of VBI data receiver technology, and is happy to have DBTI as its development partner and supplier. We expect this technology to permit us to expand the core payment processing and newer segments of the transaction automation market."

VeriFone leads the transaction automation marketplace with 65 percent of the total systems shipped in 1989. The traditional method of transmitting transaction data uses costly telephone lines. DBTI's VBI data receiver technology will permit cost-effective, virtually error-free, high-speed distribution of data to addressable data receivers without the use of telephone lines.

The VBI consists of 21 lines, between each frame of a television picture, into which data can be inserted, transmitted and then removed, without any alteration of the TV picture. The best known use of VBI technology is "closed-captioning," which enables the hearing impaired to watch television with sub-titles.

VeriFone, Inc., based in Redwood City, Calif., is a leading supplier of transaction automation systems used to deliver payment processing and other financial services to the retail and petroleum industries worldwide. In addition, VeriFone is developing new market segments for transaction automation, such as fast food, health care, and government. The company has 30 offices located throughout North America and in London; Paris; Madrid, Spain; the Hague, the Netherlands; Sydney, Australia; Taipei, Taiwan; Singapore; and Bangalore, India. VeriFone has shipped more than 1.3 million transaction automation systems to date.

Financial News Network is a cable television network currently providing three services to more than 33 million subscribers. WILMINGTON, DEL. (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Farmers in Illinois and five other states are helping Du Pont (NYSE: DD) test recycled plastic jugs containing a company herbicide.

The program is part of an effort to help farmers find more environmentally sound methods to manage pesticide container disposal.

The jugs are made from recycled agricultural chemical containers collected last year by farmers and others in Mississippi. The collection is part of an ongoing pilot recycling project sponsored by federal and state government agencies, the agricultural chemical industry, farm organizations and community volunteers. The farmers helping with the on-farm testing this summer are in Illinois, Delaware, Florida, Iowa, Minnesota and Mississippi.

"We already know that these recycled plastic jugs meet the same strict testing standards as ones made from virgin plastic resins," said Ralph May, senior research chemist for Du Pont's Agricultural Products Department. "We fully expect them to be just as sturdy and durable on the farm. All of us involved in this recycling effort are very excited about the results."

Du Pont has packaged "Lorox" DF, a herbicide used to control weeds in soybeans, cotton, corn, and a number of vegetable crops, in the recycled jugs. Its dry flowable formulation makes it easier to handle and mix than wettable powders and liquids and less likely to leave residues in the container.

The farmers, who use "Lorox" DF to control weeds in their crops, will handle the jugs as they normally would through the growing season, then return them to Du Pont scientists for further analysis. The jugs, made from a 50-50 blend of recycled and virgin plastic resin, have passed a series of tests and meet all Department of Transportation standards for pesticide containers.

The field testing is the latest step in a sustained effort by Du Pont to help the farm community solve the mounting problem of container disposal. An estimated 40 million pounds of plastic containers are generated each year by U.S. farmers. Collectively, the agricultural community recognizes there must be solutions other than landfills or incineration of the containers. Illinois is one of several states that have started container management and recycling programs.

ORRVILLE, OH (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The J.M. Smucker Company (NYSE: SJM) Orrville, Ohio, announced today that for the year ended April 30, 1990, it had sales of $422,357,000, representing an increase of 15 percent over the $366,855,000 sales of the prior year. The company also announced net earnings of $30,177,000 for the year, an increase of 10 percent over the $27,555,000 earnings for fiscal year 1989. Earnings per share for the 1990 fiscal year were $2.05, compared to $1.87 per share in fiscal 1989.

The sales increase was attributed to volume growth in the company's Consumer, Foodservice and International areas. The sales growth included the acquisitions of the Henry Jones Foods business in Australia and the Fruitage (formerly Vitari) product in the Foodservice area. In the consumer area, the sales growth was led by fruit spreads and fruit juices.

Net income was up 10 percent, but grew at a lesser rate than sales due to the higher costs of certain fruits and sweeteners along with the impact of the increased international sales which currently earn a lower margin.

DETROIT (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - ANR Pipeline Company, a subsidiary of The Coastal Corporation (NYSE: CGP), today announced that it will be able to provide both firm and interruptible transportation services for natural gas shippers on its new Lebanon Extension on Aug. 1, 1990.

Completion of the Lebanon Extension will enable ANR Pipeline shippers to have both U.S.- and Canadian-produced volumes of natural gas delivered directly to Lebanon, Ohio.

In addition, Lebanon will enable shippers to utilize ANR's underground storage fields in Michigan.

The Lebanon Extension is an integral part of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's "Open Season" settlement for construction of new natural gas pipelines to serve the Northeast. Construction has not yet started on the other two pipelines certified by the Commission as discrete projects.

"The Lebanon Extension will benefit both domestic producers and Northeast consumers," said William J. Haener, executive vice president and chief operating officer of ANR Pipeline Company. "Because we can move both domestic and Canadian volumes on Lebanon, ANR will be able to deliver diverse and secure supplies of natural gas to the incremental market in the Northeast."

ANR will have a total initial capacity of 240 million cubic feet per day (MMcf/d) on Lebanon. But that capacity is scheduled to be increased to 400 MMcf/d with the installation of compression in 1991, and it can be expanded to 600 MMcf/d, if necessary, to meet future market demands.

ANR's Lebanon Extension consists of a 30-inch pipeline that runs from ANR's mainline system near Muncie, Ind., to Darke County, Ohio. At that point, it connects with a 36-inch pipeline which is jointly owned with Panhandle Eastern Corporation and runs from Darke County to Lebanon, Ohio. There it will connect with existing pipelines serving markets in the Northeast and middle-Atlantic region.

The Coastal Corporation is a Houston-based energy holding company. Coastal has consolidated assets of more than $8 billion and subsidiary operations in natural gas transmission and storage, oil and gas exploration and production, refining and marketing, coal and chemicals, and independent power production.

MIAMI (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastern Express unveiled a new marketing strategy today which features a $49 one-way fare between Miami and seven other Florida cities.

The marketing campaign is part of an overall strategy designed to make the commuter carrier the airline of choice for Florida business travelers.

Eastern Express currently provides round trip service from Miami to Tampa, Orlando, Sarasota/Bradenton, Fort Myers, Naples, Key West and Marathon.

Newspaper advertisements promoting the new fares and other incentives being offered by Eastern Express begin appearing on June 21 throughout Florida. The ads are built around the theme "A Great New Way To Get Around Florida: The ExpressWay."

In addition to the $49 fares, travelers on Eastern Express will earn a minimum of 3,000 OnePass frequent flyer miles for every round trip flown.

An arrangement with General Rent-A-Car will enable round trip customers to rent a car for $9.99 for the first day and $19.99 for every day thereafter. Additionally, Eastern Express customers who take advantage of the rental car offer will earn another 1,500 OnePass miles for a potential total of 4,500 OnePass miles.

The $49 fares and other incentives associated with the "Expressway" promotion will be in effect through July 31, 1990.

Eastern Express presently operates some 47 departures a day from its Miami hub to 11 destinations. In addition to the Florida routes, service is also provided to the Bahamas destinations of Freeport, Treasure Cay, Governors Harbour and Rock Sound. The "ExpressWay" promotions are good only for Florida destinations.

As part of Eastern's growth plans, Eastern Express recently announced that it plans to double its operations in early fall with the creation of a second hub in Tampa. The expansion will provide nonstop service from Tampa to Naples, Key West, Fort Lauderdale, Melbourne, Daytona Beach, Jacksonville, West Palm Beach, Fort Myers and Tallahassee.

The expansion plans also call for new nonstop flights from Key West to Fort Myers and Naples as well as new Miami service to Daytona Beach and Melbourne.

Eastern Express was created when Eastern Airlines agreed to purchase the Florida and Bahamas operations of Bar Harbor Airways from Continental Airlines.

The change in ownership is awaiting final approval from the bankruptcy court and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

TORONTO (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - A shrinking middle class will have serious ramifications on mass marketers in the '90s, Laurel Cutler, vice president-Consumer Affairs of Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C), told 200 analysts attending the Society of Automotive Analysts' annual convention.

"The mass market as we all knew and loved it back in the '50s, '60s and '70s is as dead as a doornail," Cutler said. "The beloved masses have now become individuals ... selective in their choices of frozen foods, hair sprays, and automobiles.

"The middle is dropping out of practically every measure of consumer buying behavior," Cutler said. "In the '90s, purchases will either be important and well-considered, or they will be trivial and instant."

The middle class has experienced a "relentless erosion" as two-income families move up the economic ladder and high-paid manufacturing jobs shrink and pull others down, she said. In 1967, nearly 33 percent of American families were in the middle income bracket, measured in today's dollars. By the mid-'90s, only 23 percent will be, Cutler said.

"Today, the market is nothing but niches," she said. "And the key to successful marketing in the '90s is to target the niches, and build a business on them."

Equally important, Cutler said, is heightened consumer awareness. The recently completed "Chrysler in the '90s" tour and the "Advantage: Chrysler" advertising campaign, while controversial, have positively influenced consumers' attitudes about the company, she said.

"We need positive awareness and we aren't going to get that awareness with 'Muzak.' Our advertising has to be bold and aggressive. It must generate the same intensity of interest as our most successful products do," Cutler said.

ATLANTA (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Bank South (NASDAQ: BKSO) and GTE (NYSE: GTE) announced today an agreement whereby Bank South will purchase 142 automated teller machines from GTE.

Conversion of the machines is expected to be complete by September and will increase the number of Bank South-owned ATMs in Georgia to 242, more than any other financial institution.

The agreement provides Bank South with 139 machines currently installed at various high-traffic metro Atlanta locations, including Winn Dixie, Big Star, A&P and Cub Foods supermarkets, Pace Warehouses, Rich's and Hartsfield International Airport. The agreement also includes an additional three machines for placement to be determined by Bank South.

"This agreement means a dramatic increase in convenience for our customers " said Bank South Vice President of Electronic Banking Calvin Johnson. "Bank South already has 81 full-service offices throughout metro Atlanta, including 33 that are open seven days a week until 8 p.m. in Kroger stores. Now, among financial institutions in Georgia, Bank South has the largest number of ATMs that dispense cash, transfer funds and provide account balances."

Once conversion is completed, it is estimated that nearly one out of every five Avail transactions will take place on a Bank South ATM. Bank South will have one machine for every 688 customer accounts, a ratio nearly twice as favorable to customers as the closest competitor.

The decision by GTE to sell the ATMs is part of the company's strategy to more tightly focus its business operations. "We are confident that this agreement will benefit both GTE and Bank South, said William E. Starkey, president of GTE Information Services. "It enables us to further hone our operations so that we can focus on our core businesses."

Bank South is a charter founding member and co-owner of the Avail network that links over 1,600 ATMs throughout Georgia, and also belongs to the Cirrus system that provides customers access to cash from over 25,000 automated teller machines worldwide.

Bank South is a multi-bank holding company with $5.4 billion in assets and 138 offices throughout Georgia and in Penscola, Fla.

ATLANTA (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - In comments filed with the Department of Transportation, WORLDSPAN Travel Agency Information Services asked the DOT to re-evaluate its proposed action against Iberia as a result of a complaint filed by American Airlines.

In the filing, WORLDSPAN said, "...There are serious questions as to whether the International Air Transportation Fair Competitive Practices Act (IATFCPA) should be used against Iberia since the record in the case does not support the conclusion that American is being competitively disadvantaged. In this case, the proposed retaliatory action is too abrupt and is inconsistent with the purposes of the IATFCPA and DOT's other statutory obligations to promote negotiations rather than retaliation."

WORLDSPAN said it was encouraged by its own recent negotiations with Iberia but concerned that the action proposed by DOT would rule out further progress in those negotiations and deprive WORLDSPAN of a promising opportunity to reach a negotiated solution to the dispute.

"If the DOT goes forward with the action proposed in the Show Cause Order " WORLDSPAN said, "we foresee a serious confrontation which will deal a serious blow to the entire WORLDSPAN effort in Spain and WORLDSPAN's investment in approximately 170 agencies there. Regulatory action...should not be allowed to injure one CRS to the benefit of another or impair competition that has been working and shows promise of improving."

WORLDSPAN also pointed out that a Senate Report on the 1979 amendments to IATFCPA stressed the desirability of governmental negotiations rather than direct action.

"Such action (as granted under IATFCPA)," the report said, "while a vital asset in negotiations, must be applied with great care. Otherwise, a minor infraction could escalate into an intergovernmental confrontation of major proportions."

WORLDSPAN is convinced that if the DOT fully evaluates its options and scope and nature of the proposed relief, it will conclude that given the record in this case, the remedy proposed is not the proper course of action.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Cray Research Inc. (NYSE: CYR) today concluded its previously announced plan to enter the minisupercomputer market by signing a definitive agreement to acquire Supertek Computers

Inc. (Supertek) of Santa Clara, Calif. Supertek designs and manufactures a Cray-compatible minisupercomputer system.

The acquisition is for cash and Cray Research will pay Supertek shareholders a total of $32.5 million.

"The acquisition will significantly accelerate our entry into the minisupercomputer market," said John A. Rollwagen, Cray Research chairman and chief executive officer. "We carefully evaluated our options to either acquire a minisupercomputer company or continue our own internal development of this product line," Rollwagen added. "Our clear conclusion was that this decision to acquire Supertek would get us to market with a minisupercomputer product 12 months earlier. Additionally, Supertek has the only product that is Cray binary-compatible to take advantage of Cray Research's system and application software."

Minisupercomputers are general-purpose scientific computers that are highly capable, but less powerful than supercomputers. Rollwagen explained that a minisupercomputer system is an important element in the company's previously announced network supercomputing strategy. He added that a new division has been created to oversee the operations of Supertek and to integrate it into Cray Research, where it will be a wholly owned subsidiary.

Supertek's headquarters will move from California to Mendota Heights, Minn., and the new minisupercomputer will be manufactured in Chippewa Falls, Wis., where Cray Research manufactures its supercomputers.

Cray Research Inc. designs, manufactures, markets and supports large-scale high-speed computer systems for scientific and engineering applications.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastman Kodak Company (NYSE: EK) representatives testified today before the International Trade Commission that import quotas and tariffs requested by Keystone Camera Products Corporation (AMEX: KYC) are neither necessary nor desirable and that Kodak has a significantly larger U.S. manufacturing presence than Keystone.

In his remarks to the commissioners, William J. Janawitz, manager of Kodak's worldwide camera business, described the company's significant camera manufacturing operations in Rochester, N.Y. These include the design and development of 35 mm and 110 format cameras, annual production of more than 300 million parts for these cameras, quality assurance operations, and packaging operations for nearly all Kodak cameras sold in the U.S. In addition, the company manufactures all of its single-use cameras at company facilities in Rochester.

"Kodak has been able to adjust to the dynamics of the camera market in recent years," Janawitz told the commissioners. "Contrary to Keystone's assertions of injury, we have experienced increased camera sales and a growing contribution from camera production to overall company performance."

Janawitz went on to note that import quotas and tariffs would have a long-term detrimental effect on the U.S. photographic industry. He also pointed out that Polaroid, another domestic camera manufacturer, has filed its opposition to Keystone's request.

"The problem that Keystone has encountered," Janawitz said, "have causes unrelated to imports. Kodak has been able to capitalize on new production development to adjust continuously and successfully to the market's dynamics. Consumers have increasingly demanded cameras offering improved features and picture quality. Kodak has successfully made the appropriate production and organizational changes necessary to keep our U.S. production facilities competitive. Keystone has not."

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The trial on the suit by BMI, the national performing rights organization, against Home Box Office, Inc. and Manhattan Cable Television began today in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York before Judge John Sprizzo.

The BMI suit seeks preliminary and permanent injunctions to prevent the pay cable programmer from using BMI repertoire on the Home Box Office channel without a music license, and asks the court for a declaratory judgment that BMI may proceed with its plan to license both the national cable programmer and local cable system operators, each of whom receive revenues for the use of BMI's repertoire.

There has been extensive pre-trial discovery including depositions and document production since the litigation was renewed by BMI on Feb. 2. BMI's original litigation was filed Dec. 28, 1989, but was put in abeyance for a month in an attempt to reach a negotiated settlement.

BMI, a non-profit-making performing rights organization representing more than 100,000 songwriters, composers and music publishers charged HBO with the unauthorized use of its repertoire including, among other examples, the songs "Helter Skelter" by John Lennon and Paul McCartney and "Sympathy for the Devil" by Rolling Stones Mick Jagger and Keith Richard.

Based on Sprizzo's allotment of trial days, it is expected the trial will be completed by the end of June. A ruling is expected before the end of the summer.

Van Buren further indicated that the examination to be conducted by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency is scheduled to commence next month and the outcome of that review will be communicated to shareholders at the appropriate time.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Norstan Inc. (NASDAQ: NRRD), announced today the results of its fourth quarter and fiscal year ended April 30.

Net sales increased seven percent to $32,059,000 for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 compared to $30,070,000 for the same period a year earlier. Operating income for the fourth quarter of 1990 increased 33 percent to $2,203,000 compared to $1,654,000 for the same period last year. The increase in operating income was primarily due to the increase in net sales and an increase in gross margins from 38.1 percent to 40.3 percent.

For the 12 months ended April 30, 1990, net sales increased nine percent to $115,629,000 compared to $106,118,000 for the same period last year. Operating income increased 41 percent to $6,984,000 compared to $4,948,000 for the same period last year as a result of the increased sales volume and the increase in gross margins from 38.6 percent to 40.2 percent.

Norstan has been advised that New Summit Inc., the company that purchased the assets of Summit Gear Inc., from Norstan in 1987, is in default on certain of its loan covenants with its principal lender.

Due to the timing and uncertainty of this situation, management has chosen to take a conservative position and has established a provision for loss in the fourth quarter of 1990 pending the ultimate resolution of this matter.

The $5,850,000 provision includes Norstan's note receivable and preferred stock investment as well as other costs. While the company has established this reserve, management intends to aggressively pursue all available alternatives in order to maximize its return.

As a result of this non-operating loss of $5,850,000, which is a non-cash charge, the net loss for the fourth quarter was $3,159,000 or $1.04 per share as compared to net income of $1,280,000 or $.43 per share for the same period last year. For the fiscal year ended April 30, 1990, the net loss was $807,000 or $.28 per share, compared with net income of $2,952,000 or $.86 per share for the same period last year.

While the provision resulted in a net loss for the year, fiscal 1990 was a very successful year for Norstan's operating divisions. Had it not been for this non-operating loss, Norstan would have achieved security analysts' projections for net income of $1.10 per share for 1990.

The Central and Eastern Regions both experienced strong operating performances, while the Previously Owned Equipment (POE) Division had another outstanding year. As was announced June 7, 1990, Norstan and its POE Division are currently negotiating with a major supplier to work jointly in the sale of refurbished telecommunications equipment. Management continues to be optimistic on prospects for the future and anticipates continued growth in both sales and earnings.

Norstan Inc., based in Maple Grove, Minn., is a multi-product communications services company that sells, services, installs and supports new and refurbished business telephone systems. The company has 1,200 employees in 21 cities throughout the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Ohio, Kentucky, Arizona and New Mexico.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has selected its construction management team for the Boston Harbor cleanup. MWRA awarded ICF Kaiser Engineers a $119.4 million contract to head the team. Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation, chief consultant to Kaiser, will receive $28 million of that figure. MWRA's June 13 announcement follows:

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority today awarded the largest contract in its history to a team of engineering and professional firms headed by ICF Kaiser Engineers. Stone and Webster of Boston has been designated as chief consultant to Kaiser and will receive approximately $28 million of the $119.4 million contract. The five and one-half-year contract is for construction management services for the $6.1 billion harbor cleanup project now underway at Deer Island and Nut Island in Boston Harbor and Fore River Staging Area in Quincy. The first phase of the cleanup, requiring the construction of piers, transportation facilities and utilities is nearly complete. Construction has also begun on a $70 million sludge fertilizer facility. MWRA has already completed $100 million in improvements to the existing sewage treatment plants and construction of scum removal facilities.

"ICF Kaiser submitted an impressive proposal that will provide the talent and experience needed to manage day-to-day activities on a highly technical, difficult construction project," said Richard D. Fox, who directs the authority's harbor construction program. "We are especially pleased that Boston-based Stone & Webster will be a major player on the Kaiser team and that 17 percent of the work on the construction manager contract will be performed by firms owned and controlled by minorities and women."

The Kaiser team will manage and direct construction of a 1.3 billion gallon-a-day wastewater treatment plant, a nine and one-half-mile-long undersea discharge tunnel, a five-mile-long tunnel connecting Deer Island and Nut Island, and dozens of related sewerage facilities.

ICF Kaiser is well-known locally, having successfully completed the $700 million Southwest Corridor Orange Line Project for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority on time and on budget in 1987.

SEATTLE (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - With the recent arrival in Toronto and Montreal of the first Sea-Land dedicated double-stack train, Sea-Land Service Inc. launched a new service that consolidates all Eastern Canada intact container traffic into a single route.

Formerly, intact containers moved from Tacoma, Wash. on a double-stack train to Chicago where they were transferred to a conventional train for futherance to Toronto and Montreal. Now, intact containers from West Coast ports headed for Eastern Canada will be transported by double-stack train via Chicago and Buffalo.

A significant benefit of the double-stack concept over conventional movement of containers via rail is a smoother ride. Stacking the containers allows for a gentler, even safer journey, and the service has been shown to be extremely cost-efficient.

Transit times for Sea-Land's new service into Eastern Canada are competitive with end-of-the-week arrivals in Toronto and Montreal. Cargo will be available Monday mornings at CN Brampton and CN Monterm Intermodal Terminals in Montreal. Customs brokers will have advance arrival notices so that customs clearance at the terminals can be expedited.

Sea-Land, whose founder launched the world's first container ship in 1956, is known for its innovative transportation programs. In 1980, Sea-Land tested the first double-stack rail cars in a joint project with Southern Pacific Transportation Co. In 1985, Sea-Land commenced regularly scheduled double-stack train service between its terminals in Tacoma and Little Ferry, N.J.

The extension of the double-stack service into Canada reinforces Sea-Land's commitment to the Canadian marketplace to provide a superior quality intermodal service not available elsewhere.

Sea-Land Service Inc., a unit of CSX Corp., Richmond, Va., operates more than 60 container ships and 128,000 containers in U.S. and foreign trade and services 80 ports in 70 countries and territories.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Forest industry leaders commended members of the Senate and House from national forest districts and states for introducing today the National Forest Plan Implementation Act of 1990.

"This act is a good start towards bringing some stability into the management of the national forest system," said Bill Shields, chairman of the American Forest Resource Alliance, headquartered in Washington. "Although the bill does not contain everything needed to provide such stability, it does offer the prospect of providing some certainty to companies and communities dependent on the national forest system for their livelihood."

Shields stated that the forest products industry would very shortly be developing proposals to improve the legislation significantly.

"The proposal is a reaffirmation of the multiple-use approach to national forest management that Congress endorsed in 1976 upon passage of the National Forest Management Act," said John Hampton, chairman of the Northwest Forest Resource Council, headquartered in Portland, Ore. Hampton statead that the act is the next logical step to ensure implementation of forest plans developed under the terms of the 1976 act.

"While a positive step, the act still leaves many questions unanswered," said Mike Flannery, chairman of the Public Timber Council of the National Forest Products Association, headquartered in Washington. Flannery noted, in particular, that the act does not address the current crisis precipitated by the pending listing of the Northern Spotted Owl as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act. Flannery stated that "Congress must act affirmatively to reconcile the requirements of the Endangered Species Act with the management of the national forest system and other priorities for public lands."

Industry leaders from all forest regions have pledged to work with Congress to ensure rapid consideration of this and additional legislative measures needed to bring stability to the national forest situation.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Ameritech (NYSE: AIT) and Bell Atlantic (NYSE: BEL), which recently agreed to pay $2.4 billion to acquire the newly privatized New Zealand telephone company, filed papers today with the United States district court in Washington asking for authority to retain that company's interest in the international traffic between the United States and New Zealand.

Hyde Tucker, president and chief executive officer of Bell Atlantic International, stated that, ''If we don't receive from the court the special authority we've requested, the New Zealand telephone system would have to be reorganized at the cost of millions of dollars to conform to the requirements of the AT&T divestiture decree.''

Tucker also said that the reorganization is not necessary from a purely operational point of view. The AT&T decree, however, bars the divested Bell companies, such as Bell Atlantic, Ameritech and their affiliates, from providing international service to or from the United States.

The reorganization called for by the decree would require that New Zealand cable and satellite facilities used for handling telephone traffic that originates or terminates in the United States be split out and placed in a separate company, to be owned by entities other than Ameritech or Bell Atlantic.

Thomas P. Hester, senior vice president and general counsel of Ameritech, said he believed that Judge Greene, who administers the AT&T divestiture decree, would grant the relief requested.

''Similar relief was previously granted by the court to Pacific Telesis, another of the Bell companies subject to the decree, when Pacific purchased an interest in a foreign overseas cable venture,'' Hester said.

Tucker claimed that the present case presents even a stronger case for relief than the Pacific case. ''Pacific,'' he said, ''invested in a private cable venture that competed directly with U.S. carriers. Here, however, the New Zealand telephone company handles traffic jointly with U.S. carriers. U.S. carriers compete among themselves at the U.S. end and the New Zealand telephone company does not seek authority to enter that competition. It only asks authority to continue to carry its own end of the calls.''

Tucker added that ''these calls represent less that 1/2 of 1 percent of total U.S. international traffic.''

Ameritech and Bell Atlantic announced June 14 that they and two New Zealand companies, Fay Richwhite Holdings Ltd and Freightways Holdings Ltd., will purchase New Zealand's state-owned telephone system for NZ$4.25 billion. The Telecom Corporation of New Zealand is that country's principal supplier of domestic and international telecommunications services, including cellular mobile and directory services.

Immediately after closing of the transaction, Ameritech and Bell Atlantic will together own 100 percent of the company. To meet New Zealand government requirements, they will reduce their combined ownership position in the company to 49.9 percent, with Ameritech and Bell Atlantic each owning 20.95 percent. The consortium's two New Zealand partners will each purchase 5 percent of the shares. The remaining 40.1 percent of the company will be offered on the New Zealand Stock Exchange and in international equity markets.

Ameritech is the Chicago-based parent of Bell companies serving 12 million customers in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin. Other Ameritech companies providing mobile communications, directories, voice messaging and audiotex services.

Bell Atlantic Corp. is the Philadelphia-based parent of telephone companies serving more than 17 million access lines in the mid-Atlantic region of the United States, and companies that provide cellular communications, computer maintenance and financial and leasing services in the U.S. and international markets.

SANTA ANA, CALIF (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Fireplace Manufacturers Inc. (NASDAQ: FPMI) announced today earnings of $433,460 for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990. Net earnings for the prior fiscal year ending March 31, 1989 (as restated) were $352,645. Earnings per share increased from $.09 per share in fiscal year ended 1989 (as restated) to $.12 per share for the year ended March 31, 1990. This increase in earnings is due to increased sales volumes and reduction in interest expense.

Sales for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990, were $26,157,104 compared to $20,377,998, for the same period in 1989 (as restated). Cost of sales as held consistent as compared to the prior year. Cost of sales for both years is 82 percent of sales. Selling, general and administrative costs have increased from $2,881,491 at March 31, 1989 (as restated) to $3,626,094 at March 31, 1990. This increase is due primarily to increased marketing efforts to expand the existing market share.

While preparing its annual consolidated financial statements as of March 31, 1990, and for the fiscal year then ended, Fireplace Manufacturers Inc. (FMI) determined that income tax expense and deferred federal income tax liabilities presented in previously issued consolidated financial statements were significantly understated.

As a result of this error, the provision for income taxes was understated and net earnings were overstated by $65,000 ($.02 per share) for the year ended March 31, 1988 and $172,000 ($.04 per share) for the year ended March 31, 1989.

Fireplace Manufacturers Inc., designs, manufactures and sells factory-built energy efficient metal fireplace systems. The company currently produces wood burning metal fireplaces with refractory lined fireboxes and related chimney flues. Optional features of the fireplaces include the ability to accept natural gas, glass doors, outside air intakes and electrical blowers. The fireplaces are used in single family homes, condominiums, apartments, mobile homes and can be used as part of a wall, in a corner or as a room divider. TOKYO (JUNE 19) UPI - Cuban President Fidel Castro has informally asked Japan to help him arrange a meeting with President Bush in a bid to improve relations between the two Cold War foes, a published report said Wednesday.

The daily Asahi Shimbun, quoting unidentified sources in the government and the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, said Castro asked Japan to act as a mediator, provided both leaders attend the Nov. 16 enthronement of Emperor Akihito in Tokyo.

The newspaper said the Bush administration's reaction has been cool and the president's attendance at the enthronement has not been decided yet. A White House spokesman contacted Tuesday night said he knew nothing of the report and had no comment on it.

The United States and Cuba severed diplomatic relations in 1961, the same year CIA-trained Cuban exiles failed in their Bay of Pigs invasion aimed at ousting Castro's communist government. A U.S. embargo of Cuban exports had begun in 1960.

''It (Castro's request) suggests a major change in the diplomatic stance of Cuba, which has been isolated in the international community along with North Korea, amid East-West detente,'' the newspaper quoted one unnamed Japanese official as saying.

Japan recognized the Castro administration in 1955 and Castro's deputy attended the funeral of Emperor Hirohito in Tokyo in February.

ELIZABETH, NJ (JUNE 20) UPI - A diner owner wants to help billionaire developer and debtor Donald Trump in his hour of need - and has put out a collection jar on his counter.

The jar went out on Sunday, and Ed Mancini said as of noon Tuesday customers had contributed at least $4.50.

Trump owes billions of dollars to banks and bondholders for his Atlantic City casinos, the Plaza Hotel and other properties. Like many debtors, he has been having trouble making his payments.

Customers ''were talking about Trump and how he had to pay $30 million,'' Mancini said. ''So I said, let's take up a collection and mail it to him.'''

Now, local businessmen who saw a news story in the Daily Journal have been coming by, wanting to know how they can help Trump, Mancini said. A go-go bar owner is talking about a ''Donald Trump Night,'' with proceeds to go to the developer.

Mancini, who has been in the restaurant business for 20 years, said he understands that meeting bills and paying the rent can be tough, whether someone owes $100 or $1 million. Many of his customers have been dropping a few cents into the plastic jug with a hand-lettered sign - ''Donald Trump fund.''

He said the money will eventually go to Trump, who can contribute it to ''another charity'' or put it towards his debts.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The House ethics committee is preparing to override the objections of Republicans who favor strong punishment against Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., and issue a mild rebuke for his relationship with a male prostitute, The Washington Post reported Wednesday.

The newspaper, quoting two unidentified members of the ethics panel, said as many as three of the committee's Republicans could vote against the decision to send Frank a letter reproving his conduct. The panel next meets on Tuesday.

A split vote would represent a break with tradition on the 12-member panel which is divided evenly between Democrats and Republicans. The members of the ethics committee usually make their decisions unanimously, but only a majority vote is necessary for rulings in ethics cases.

In August The Washington Times disclosed Frank's 18-month relationship with former prostitute Stephen Gobie. Frank, who is homosexual, said he hired Gobie as a personal aide and driver and paid him with his own money. Frank has insisted he fired Gobie upon learning he was using the congressman's Capitol Hill apartment to operate a prostitution business.

The ethics committee is expected to admonish Frank by letter for two issues related to his relationship with Gobie and his official position as a member of Congress, the Post said. The issues involve Frank's fixing traffic tickets for Gobie and writing letters on congressional letterhead to court officials who were supervising Gobie's probation.

Rep. John Myers, R-Ind., the ranking Republican on the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, has been the most vigorous panel member in pushing for a harsher sanction against Frank. He is expected to vote against a letter of reproval, and he may be joined by Reps. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., and Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, the Post said.

A committee decision has been delayed for several weeks because some members have insisted Frank receive a severe punishment. Some members have held out for a recommendation for a reprimand, a penalty that would require a vote by the full House.

The committee's action may not necessarily be the end of the matter for the House. Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., has said he will try to force the House to vote on a resolution to expel Frank, a five-term congressman.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 20) UPI - The Manila city council unanimously approved a bill banning smoking in public buildings and passenger buses, labeling cigarettes a health hazard and a nuisance, officials said Wednesday.

The law passed Tuesday will take effect one month after it is signed by Mayor Gemiliano Lopez in order to allow time for a public information campaign, said Pete de Jesus, president of the 35-member council.

The ordinance bans smoking in offices, session halls, cinemas, auditoriums bars, restaurants, cocktail, lounges, factories, retail stores, school campuses, passenger vehicles and other locations.

Owners of private businesses must provide smoking areas in their establishments, under the bill.

Violators will receive a $14 fine or two days in prison.

''It's a health hazard and a nuisance to the non-smoking public,'' de Jesus said. He said the ban will lessen air pollution brought about by the thousands of smoke-belching passenger jeeps that ply the capital daily.

The city council passed a smoking ban law in the 1960s but it has never been seriously implemented. De Jesus said city officials will work with police authorities to implement the new measure more strictly.

Last year, the council of suburban Quezon City passed an anti-smoking bill and arrested hundreds of violators during the first few days, but efforts to implement the ordinance have lost steam and it is now being ignored.

Manila and Quezon City are among four chartered cities and 13 towns comprising the national capital region which has a population of 8 million.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (JUNE 20) UPI - Rebels of the National Patriotic Front fought with government troops at Careysburg, 24 miles northeast of the capital, government officials said.

It was the rebels' closest approach to Monrovia in the six months since their leader Charles Taylor launched a bloody civil war to topple his arch-enemy, President Samuel Doe.

But Western military officials in Liberia said it was unclear Tuesday whether a full-scale assault on Careysburg was in progress or whether fighting was scattered. Reporters attempting to reach the town were turned back at a government roadblock.

A Ministry of Information spokesman said he was aware of a few refugees from Careysburg heading to Monrovia, where a siege mentality has prevailed since the rebels moved into the Bridgestone-Firestone rubber plantation three weeks ago, 35 miles from the city.

Government soldiers at checkpoints on the outskirts of the capital spoke of a major rebel assault on Careysburg but admitted they had not witnessed the assault.

Monday, Taylor told the British Broadcasting Corp. he would not observe a cease-fire ahead of a second round of peace talks between his side and the government slated for Monday.

No cease-fire was agreed at the first round, which ended Saturday in neighboring Sierra Leone. But negotiators issued a statement calling on the two sides to keep military activity to a minimum.

Western military specialists, who asked not to be identified, predicted over the weekend that impatience and lack of food in the rebel ranks would compel Taylor to keep fighting, despite a reportedly congenial atmosphere at the peace talks.

Government officials familiar with the talks but who spoke on condition they not be named, confirmed that both sides were in broad agreement on the need for greater political diversity in Liberia, free elections soon and an end to tribal rivalries.

''The only thing that needs resolving is the issue of the president's resignation,'' said one official.

Taylor has made clear that only the immediate departure of Doe will satisfy him, and that the president's pledge 10 days ago not to stand for re-election in a promised 1991 poll is an unacceptable substitute.

Doe, who seized power in a violent 1980 coup, has refused to resign and accused the United States, which poured aid into Liberia in the early 1980s, of deserting him.

Most of his Cabinet had by Tuesday also deserted him, and the president was expected to announce the sacking of all those government ministers no longer at their posts.

More than 20 ministers, senior officials and military top brass are believed to have abandoned the country since the start of June. These included the entire ranking staff of the Finance Ministry, from minister Emmanuel Shaw on down.

(JUNE 20) UPI - A banking source says Donald Trump's leading bank creditors, meeting in New York, are nearing an accord on reviving a 60-Million-dollar bailout package for the debt-burdened developer. The source says an agreement could be reached overnight. For three weeks, the cash-strapped dealmaker has been scrambling to refinance the bank debt he owes on the Trump Shuttle, the Plaza Hotel, the Grand Hyatt Hotel and other holdings.

Thunderstorms brought heavy rains, hail and at least three funnel clouds to the Northeast Tuesday. Severe thunderstorms and hail forced Massachusetts State Police to close a 10-mile stretch of the Turnpike for about one hour Tuesday. Two funnel clouds were reported in the area. In New York, a funnel cloud was sighted near Stewart International Airport in Newburgh. Golf ball-sized hail pelted other parts of upstate New York.

MICHIGAN CITY, IN (JUNE 20) UPI - About 150 people roamed the city's east side, shooting at police and throwing rocks at passing cars in unrest officials linked to a hit-and-run accident that killed a teenager, authorities said.

Police arrested a dozen people and blocked off up to nine blocks of Michigan Boulevard for most of Tuesday night as the area around a public housing project was rocked by a second straight night of sporadic violence.

Police Capt. James Mason said ''some'' minor injuries were reported late

Tuesday, and windshields were broken in an unspecified number of cars. Shots were fired at police but no officers were injured, he said.

Mason said police had no immediate estimate on property damage.

Mayor Robert Behler Jr. said the incidents might have been sparked by a hit-and-run accident Monday night in the area that caused the death of a teenager. The driver has not been found, police said.

Mason said some of the cars hit by rocks and bottles were driven by blacks and that black residents came out of their homes armed to protect themselves before being forced back inside by police.

''There are no legitimate reasons'' for the violence, Mason said. ''The hit-and-run accident resulted in a young man's death, so there was a lot of tension over that. (Those involved in the accident) all were black.''

While conflicts between whites and blacks were witnessed Tuesday night, Behler and the police refused to characterize the violence in the mostly black neighborhood as race-related.

Mason said 12 people were arrested on various charges Tuesday night as the full Michigan City Police Department force and some LaPorte County Sheriff's deputies roamed through the violence-stricken area. Mason said specific charges had not been filed.

Police rolled back their force by about 11 p.m., although Mason said authorities were braced for the possibility of more violence in the neighborhood Wednesday night.

''We are expecting it to settle down,'' Mason said. ''(The situation) has settled down somewhat. (But) we can't predict what's going to happen.''

The area surrounding the Harborside Homes housing project also was beset by violence last summer, when roaming bands of youths indiscriminately caused property damage in the area.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (JUNE 20) UPI - Despite official disavowal of last week's vigilante attacks by miners, evidence suggests the government tacitly approved of the violence against opposition parties and offered extensive logistical support.

Several witnesses also have alleged the attacks were directed by plainclothes police using tactics similar to those of the outlawed Securitate, former dictator Nicolae Ceausescu's dreaded secret police.

The witness accounts and other evidence appears to support opposition claims of a sharp turn toward authoritarianism in Romania. The trend follows a period, after Ceausescu's ouster and execution, in which democracy seemed to gain a foothold.

The miners' ability to rampage unhindered through the streets of Bucharest attacking passersby indiscriminately and ransacking the headquarters of opposition political parties, prompted the United States and some of its allies to withhold consideration of financial and other aid to the new Romanian government, which was elected May 20.

''We are in full terror,'' said Sorin Botez, spokesman for the opposition National Liberal Party, after an estimated 10,000 coal miners swarmed into Bucharest Thursday and began beating opposition supporters and ransacking their homes and offices.

The miners traveled to the capital by train after President-elect Ion Iliescu called on workers to assist police in crushing anti-government violence.

Interim Prime Minister Petre Roman repeatedly has denied his government was responsible for the miners' 36-hour terror spree that essentially shut down the opposition in Bucharest.

Roman told reporters that Iliescu did not specifically invite the miners, but instead appealed generally to workers to defend his government. Roman said the ruling National Salvation Front did not condone the destruction of opposition party offices or the assaults on unarmed people.

''The miners came on their own,'' Roman told the news conference Saturday. ''They were not asked by the government. We only guided them.''

But witness accounts and other evidence suggest otherwise:

-The government supplied food and water to the miners during their 36-hour stay, housed them overnight in two large sport halls and provided transportation for them. The government has admitted this support.

-Iliescu personally thanked the miners for their help at a rally Friday before they returned home.

-Although they live about 250 miles from Bucharest, the miners quickly found and ransacked the houses of several opposition leaders, including that of National Peasant Party chief Ion Ratiu, who lives in a residential section about a mile from the center of Bucharest.

-The miners were able to single out the homes of Gypsy families for apparently racially motivated attacks in three ethnically mixed neighborhoods.

''They came straight here and stopped their buses right in front of our courtyard,'' said Radu Constantin, describing an attack on his house Friday. Constantin said miners beat him.

-The miners appeared to be led by plainclothes police.

Constantin said a man who barked orders in the miners' attack on his house wore clean work clothes and had ''clean fingernails,'' while the other assailants were covered with coal dust.

-After ransacking the headquarters of the opposition National Liberal and Peasant parties Thursday, the miners continued to occupy the buildings for the next 24 hours, systematically destroying virtually every piece of equipment and furniture.

-Police were deployed at the two political party offices Friday but made no attempt to remove the miners or halt the destruction.

-Food was delivered to the miners while they were inside the party buildings.

Saturday, large crates of uneaten bread, pork bones and and soda bottles lay amid the other debris at the office of the National Peasant Party.

-The miners located and opened a large safe hidden inside a plaster-covered wall in the Peasant Party office.

Party officials said they did not know the safe existed. Roman quoted miners Saturday as saying they had found guns, counterfeiting equipment and other contraband in opposition party buildings.

York City Wednesday morning for a three-day visit that'll kick off his U-S tour. He'll be officially welcomed to the ''Big Apple'' with an afternoon ticker-tape parade up Broadway. On Tuesday, Mandela wrapped up the Canadian leg of his six-week, 13-nation tour by addressing a rally in downtown Montreal.

An estimated 500 people tied up downtown traffic in San Francisco Tuesday night with a noisy march to protest U-S immigration policies that deny entry to people carrying the AIDS virus. At least eight people were arrested. The protesters- many with the activist group ACT-UP- promise bigger demonstrations as the Sixth International Conference on AIDS gets under way Wednesday.

A former neighbor of James Pough says the Jacksonville, Florida, man always told her he did NOT want to die alone... that he was going to take someone with him. Police say Pough gunned down eight people and wounded five others at an auto loan office Monday before killing himself. Pough began his bloody rampage early Sunday killing two people and wounding two more. Witnesses also link him to several weekend robberies.

The lawyer for a Pennsylvania boy says the state Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether the 11-year-old may be tried as an adult in the shooting death of a playmate. In an unusual move, the court agreed to review a lower court decision to try Cameron Kocher as an adult instead of a juvenile. Kocher is charged in the March 1989 slaying of seven-year-old Jessica Carr. Pretrial testimony revealed Kocher- who was nine at the time- was mad at Carr for bragging she was a better Nintendo player.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (JUNE 20) UPI - Local officials still reeling from the two-day rampage by a convicted felon that ended with the deaths of eight people in a loan office are calling for tighter gun laws.

James Edward Pough, 42, began his shooting spree by killing a prostitute and her pimp Sunday and then wounding two teenagers 10 minutes later, Duval County Sheriff James McMillan said Tuesday.

The next day Pough entered the General Motors Acceptance Corp. auto finance office and sprayed it with gunfire from a .30-caliber semi-automatic rifle, killing eight people and wounding five others before committing suicide.

While marching through the office, picking off workers, Pough carried a .38-caliber revolver he legally licensed in 1976 despite a felony conviction for aggravated assault in 1971, McMillan said.

Under Florida law, that permit was properly issued because a judge expunged

Pough's 1971 conviction after he finished a five-year probation period.

''It's time to clean up some loopholes,'' McMillan said. ''It points up the difficulty of legislating guns out of the hands of people.''

Mayor Tommy Hazouri called for tougher state and federal gun control laws. ''The safety our our community is our primary concern,'' he said. ''How many messages do we have to send to Congress? How many messages do we have to send to our state Legislature?''

Police said they did not know whether Pough had permits for the semi-automatic rifle he used in the attack or a 9mm semi-automatic pistol found in the car he drove to the GMAC office.

A friend, meanwhile, described Pough, whose nickname was ''Pop,'' as a man who was always willing to help, but was capable of violence if cheated. ''Anything he could do for you he'd do, but don't try to cross him - no telling what he'd do,'' said Vanessa Gadsden, 35, who was Pough's neighbor until she was 19.

Gadsden, who visited her old neighborhood often, said Pough had always said he did not want to die alone. ''He always said when he leaves this world, he was going to take someone with him,'' she said.

Pough shot and killed prostitute Doretta Elaine Drake, 30, and her pimp, Louis Carl Bacon, 39, Sunday because he believed he had been cheated in a sex deal, McMillan said. Ten minutes later, he shot Christopher Jerome Shorter, 18, and Lynette Patrice Johnson, 17, after pretending to need directions. These shootings occurred near Pough's home.

''The violence continued - the rampage that he started in the wee hours Sunday morning before he went out to GMAC,'' McMillan said, adding witnesses linked Pough to several weekend robberies.

Police and court files showed that Pough had a history of arrests and violent behavior, including the assault conviction in 1971. In March, a judge issued an injunction barring the Jacksonville man from contacting his wife, who feared for her safety.

Pough's criminal record dates to 1965, when he was arrested twice for vagrancy. An attempted robbery charge was filed against him in April 1966, and an assault with intent to murder charge was filed in May 1966 but it was unclear whether he was convicted, sheriff's spokesman Steve Weintraub said.

Pough paid a $10 fine on a gambling charge in 1968, and later that same year paid a $75 fine for displaying a knife in a threatening manner, police said.

The 1971 assault charge stemmed from the shooting death of David Lee Pender outside a nightclub after the victim insulted Pough's girlfriend, records show. Pough pleaded guilty.

On March 2, Pough's wife, Theresa, filed a court petition seeking protection from her husband, whom she accused of throwing a glass at her in December and trying to hurt her. A Circuit Court judge granted the injunction, barring Pough from contacting his wife for a year.

The GMAC attack evidently was triggered by the repossession of Pough's car.

The GMAC office was closed this week so blood-stained carpets and shattered windows could be replaced. Company officials said employees also needed time away from the scene of the carnage.

''We're just trying to gather our thoughts and get reorganized,'' GMAC spokesman Jerry Robbins said.

The company was providing crisis counseling upon request for the 86 employees who were in the office Monday, Robbins said. ''The welfare of our employees and our families is paramount to us,'' he said.

#90171u0349 06/20/1990 ~United Press International

(JUNE 20) UPI - Despite a shortage of major-league experience, Boston Red Sox pitcher Dana Kiecker credits his time down on the farm with building his confident attitude.

The 29-year-old rookie, who has had a minor league career dating back to 1983, showed that attitude Tuesday night in Boston's 4-2 win over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The right-hander scattered three singles over 8 1-3 innings and gave up just a pair of unearned runs.

Kiecker, 2-3, struck out four and walked two.

Rob Murphy struck out the final two batters for his third save.

With the win, Boston snapped Toronto's six-game winning streak and moved the Red Sox within a game of their American League East-leading opponents.

''If anything, I picked up a lot of confidence and experience there,'' Kiecker said. ''I pitched over 1,000 innings down there, so I've seen just about every situation you can see.''

Kiecker, who entered the 1990 baseball season with no major-league service also showed his confidence when Boston Manager Joe Morgan replaced him.

''All I can tell you is that when I took Kiecker out I said to him, 'That's the best game you pitched in your life,''' Morgan said. ''He said to me, 'No, I'm going to pitch a no-hitter one day.'''

Although Kiecker was shaky in the first two innings, he settled by retiring the next 15 batters.

''If you ask the guys over in the other clubhouse, they're probably kicking themselves,'' Kiecker said. ''I had quite a bit of difficulty establishing my number two and number three pitches early, which are my slider and curve.''

A pair of errors by first baseman Carlos Quintana led to another unearned run in the seventh.

The Blue Jay who had most reason to kick himself was reliever Duane Ward, 1-3, who replaced John Cerutti to start the ninth and gave up a pair of runs after the score was tied 2-2.

Ward gave up a leadoff walk to Dwight Evans, and Burks followed with a triple just beyond the grasp of diving center fielder Mookie Wilson before scoring on a groundout by Tony Pena.

''I thought it was a good pitch that he hit off the fists,'' said Ward, who prior to the game had blown five save opportunities, including three when Cerutti was the starter. ''The ball kept tailing, there was nothing we could do.''

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland scalped Baltimore 5-4, Detroit edged Oakland 7-6, California topped Chicago 5-3, Texas shaded Minnesota 5-4, Kansas City clipped Seattle 2-1 and New York downed Milwaukee 5-1.

In the NL, it was: New York 6, St. Louis 0; Cincinnati 4, Atlanta 2, first game; Atlanta 3, Cincinnati 0, second game; Chicago 2, Montreal 1; Philadelphia 2, Pittsburgh 1, 10 innings; San Diego 4, San Francisco 3; and Los Angeles 5, Houston 1.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Indians 5, Orioles 4

At Cleveland, Sandy Alomar singled home Felix Fermin in the eighth inning to extend the Indians' winning streak to four games. Alomar's hit made a loser of Gregg Olson, 3-1, who entered the game with a 0.50 ERA. Doug Jones got the victory to push his record to 2-2.

Tigers 7, Athletics 6

At Detroit, Cecil Fielder's two-run bases-loaded single in the fourth proved to be the difference. Fielder's hit made a loser of Dave Stewart, who fell to 9-5. Stewart has now lost four of his last five decisions. Paul Gibson, 2-1, picked up the win in relief of Frank Tanana.

Angels 5, White Sox 3

At Chicago, Donnie Hill and Devon White each hit two-run doubles in the sixth inning to lift California past the White Sox, losers of five straight. Kirk McCaskill improved to 5-3. Mark Eichhorn notched his 13th save. Melido Perez, 6-6, lost his second start in four days.

Rangers 5, Twins 4

At Arlington, Texas, Pete Incaviglia's solo home run in the seventh inning snapped a tie, boosting the Rangers. Minnesota has lost 11 of its last 12 games. Incaviglia's 411-foot solo shot made a loser of reliever John Candelaria, 7-3. Brad Arnsberg, 2-1, won in relief of Mike Jeffcoat.

Royals 2, Mariners 1

At Kansas City, Jim Eisenreich and Kevin Seitzer drove in runs to lead the Royals to their fifth victory in six games. Steve Farr, 5-3, picked up the win and Jeff Montgomery, threw the ninth to earn his fifth save. Russ Swan 1-1, took the loss.

Yankees 5, Brewers 1

At Milwaukee, Chuck Cary scattered five hits over six scoreless innings and Mel Hall blasted a two-run homer to pace New York and snap a four game losing skid. Cary improved to 4-2. Chris Bosio, 4-5, allowed four runs on nine hits in eight innings.

(JUNE 20) UPI - On a night when Spike Owen established a National League record, Shawn Boskie was just trying to establish himself.

Owen played in his 61st consecutive game without committing an error, breaking the record set by Kevin Elster of the Mets in 1988, but it was Boskie, the Chicago Cubs' rookie pitcher, who stole the spotlight Tuesday night in a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Expos at Olympic Stadium.

Boskie, 2-3, scattered five hits over 6 2-3 innings, walked one and struck out four. He retired the first 13 batters he faced. But it was his sixth-inning pitch that sailed close to Andres Galarraga's head that put his stamp on the game.

Both benches emptied, but no punches were thrown.

''I am showing that I won't be intiminated,'' said Boskie, a veteran of only six major league starts. ''I want to be the one that intiminates people. That is what I did with Galarraga. I didn't throw at him but I didn't want him to make me lose my concentration either. It was just a wild pitch. That's all it was.''

''Boskie wasn't sure he was ready for the majors when we brought him up (from Triple-A Iowa),'' said Cubs Manager Don Zimmer. ''But after two starts I told him he was ready and and now he has shown that he can pitch in the majors.''

''People think that because this is my first year in the majors they can fluster me,'' Boskie said. ''I don't think that I need a full season to show I am sucessful.''

Owen, on the other hand, needed 61 games to wipe out the memory of his poor fielding performance in the 1986 World Series in which he made five errors at short for the Boston Red Sox. The record-setting game, however, will never make the Owen highlight film - he didn't handle a single ground ball.

''I was more excited last night when I tied the record because we won that game,'' Owen said. ''Tonight I established the record but it was a downer because we lost by one run.''

Paul Assenmacher pitched 1 1-3 innings of hitless relief before Les Lancaster hurled the ninth inning, allowing Montreal's only run, for his fourth save.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning. With one out, starter and loser Mark Gardner, 3-3, walked Ryne Sandberg, who stole second one out later. Former Expo Andre Dawson looped a double into shallow left-field, scoring Sandberg.

Gardner, 3-3, pitched seven innings, allowing a run, five hits and one walk. He struck out seven.

''Both Gardner and Boskie pitched well. Both were super,'' said Buck Rogers, manager of the Expos. ''We had our chances but always hit the ball at somebody.''

Chicago went up 2-0 in the ninth when Sandberg led off with his 19th homer of the year, off reliever Bill Sampen.

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday: Cincinnati split a double-header with Atlanta, winning the opener 4-2, dropping the second 3-0, New York blanked St. Louis 6-0, Philadelphia edged Pittsburgh 2-1 in 10 innings, Los Angeles downed Houston 5-1 and San Diego topped San Francisco 4-3.

In the American League it was: Boston 4, Toronto 2; Cleveland 5, Baltimore 4; Oakland 7, Detroit 6; California 5, Chicago 3; Texas 5, Minnesota 4; Kansas City 2, Seattle 1; and New York 5, Milwaukee 1.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Reds 4, Braves 2 (1st game)
Braves 3, Reds 0 (2nd game)

At Atlanta, Charlie Leibrandt, 2-0, hurled a six-hitter to notch his first shutout and give the Braves a split of their twi-night doubleheader. Rick Mahler, 1-2, took the loss. The win snapped Atlanta's six-game losing streak and the Reds' six-game winning streak. The Reds rallied for three runs in the ninth inning to capture the opener. Reliever Rick Luecken, 0-1 took the loss. Norm Charlton, 5-1, got the win. Randy Myers earned his 13th save.

Mets 6, Cardinals 0

At New York, David Cone, 3-4, pitched a four-hit shutout and Kevin McReynolds, Orlando Mercado, and Howard Johnson blasted solo home runs to power the Mets. John Tudor, 5-3, took the loss.

Phillies 2, Pirates 1, 10 innings

At Philadelphia, Dickie Thon singled home John Kruk from second base with two outs in the 10th inning to lift the Phillies and make a loser of Bill Landrum, 2-1. Don Carman, 4-0, picked up the win. Pittsburgh starter Bob Walk had to leave the game with a strained right groin.

Dodgers 5, Astros 1

At Los Angeles, the Dodgers used four unearned fourth-inning runs to send Houston to its fifth straight loss. The Astros, who own the major leagues' worst road record (9-24), tied a club record with their 11th straight road loss. Fernando Valenzuela, 5-5, allowed four hits over seven innings for the win. Mike Scott, 4-7, took the loss.

Padres 4, Giants 3

At San Francisco, Roberto Alomar went 3 for 3 and drove in a run to help San Diego snap the Giants' nine-game winning streak. It was only the Giants' second loss in the last 18 games and their second in June. Bruce Hurst, 4-6, picked up the win. Craig Lefferts notched his 10th save. Francisco Oliveras, 0-1, was the loser.

MOSCOW (JUNE 20) UPI - Hard-line Communist Party conservatives, in a wave of criticism that drowned out President Mikhail Gorbachev's vigorous defense of his reform policies, lamented Moscow's shrinking influence internationally and called for the Soviet leader's resignation.

The face-off Tuesday at a conference of communists of the Russian republic which is to form for the first time a republican branch of the party, is likely to continue at next month's crucial 28th Communist Party Congress.

Gorbachev is likely to face a double-barreled attack from left and right at the congress in early July, where more than 5,000 communists will struggle over whether to adapt to democracy or fight it.

While Gorbachev received only tepid applause for his attack Tuesday on those ''who dogmatically reject perestroika,'' speaker Ivan Osadchii was interrupted with applause at least five times during his call for restoration of the Communist Party to its former greatness.

Gorbachev warmed to his theme by issuing the most forceful direct attack of his five-year rule against the policies of Josef Stalin, whose name is a rallying cry for conservatives yearning for the order the dictator instilled by his rule of fear and mass arrests.

Gorbachev warned the Russian communists not to use the autonomy of the new republican party, whose formation he initially opposed, to attack perestroika.

''We have to say unambiguously, without any qualifications or compromise, that the Communist Party of the Soviet Union rejects the ideology and practices of Stalinism, which trampled on the spiritual and moral ideals of socialism,'' Gorbachev said.

He said conservative forces were ''counting on turning the Communist Party of Russia against perestroika.''

But speaker Osadchii, capturing the mood of the 2,744 delegates, blamed Gorbachev and his policies for crippling the party that once ruled the nation with an iron hand.

''The party is in the grip of a crisis. It is losing more and more of its fighting spirit, surrendering its position without a fight and losing the role of the political vanguard for the Soviet people,'' said Osadchii, who headed the committee that prepared the conference.

He said the party leadership, whose head is Gorbachev as general secretary has pursued ''a very contradictory and at times unpredictable policy.''

Applause cascaded down on Osadchii after the accusation, while Gorbachev watched along with Russian Republic President Boris Yeltsin and a glum-looking Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov.

Aleksandr Melnikov, a party leader from Siberia, demanded the resignation of Gorbachev along with the ruling Politburo and the party's Central Committee.

He warned Gorbachev against ''sliding toward a personality cult,'' employing a phrase with explosive connotations generally used to refer to Stalin's dictatorial reign.

Albert Makashov, an army major general, slammed party leaders for letting critics of the military run amok and pulling Soviet forces out of Eastern Europe.

''Thanks to the so-called victories of our diplomacy our forces are being driven without a fight from the countries we freed from fascism,'' Makashov said.

The storm of conservative criticism against Gorbachev that erupted Tuesday had been brewing since February, when he convinced the Communist Party's Central Committee to vote for a multi-party system and give up its monopoly on power.

Gorbachev then went on in March to create an executive presidency, had himself elected to the post by the Congress of People's Deputies and formed a 16-member Presidential Council, relegating the once-dominant Communist Party Politburo into the background as a policy-making organ.

In addition, the Communist Party is experiencing mass defections. A total of 130,000 communists have turned in their party cards this year, a six-month figure equal to all of last year's defections.

Meanwhile, the Lithuanian, Estonian, and Latvian communists have split from the Soviet parent to form independent republican parties.

And factions are forming in the Soviet party itself, discomfiting conservatives used to following a single line set at the top.

The Democratic Platform group has threatened to split away if the communists do not change their name, renounce the goal of communism, dismantle their organizations in the KGB and the army, and give up the patronage system, which reserves the choicest jobs for communists.

The Democratic Platform, which counts Yeltsin among its leaders, may walk out of the Congress if its demands are not met. Conservatives will pin their hopes on arch Politburo conservative Yegor Ligachev, an opponent of market reforms and a possible leader of the new Russian Communist Party.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 20) UPI - If Premier Marian Calfa accepts an offer to stay on and form the country's new government, the popular former communist would have until July to present a new leadership to Parliament.

President Vaclav Havel was expected Wednesday to extend an offer for Calfa to put together the next government. Should Calfa accept, the ex-communist would have the task of selecting Cabinet members and a devising general program to present the new Federal Assembly, or Parliament, in early July.

The new government would include a deputy premiership for the defiant Slovak-based Christian Democratic Movement, and would form a broad anti-communist coalition that would dominate Parliament. The Communist Party ruled alone for 42 years until it was toppled by November's Velvet Revolution.

Havel and Calfa met a week ago and the president asked him if he would remain as premier. Havel spokesman Michael Zantovsky said Calfa ''didn't say no'' to the request.

The Slovak-born Calfa, who became prime minister in December, was a top Communist Party member and an adviser to the present Communist Party chairman, Ladislav Adamec. Under the previous communist regime, Calfa was a leader of the 1989 crackdown on dissident underground publications.

Calfa left the party in January, and by all accounts has become a model prime minister. He has maintained a difficult consensus among a fractious government, and managed to push the major elements of a free-market economic reform through the government.

He has Havel's full confidence and consistently rates among the most popular Slovak politicians, alongside 1968 ''Prague Spring'' leader Alexander Dubcek, whose own reform movement was crushed 22 years ago by Warsaw Pact tanks.

A spokeswoman for Civic Forum, the pro-democracy coalition that finished first in the elections June 8-9, told United Press International that Civic Forum's Slovak sister organization, Public Against Violence, had offered the CDM a deputy prime minister post.

''We would like them to really participate in the federal government as representatives of a very strong Slovak party,'' said Civic Forum spokeswoman Jana Ryslinkova, referring to the Christian Democrats.

Havel met Tuesday evening in Prague Castle with representatives of Civic Forum and PAV to determine the final makeup of the government.

''If they agree (Tuesday) on the principal names, there is no reason not to have a new government by (Wednesday) afternoon,'' Ryslinkova told UPI.

In the parliamentary elections, the first multi-party balloting in 44 years, Civic Forum and PAV together took 170 of the 300 seats in the two houses of the Federal Assembly.

But they seek broader support to counter the second-place Communist Party, which won 47 seats, and to pass essential economic and constitutional reforms, which require a three-fifths majority vote for approval.

Throughout last week, the CDM - and its ally in the Czech lands, the People's Party - had refused to participate in the government, saying it did not want to be a weak coalition partner. The Christian Democrats came in third nationwide, winning only 20 seats in the federal Parliament. CDM chairman and outgoing Deputy Prime Minister Jan Carnogursky would not serve in the new government, according to Ryslinkova.

Sources close to Christian Democrat leaders indicate the CDM's change of heart came at a meeting Sunday in which the membership opposed the position of the party's leaders.

MELVILLE, NY (JUNE 20) UPI - Hearings into the crash of an Avianca Airlines jetliner that killed 73 people in January may again focus attention on air traffic control problems afflicting the metropolitan area.

The hearings were set to begin Wednesday, and on Tuesday, the Federal Aviation Administration released tapes of communications between air traffic controllers, the Avianca crew and other flights to set the stage for the National Transportation Safety Board hearings.

The hearings will last two to three days, according to NTSB spokesman Michael Benson.

Eighteen witnesses had been lined up, including air traffic controllers who handled the flight, FAA inspectors and officials from Avianca. Evidence gathered in the hearings will contribute to the NTSB's report, due late this year, on the ''probable cause'' of the crash.

Despite facing a dire fuel shortage, the flight crew of the Avianca jet did not ask air traffic controllers for landing priority until two engines stalled about two minutes before impact, audio tapes released Tuesday show.

The FAA released transcripts of the cockpit voice recordings in March.

Avianca Flight 52, bound for New York from Bogota, Colombia, with a stop in Medellin, crashed in Cove Neck, N.Y., after apparently running out of fuel on its second approach to New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Of the 158 people aboard, 73 were killed, including the three cockpit members, and 82 were seriously injured.

The tapes revealed that flight crews from other planes being directed into the airport during the treacherous conditions on Jan. 25 had informed air traffic controllers they were running out of fuel and were directed to safe landings. For example, the crew from an American airlines flight told controllers, ''We got enough fuel for the approach and landing and that's it.''

But the Avianca flight crew, as also revealed in the cockpit voice recordings, never specifically mentioned a fuel ''emergency'' nor communicated the gravity of their fuel situation to air traffic controllers even though members of the flight crew discussed the fuel situation among themselves.

While the flight crew told a series of different controllers that the plane was running low on fuel, it was not until 9:32 p.m. that first officer Mauricio Klotz told controllers at the Terminal Radar Approach Control Facility (TRACON), which guides air traffic between the three New York airports: ''We just, ah, lost two engines and we need priority, please.''

At that point, controllers gave the crew new instructions and received the response, ''roger,'' from Klotz. But the plane went down in a wooded area of Long Island at 9:34 p.m., with controllers noting they had lost radar contact about one minute later.

Captain Laureano Cariedes, navigating with a strong tail wind and dangerous wind shears, missed his first approach. About eight minutes before the crash, a controller gave instructions for a second approach, saying, ''I'm going to bring you about 15 miles northeast and then turn you back on for the approach. Is that fine with you and your fuel?''

Klotz resonded, ''I guess so. Thank you very much.''

EAST MORICHES, NY (JUNE 20) UPI - A police helicopter flashed its white landing lights to alert an oncoming commuter train of a disabled car on the tracks, averting an accident, Suffolk County police said Wednesday.

A spokesman for police said the incident occurred at 7:20 p.m. Tuesday at North Paquatuck Avenue and the Long Island Rail Road tracks.

A police helicopter piloted by Officer Steve Wagner was flying in the East Moriches area, helping Fifth Precinct police search for suspects in a burglary in the area.

When a report of a car stuck on the tracks was dispatched, Wagner flew to the site and saw both the car and an oncoming train apparently unaware of the problem ahead, the spokesman said.

Wagner hovered over the tracks and was able to make the engineer aware of the problem by flashing his landing lights, the spokesman said.

The vehicle was removed and it was discovered it had been stolen from the earlier burglary, and apparently used by the suspects, the spokesman said.

The vehicle was impounded and the investigation continued. It was not known where the commuter train was heading, or how many people were aboard.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - John Vento rounded up a gang of white teens and then watched in disbelief as one of them shot a 16-year-old black youth, a police detective testified at the latest Bensonhurst racial slaying trial.

Detective John Griffin, testifying Tuesday in Vento's murder trial in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn, said he spoke to Vento over the phone last September after the 21-year-old had agreed to cooperate with prosecutors investigating the death of Yusuf Hawkins.

Vento later reneged on the deal and was charged with murder.

His trial was scheduled to resume Wednesday.

The third man to be tried for the Hawkins slaying, Vento said he ''called for some other guys to help me'' when he heard that a group of blacks and Hispanics were supposedly coming to the neighborhood for a fight, Griffin said.

Vento said he was ''in the middle'' of the group of bat-wielding whites when Joseph Fama, who has been convicted of murder in the slaying, stepped from the crowd, the detective testified.

''We ran around the corner and the kids were there ..., '' said Griffin, quoting Vento from his notes. ''We surrounded them. ... Then Joey just shot him ... I didn't know he had a gun. I heard him say something, to Joe Serrano, when we were running towards 69th (Street), like I wanna shoot one of them. I didn't ... believe what he did.''

Vento said he changed his shirt after the incident because ''I knew I was in trouble,'' and fled upstate the next day.

Prosecutor Pamela Hayes said the testimony proves Vento was actively involved in the attack, but it did not support the state's contention that Vento knew Fama had a gun.

Earlier Tuesday, Judge Thaddeus Owens refused to grant a motion by Vento's attorney to suppress his client's grand jury testimony admitting he knew someone was carrying a gun.

Hayes, at a hearing with the jury not present, read a section of the grand jury testimony quoting John Vento as saying, ''I don't know what was said, I just know there was a gun on the scene.''

''You want that suppressed?'' Owens asked Vento's attorney, Gerald DiChiara.

''Yes,'' DiChiara replied.

''Forget it,'' the judge snapped.

Hawkins was shot twice in the chest after he and three friends went to Bensonhurst to look at a used car and were surrounded by a bat-wielding mob. The mob apparently mistook them for black and Hispanic friends of Gina Feliciano, a local girl who was having a birthday party.

Feliciano's mother, Phyllis D'Agata, testified Tuesday that a group of neighborhood boys gathered beneath her kitchen window chanting racial epithets moments before Hawkins was shot.

D'Agata said she saw Vento talking to a local shopkeeper earlier in the day and watched from her kitchen window while as many as ''15 people'' drove by armed with guns.

Under cross examination, D'Agata said she was familiar with Vento's voice and did not think she had heard it the night of the shooting.

DiChiara said he ''was very happy with her testimony. If that's all they have I feel good.''

In testimony before a grand jury in exchange for conditional immunity, Vento implicated Joseph Fama, Keith Mondello and others in the death of Hawkins. Vento later reneged on his deal with prosecutors, fled, finally surrendered and was indicted for second-degree murder.

On June 11, Fama, 19, the accused triggerman in the killing, and Mondello, also 19, the accused ringleader of a mob, were sentenced to maximum prison terms for their part in the slaying.

MIAMI (JUNE 20) UPI - One of Manuel Noriega's lawyers said he is hopeful the deposed Panamanian dictator will win a court battle Wednesday to free some of his millions of dollars in frozen assets to pay legal fees.

Bolstered by an order by U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler that prosecutors justify the seizure of Noriega's assets, defense lawyer Jon May said Tuesday his side had the advantage going into Wednesday's hearing.

The judge last week ordered the government to either justify the seizure of Noriega's accounts or be prepared to free part of the funds.

''I think we are in the driver's seat,'' May said. ''That doesn't mean we'll get the money, but as they say, we have the momentum and we're charging to the goal.''

May indicated the defense may try to negotiate a deal with the government before the hearing.

''It's not out of the question that there won't be a hearing. I am not convinced that the government won't try to work out some sort of an agreement for release of the funds,'' May said. ''This case has been so crazy so far that I wouldn't rule out anything.''

Diane Cossin, spokeswoman for acting U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen, declined comment on any negotiations in the case.

''I can't comment on any conversation involving any ongoing case in this office,'' Cossin said. ''There has been ongoing conversation with defense counsel ever since the indictment was returned.''

Hoeveler said about $20 million was frozen in bank accounts around the world by the U.S. and $5.8 million in property was given to the new Panamanian government without a hearing for Noriega.

He said the government had not demonstrated the seized assets were the profits of illegal drug activities.

Noriega was ousted from power and arrested on federal drug trafficking charges during December's U.S. invasion of Panama. If convicted, he would face a maximum penalty of 145 years in prison and $1.1 million in fines.

Cossin said government prosecutors would address the judge's ruling at the hearing but she declined to say what position the government would take.

''We're not going to comment about the case,'' Cossin said. ''We will talk in open court.''

Defense attorneys have maintained that Noriega received $11 million from U.S. intelligence agencies and the Drug Enforcement Administration over the years and $7 million from foreign sources that could be used to pay for his defense.

Prosecutors say those figures are inflated.

HONG KONG (JUNE 20) UPI - The largest group of Vietnamese boat people to voluntarily return to their homeland left Hong Kong's crowded camps Wednesday amid rising pressure from Asian nations to reinstate forced repatriation.

The 73 men, 69 women and 90 children boarded a chartered jet to Hanoi, becoming the 25th group of Vietnamese to return through the U.N.-sponsored program since its inception in March 1988.

The 232 boat people, the largest group to leave Hong Kong through the program, brought to 2,945 the number of Vietnamese who have returned to Hanoi of their own will.

Asian nations, saying they can no longer cope with the flow of refugees leaving Indochina, have threatened to end their policies of first asylum unless Vietnam and the United States agree to allow the forcible return of boat people.

Hong Kong forcibly repatriated 51 Vietnamese in December but Hanoi, shocked at the worldwide condemnation of the move, has refused to accept any more refugees against their will.

About 54,000 refugee languish in the colony's detention centers. Most of the refugees have no chance for resettlement in the West and face life in the squalid camps or a return to Vietnam.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 20) UPI - North Korea proposed to South Korea Wednesday that the two sides resume talks, suggesting a meeting between their prime ministers and eventually a full parliamentary conference of the two Koreas.

The proposal was made in a telephone message from the North sent through the truce village of Panmunjom 35 miles north of Seoul, government officials said.

The message asked that preparatory talks for the prime ministers meeting be held on June 28 and a preliminary meeting of legislators from both sides be convened on July 12 at the North Korean capital of Panmunjom, the officials said.

North Korea cut off all talks with the South in January when to protest routine annual military exercise involving South Korean and U.S. forces.

The South korean officials said there was no reason to reject the offer to reopen South-North Korea dialogue, but said the North Korean proposal came on too short notice. They said they will have to counter-propose new dates to allow enough time for preparation.

(JUNE 20) UPI - Nelson Mandela brings his message to America... the latest news developments from around the world and across the nation... details from the wires of United Press International.

Black South African nationalist leader Nelson Mandela arrives in the United States today for the U-S leg of his six-week, 13-nation world tour.

The 71-year-old Mandela will fly from Montreal to New York City, where he'll be honored with a ticker-tape parade today... a rally at Yankee Stadium tomorrow... and a major address to the United Nations on Friday.

Yesterday in Montreal, Mandela told about 15-thousand people in a downtown square that while the struggle against apartheid now is worldwide... blacks must still travel a long road before they liberate their people.

Mandela reminded Canadians that what he called the ''cancer of racism'' still exists... and that people should continue their fight against it.

Next week, Mandela travels to Washington, D-C, for talks with President Bush and members of Congress on U-S sanctions against South Africa. Mandela reportedly is concerned about Bush administration plans to review its sanctions program and the possibility that some sanctions may be lifted.

Mandela also will address a joint session of Congress next Tuesday.

Defense Secretary Cheney has presented Congress with an outline for reductions in U-S forces during the next five years. The plan calls for a 25 percent reduction that would cut 442-thousand troops, 111 warships, and 11 Air Force wings.

Cheney says the cuts will save nearly 128-BILLION from 1991 to '95 if adopted by Congress. Cheney says the proposal is NOT a new administration defense budget plan. He adds that the outline is very close to the actual five-year defense plan he will present to Congress in January.

Cheney says the 25 percent cut does NOT include any base closings and does NOT take money away from S-D-I- the so-called ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program.

President Bush has proposed 307-BILLION dollars in military spending authority for 1991, with cuts to be spread out in the years ahead. But with easing tensions in Eastern Europe and the budget deficit, lawmakers have been looking for bigger savings.

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA (JUNE 20) UPI - A North Korean woman who placed a time bomb on a Korean Air jetliner in 1987 that disappeared with 115 people aboard said Wednesday she still feels guilty and punishes herself by not buying all the dresses she wants.

Kim Hyon-hui, 28, convicted of the atrocity and given a death sentence that was later commuted, met with reporters at a Seoul hotel, looking healthy and well-heeled in a blue dress.

''As a woman, as a human being, I have the same desires as others,'' Kim said in a soft voice. ''There are many things I want to have and there are many dresses I would like to wear. But because of my position I restrain myself.''

Kim, a beauty who created a sensation in South Korea during her trial, said she spends her days watching television but she does go shopping at times with her escorts.

Although Kim has been living in a government house with women guards who allow her freedom of movement, she said she still feels she is a captive.

''Being a culprit I do have a sense of agony with which I must fight,'' she said. ''In that sense I must still be a prisoner or a captive - of a sense of guilt.''

Kim and an elderly North Korean man boarded a KAL airliner at Baghdad, Iraq, the night of Nov. 28, 1987. The pair got off the plane three hours later when it stopped over at Abu Dhabi, the United Arab Emirates, leaving behind a time bomb.

The plane vanished over Southeast Asia while heading to Bangkok, Thailand, en route to Seoul. It is believed to have crashed in the ocean, killing the 115 people on board.

Kim and her companion went from Abu Dhabi to Bahrain where they were arrested. Kim's companion committed suicide, but she was put on trial in Seoul and given a death sentence. Her sentence was commuted by a special pardon because of her potential as a witness to North Korean atrocities.

Kim said she is trying to learn more about South Korea and adapt herself to life in the country, which has been divided from North Korea since the end of World War II.

''After nearly three years in Seoul, I have come to realize that there is freedom of expression in South Korea, which is unimaginable in the North where (President) Kim Il-sung is God,'' she said.

Asked whether she thought of marrying, Kim replied, ''I am guilty of a heinous crime. How do I dare to think of marriage?''

(JUNE 20) UPI - Police in Michigan City, Indiana, say a hit-and-run accident may have sparked rioting on the city's east side by about 150 people. Police say the group fired shots at police, and threw rocks and bottles at passing cars.

Police arrested 12 people during last night's unrest and cordoned off up to nine blocks of Michigan Boulevard for most of the night. It was the second night of sporadic violence in the neighborhood surrounding a public housing project.

Michigan City Mayor Robert Behler Junior says a hit-and-run accident that caused the death of teen-ager Monday night may be the cause for the rioting. He says there was a lot of ''tension'' regarding the accident. But he adds- ''There are NO legitimate reasons'' for the violence.

Police are NOT characterizing the violence in the mostly black neighborhood as race-related.

Soviet President Gorbachev is facing a new challenge... this time from hard-line conservatives who are demanding the Soviet leader's resignation.

The Communist Party hardliners launched their scathing attacks on Gorbachev at a conference of Communists of the Russian republic.

The criticism likely will continue at next month's crucial Communist Party Congress, where Gorbachev may face a doubled-barreled attack from both party liberals and conservatives.

At yesterday's meeting, Gorbachev received only tepid applause for his attack on those ''who dogmatically reject'' his reform policies.

But delegates interrupted speaker Ivan Osadchii with applause at least five times during his call for restoration of the Communist Party to its former glory. He blamed Gorbachev and his policies for crippling the party that once ruled the nation with an iron hand.

A Siberian party leader demanded that Gorbachev, the ruling Poliburo and the party's Central Committee resign. He warned Gorbachev against ''sliding toward a personality cult''... a phrase generally used to refer to Stalin.

(JUNE 20) UPI - Protecting the Earth's ozone shield will be the focus of a multi-national conference set to open in London today. Delegates from 75 nations are participating in the 10-day meeting.

58 countries and the European Community are expected to pledge their efforts to eliminating chloro-fluorocarbons, or C-F-C's, by the year 2000. C-F-C's, which are used refrigerators, air conditioners, dry cleaners, and spray cans are blamed for depleting the ozone.

The executive director of the United Nations Environment Program says since the representatives met in Montreal in 1987, ozone layer depeletion appears to be occurring twice as fast as predicted.

Conference organizers say a main goal of the meeting to devise ways to help developing nations avoid mistakes made by the industrialized world. Estimates put the cost of transferring environmentally safe technology to poorer nations between 150-Million to 260-Million dollars.

The White House said last week it would participate in such a fund if the World Bank administered it and it did NOT exceed 260-Million dollars.

Democrats are expressing outrage that the White House claimed they were trying to score political points over the nation's savings and loan crisis.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater yesterday claimed that congressional Democrats were moving to politicize the multi-BILLION-dollar scandal.

Democrats quickly accused the White House of intimidation. Democratic Senator David Pryor urged President Bush to reject Fitzwater's partisan ploy.

Fitzwater's accusations brought to a head the escalating war of words over responsibility for the savings and loan crisis. The projected federal bailout may cost taxpayers as much as 500-BILLION dollars over the next 30 years.

Fitzwater's attack also comes as the Bush administration takes up critical negotiations with Congress on a budget-cutting plan that officials now concede will require paring away up to 80-BILLION dollars.

Democrats recently have sharpened charges that the Bush administration is doing too little to prosecute the high-flying financiers involved in the failures.

ATHENS, GA (JUNE 20) UPI - Two University of Georgia researchers disputed the government's estimate of high school dropouts Wednesday, suggesting students quit school at less than half the rate reported by the Education Department.

The two-year study of census data found that 13 percent of young Americans fail to complete high school, rather than the 30 percent rate indicated by the Education Department's annual State Education Performance Chart.

''Our data shows that the drop-out problem is much more narrow than previously thought but it also runs deeper,'' said one of the authors of the report, Dr. Larry R. Hepburn of the university's Carl Vinson Institute of Government.

''Many students who drop out return to school to complete their education '' Hepburn said. ''But others begin to drop out mentally at a very early age. It is with these students that we should concentrate our efforts. Just because the dropout rate is lower than has been reported doesn't mean it is any less of a problem.''

Hepburn said the Education Department's figures fail to take into account the large number of high school students who earn diplomas earlier or later than their classmates.

The Georgia study, which Hepburn conducted with retired economics professor Dr. Rudolph White, used U.S. Census data to compile its figure, he said.

The research also reveals that parents' education is the best indicator of whether children are likely to drop out of school.

''These children begin mentally dropping out in second grade because their parents, who didn't finish school, are less likely to encourage them,'' Hepburn said. ''They're less likely to do educational kinds of things at home. They are less likely to have books and magazines around the house.''

In the study, Hepburn and White used figures from the Census Bureau's monthly Current Population Survey to determine, by state, how many adults age 18-24 do not have a high school diploma or its equivalent.

In contrast, the figures released by the Education Department show only whether ninth-grade students graduated with their classmates after four years.

Hepburn said the education department's completion-rate figures are flawed because they do not take into account students who drop out of school, but then return and graduate late; students who fail a grade; students who graduate early; students who transfer to a private school or those who move to another state.

''By looking at the age group of 18- to 24-year-olds in our study, we're giving young people a chance to either go back to school or to get a high school equivalency degree,'' Hepburn said. ''Our figure lets us know the status of the young adult labor force.''

Hepburn and White used data from the 18 months of the 1986 and 1987 school years to determine drop-out rates for each state and the District of Columbia. The margin of error on the study is 2 percent.

The study showed the highest drop-out rate, 19.9 percent, is in Texas schools while North Dakota's 4.1 percent was the lowest. The Education Department contends that Washington, D.C., had the highest drop-out rate at 44.5 percent and Minnesota had the lowest at 9.4 percent.

RANGOON, BURMA (JUNE 20) UPI - The National League for Democracy, victorious in last month's election, made a renewed appeal Wednesday to the powerful ruling military government to transfer power to a civilian rule.

''We are now the elected representatives of the people, so the NLD, as well as the military government, will now have to work together for the good of the people,'' said acting party leader Kyi Maung.

He said the party had not yet taken any concrete steps to hold talks with the ruling military junta on the transfer of power and the release of political prisoners.

''But we are going to soon,'' he said.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of political activists, including the two top NLD leaders have been under arrest since a political crackdown by the military last July.

The military government allowed the May 27 elections as an international public relations gambit and promised to abide by the poll results. Despite stiff regulations on campaigning, the National League for Democracy soundly defeated the military's party.

The military has not said outright it would renege on its promise but leaders have indicated in a number of public speeches that they are in no hurry to transfer power and that they still intend to keep a tight grip on the country.

The election commission said the NLD has won 390 of the 471 Parliamentary seats officially declared so far. The pro-military National Unity Party has won only seven seats with 14 more results to be announced.

Military leaders have said they will not hand over power until an acceptable new constitution is created and a ''strong government'' is in place.

In a speech Monday, military leader Gen. Saw Maung indicated that Burma's first constitution, passed in 1947, would not be acceptable as the basis for a new charter because it had been drafted under the influence of Burma's colonial British masters.

DETROIT (JUNE 20) UPI - A problem with plastic door panels could delay startup of production on General Motor Corp.'s new Saturn car until late July or early August, instead of June 25 as planned, a published report said Wednesday.

The Detroit Free Press, quoting unidentified members of the Saturn Corp. manufacturing staff, said engineers are working to correct a problem that causes the door panels to swell under very high temperatures.

The sources told the newspaper it is possible the Saturn - GM's small car of the future - will not be in production in time for GM Chairman Roger Smith to drive one off the assembly line before his retirement July 31.

GM is also concerned that resolving the problem with the door panels may make it difficult to fill showrooms when the cars go on sale in late October or early November, the Free Press said.

''It's going to be a photo-finish, there's no doubt in my mind,'' one manufacturing source told the newspaper.

Problems in bringing new cars to market are not uncommon, especially when new methods are used. Saturn is one of only a handful of cars to make extensive use of plastics.

Guy Briggs, Saturn's vice president of manufacturing, said Tuesday the plastic manufacturing process generally has fewer problems than expected, and won't prevent Saturn Corp. from producing salable cars as planned sometime this summer.

According to the sources quoted by the Free Press, the door glitch was first noticed at GM's desert test track in Phoenix and has defied six months of corrective work by Saturn engineers. One of the sources said the swelling can be large enough to prevent the doors from closing.

In addition to dealing with the door swelling, management at Saturn's $1.9-billion assembly complex in Spring Hill, Tenn., also is refining a rash of minor glitches, including durability problems on the transmission and assembly problems on its metallic body skeleton, the sources said.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (JUNE 20) UPI - Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan moved to ease political tension with military commanders Wednesday by appointing a former defense minister as his special adviser.

Gen. Chavalit Yongchaiyudh had precipitated a political crisis when he resigned from his dual Cabinet post of deputy prime minister and defense minister last week in protest over allegations he had been involved in corruption. Military commanders rallied to support Chavalit and issued angry denunciations of Chatichai's civilian government.

''I wanted to re-appoint him as a deputy prime minister and defense minister but he wanted to run in an election (before returning to the Cabinet),'' Chatichai said. ''But he wanted to serve the country. He then asked to be an adviser.''

The appointment appeared to reduce political strains between Chatichai and senior military officers who had accused him of not standing behind Chavalit.

''The military are satisfied (with the appointment),'' Chatichai said.

The prime minister said Chavalit would advise him on internal security, foreign affairs and narcotics control and would have special powers to issue orders to the bureaucracy.

Chavalit had been invited into the Cabinet only two months before he resigned to ensure military backing for the sometimes fractious six-party coalition headed by Chatichai.

Such military support has long been essential in Thailand, which has had some 16 coups d'etat and coup attempts since the end of an absolute monarchy in 1932.

Political sources have said Chavalit and his supporters are preparing to either set up their own party or join an existing party to challenge Chatichai in the next general elections.

The elections are not due until July 1992 but the military-dominated upper house of Parliament and the opposition parties could make it difficult for Chatichai to avoid an early election if there are divisions within his coalition.

TOKYO (JUNE 20) UPI - A fire and two explosions rocked the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway Wednesday during maneuvers off the coast of Japan, leaving one sailor missing and 16 injured, U.S. military officials said.

The Midway, the oldest aircraft carrier in the U.S. fleet, was conducting routine flight operations about 125 miles northeast of Tokyo in the Pacific Ocean when an explosion ripped through a damage control storeroom four decks below the flight deck at midday, Navy spokesman Gary Gunderson said.

The damage control storeroom contains emergency equipment for fighting fires and plugging holes in the hull of the Midway, which is deployed at Yokosuka.

A Pentagon spokesman in Washington announced the fire had been contained but Gunderson said it still was burning late Wednesday night and sailors were unable to enter the storeroom.

''The fire boundaries are set, with indications the fire is still burning in the affected space,'' he said. ''Preparations are under way to enter the space.''

The Navy maintained its policy of refusing to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear weapons on the ship.

The cause of the explosion was not known but was under investigation, said Lt. Jeff Graydeck.

''The ship is steaming under its own power,'' Graydeck said.

U.S. officials would not reveal the Midway's destination.

The damage to the 45-year-old Midway, which lost the use of one of two aircraft-launching catapults in the explosion, may force the cancellation of U.S.-Japan exercises, the official said.

Nine of the 16 injured sailors were airlifted from the deck of the burning carrier to Tokyo-area hospitals, the officials said.

One sailor was listed in critical condition, six in serious condition, one guarded and one stable, Gunderson said. Seven others who suffered less serious injuries were being treated aboard the Midway, he said.

Japanese officials said two of the Americans were taken to a Japanese hospital in critical condition with severe burns.

''The USS Midway suffered one primary and secondary explosion and fire this morning just before midnight EDT while engaged in routine flight training operations,'' said a statement from the Pentagon.

''The cause and extent of the explosion and fire are unknown at this time '' the statement said.

The Midway was to participate in eight days of joint U.S.-Japanese naval exercise starting Wednesday, said Japanese Defense Agency official.

The Midway, which can hold up to 75 aircraft, is capable of carrying nuclear weapons and has been the center of controversy in Japan, where nuclear weapons are officially banned.

City officials in Yokosuka, the town west of Tokyo where the Navy base is located, routinely protest the arrival of the Midway because of the possibility it may be carrying nuclear weapons.

Japanese officials first said the Midway was to return to the Yokosuka base Wednesday night, but U.S. and Japanese officials later said the ship would not return to the port.

Yokosuka City officials asked the Japanese Foreign Ministry to identify the cause of the accident and postpone the return of the ship until the safety of Yokosuka citizens can be assured.

The accident follows a string of Navy disasters last year. At least 65 people died in 10 incidents worldwide that began with the April 19 explosion aboard the battleship USS Iowa that killed 47 sailors.

A Navy investigation said a suicidal sailor probably was responsible for the disaster, but scientific analyses this year cast serious doubts over the Navy conclusion.

The Midway was constructed during World War II, though it was not commissioned until September 1945.

It has since undergone extensive modernization. Its two catapults, used to launch aircraft, are steam-powered, according to the authoritative guide Jane's Fighting Ships.

Families seeking information about sailors who may have been on the Midway may call two phone numbers: In Virginia, 1-800-572-2126; outside Virginia, 1-800-523-2975.

(JUNE 20) UPI - A fire and two explosions rocked the U-S aircraft carrier Midway in the Pacific near Japan today, injuring at least nine sailors. U-S and Japanese officials say the Midway was conducting routine flight operations about 125 miles northeast of Tokyo when the two explosions ripped through a catapult on the ship's deck. The fire has been extinguished and the Midway is heading back to its base west of Tokyo. Five of the injured were flown to that base and four to an air base near Tokyo.

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA (JUNE 20) UPI - Ralfone, a 4-year-old female orangutan, returned to the eastern Malaysian state of Sabah Tuesday for a six-month training course to prepare her for life in the wilds of Borneo's jungles, officials said.

Ralfone, another orangutan and 11 macque monkeys were rescued from smugglers' attempts to send them to Mexico in May 1987 and were found by authorities to be in poor health, having been deprived of food and water.

The animals were confiscated under the terms of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species.

Ralfone's fellow orangutan was sent to Antwerp Zoo in the Netherlands after experts decided it had become too accustomed to life in captivity to survive rehabilitation to the wild. The monkeys have been sent to the Paris zoo.

The decision to send Ralfone back to the jungle came after French zoologists declared her a suitable candidate for the orangutan rehabiltation program in Sepilok Sabah.

Workers at the the Sepilok sanctuary planned to keep Ralfone for six months before releasing her into the jungle.

''It is difficult to reorient the orangutan back to the wild,'' said World

Wildlife Fund Malaysian President Khir Johari. ''But there have been stories of success.''

Hein, 18, is one of the sanctuary's success stories. He was rescued from captivity in Germany in 1974 and sent to Sepilok for rehabilitation.

''Today Hein goes back to the forests for long periods of one to three years. We hope Ralfone will tread the same path,'' Khir said.

The orangutan, Malaysia's national mascot, is found only in the tropical rainforests on the islands of Borneo and Sumatra.

WWF figures estimate there are only about 30,000 left living in the wild with one-third of them in Sabah on the island of Borneo.

The reddish-colored ape, which has an average lifespan of 30 years, is an intelligent and solitary animal whose native habitat is coming under increasing threat from deforestation projects such as logging and conversion of the rainforest to agricultural plantations.

The World Wildlife Fund strongly backed the formation of another wildlife sanctuary at Lanjak-Entimau in neigboring Sarawak after a survey in 1981 revealed numerous orangutan were living and nesting in the region.

BEIJING (JUNE 20) UPI - Farmers' incomes in China dropped markedly during the first quarter of this year and an official newspaper Wednesday called it an ''ill omen'' for government agricultural policy.

Despite reduced inflation, per capita income among China's 800 million farmers declined 1.6 percent during the first quarter of 1990 over the same period last year, according to the offical English-language China Daily.

The state-run newspaper attributed the drop in rural earnings to a combination of price hikes, exorbitant local levies and fallout from the government's controversial austerity program.

The report described a continuing decline in rural incomes as ''an ill omen for future agricultural development.'' China earlier this year announced plans to boost agriculture to balance overheated economic growth.

In an unusually critical swipe at the government's 18-month-old economic retrenchment program, the China Daily blamed austerity measures for ''adding fuel to the fire'' by shutting down rural enterprises that formerly provided vital supplementary income for farmers.

Tight credit policies forced more than three million rural enterprises to close their doors last year, sending at least two million farmers back into the fields, according to official statistics.

Rural job-seekers have also found themselves shut out of China's depressed job market. A nationwide slowdown in capital construction has cut off a major source of short-term labor for millions of farmers who had streamed into urban areas in recent years.

A Western analyst said farmers' incomes have been declining in real terms for several years but that the latest report was the largest recorded drop so far and an ''embarrassment'' to China's leadership.

''It shows they haven't planned ahead. They try to fix one problem only to find another one further down the road,'' the analyst said, adding that farmers are also feeling the pinch from a drop in grain prices caused by a bumper summer harvest.

But China lacks sufficient grain storage facilities and distribution networks, resulting in massive waste, the analyst said.

A recent traveler to inland Shaanxi province said he saw grain piled up in fields and left out in the rain. Farmers in southern Anhui province and other rural areas can be seen selling surplus bags of grain by the side of the road.

Wednesday's report emphasized that farmers would not be paid in IOUs, as they were during the bumper harvest of 1984 and the high inflation days of 1988, but said their declining incomes would create ''headaches'' for China's economists and policy-makers.

A Western diplomat agreed.

''Unhappy farmers mean trouble for the Communist Party,'' the diplomat said, pointing out that the government has a deep-seated fear of rural unrest. A full 80 percent of China's 1.1 billion population are farmers.

(JUNE 20) UPI - New York Mayor David Dinkins told the federal government to stop treating cities like ''foreign nations seeking a handout.'' During his speech to the annual U-S Conference of Mayors in Chicago, Dinkins said the government should use the ''peace dividend'' to solve urban problems. Dinkins remarks came on the heels of Monday's comments from House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski. The Illinois congressman said extra funds will go toward bailing out the savings and loan industry.

Coast Guard officials say the combination of wind and oil skimmers have cut the size of the oil spill from the Norwegian tanker Mega Borg in the Gulf of Mexico. They say it's possible the oil will never reach the Texas shores. Hot temperatures have caused the oil to evaporate and the heavier flow from the Trinity River into Galveston Bay also has helped to keep the oil away.

Police then discovered the car had been stolen and apparently was used by the burglary suspects they were seeking.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 20) UPI - Romania will be excluded from a major Western aid program for Eastern Europe because of last week's violent suppression of protest, a key European Community official said Wednesday.

The program to help the transition to market economies, begun last year by 24 nations including the United States, is coordinated by the EC executive commission.

It was initially launched to help Poland and Hungary but foreign ministers from the Group of 24 countries meet July 4 in Brussels to extend the program to several other nations of Eastern Europe.

''In the present circumstances, Romania will not be in that list of countries to which the program will be extended,'' said Frans Andriessen, EC commissioner for foreign affairs.

Romanian President Ion Iliescu, sworn into office Wednesday in Bucharest, defended the government's decision to call in coal miners and other government supporters to put down the opposition demonstrators.

He said in his inauguration speech that the violence had been an uprising the government could not handle alone.

Six people are believed to have been killed and hundreds wounded when police and government supporters clashed with the opposition demonstrators. The vigilantes are also accused of trashing the headquarters of two political parites and the officies of an opposition newspaper.

''We cannot accept the measures that the public authorities there have put in order,'' Andriessen said, adding that a minister from Romania will not even be invited to the Brussels meeting to explain the country's situation.

The EC Commission will recommend that the program, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, be extended to Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, East Germany and Yugoslavia, but not Romania. Andriessen said he was confident the 24 foreign ministers would go along.

Before the recent unrest, Romania was on the list of countries to benefit from the program.

On Monday, the 12 European Community foreign ministers suspended completion of a trade pact between Romania and the EC due to the government's ''indiscriminate force'' in stifling protest.

Denial of aid by the 24 rich nations would be far more damaging, however, to the government of Iliescu.

The EC alone has earmarked $375 million to support economic reforms in Poland and Hungary this year.

In a status report on the program last month, officials said Poland had already received 1.3 million tons of cereals, plus large amounts of meat, fish and other foods. The program also includes professional training and promotion of joint ventures and investments.

Romania told the EC it could benefit under the program through improved access to markets, agricultural research and training in management, tourism and communications.

Andriessen said the Group of 24 aid program should not be extended to the Soviet Union, which he termed ''a case of its own.''

He said, however, economic aid to the Soviets would doubtless be discussed at a summit of EC leaders in Dublin next week, and at next month's Houston summit of the seven leading industrialized nations.

''I don't think that should be a matter for the Community alone,'' said Andriessen, who functions as the EC foreign minister.

The Group of 24 includes including the 12 EC nation and seven other European countries, plus the United States, Canada, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (JUNE 20) UPI - Guerrillas attacked three provincial capitals, including Cambodia's second-largest city, in fighting over the weekend that reportedly left more than 160 troops dead on both sides, official radios said Wednesday.

The Khmer Rouge radio said a three-pronged attack on Battambang, the nation's second largest city 160 miles northwest of Phnom Penh, killed 43 government soldiers Friday and Saturday.

A statement issued by the allied guerrilla group loyal to Prince Norodom Sihanouk said its forces briefly captured the province capital of Kompong Thom, about 100 miles north of Phnom Penh, on Sunday.

It said the guerrillas killed 67 government troops in the fighting at Kompong Thom and destroyed or seized large quantities of military supplies including five armored personnel carriers.

A Khmer Rouge report said government forces reinforced by 300 Vietnamese soldiers retook the town using 20 Soviet-supplied tanks.

Government radio acknowledged the attack, but said 56 of the resistance troops were killed before fleeing the town. The resistance, however, put its losses at only 21 men killed.

Resistance sources said a third province town, the capital of Preah Vihear province north of Kompong Thom, was surrounded and under attack, but no details were available.

The attacks on major towns signalled an upsurge in resistance activity now that heavy rains are hampering the movement of the government' s heavy Soviet-supplied tanks, artillery and supply trucks.

Ek Sereywuth, spokesman for the Sihanouk forces, said the attacks were not intended to capture and hold the cities, but to draw government troops from outlying areas and cut main supply routes to isolate military outposts in the northwest.

''The operations are also timed to take advantage of the confusion caused by the power struggle in Phnom Penh,'' he said, referring to a purge of liberal government leaders that has included the arrest of a cabinet minister and the sacking of several other senior officials.

The Khmer Rouge radio said the attack in and around Battambang was mainly directed at Vietnamese troops aiding the Hanoi-backed Phnom Penh government.

Vietnam has repeatedly denied that its forces remained behind after its official withdrawal last September.

It said the guerrillas planted land mines on the highway which leads to Pailin district capital which fell to the Khmer Rouge eight months ago.

The attackers shelled the city with 54 artillery rounds that landed near a Vietnamese command office, the market and the railway station, the report said.

The Khmer Rouge report has not been confirmed by independent sources and diplomats have said the guerrilla group frequently exaggerates its successes for propaganda purposes.

In January the Khmer Rouge claimed hundreds of government troops were killed in an attack that seized control of the town for four hours.

Government officials, however, shrugged off the incident as a series of minor guerrilla attacks on the city' s outer defenses.

The Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge are part of a three-party resistance coalition that includes two small U.S.-backed non-communist resistance groups.

The Khmer Rouge were ousted from power in January 1979 following a Vietnamese invasion that installed a pro-Hanoi government in place of the brutal regime that is blamed for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians during its three years in power.

ATLANTA (JUNE 20) UPI - An expedition from Atlanta has tunneled down through 250 feet of ice in Greenland to reach the first of eight U.S. military airplanes of a ''lost squadron'' from World War II.

Richard Taylor, a leader of the Greenland Expedition Society, said in Atlanta Tuesday that the group had drilled through the ice and photographed the propeller of a B-17 bomber that the explorers plan to recover and fly home.

Taylor said the expedition reached the first aircraft last week and plans to retrieve three of the planes by late summer. The group plans to dismantle the planes, bring the parts up through the tunnel, reassemble the aircraft and fly them out of Greenland.

Six P-38 fighters and two B-17s made emergency landings in Greenland on July 15, 1942, on their way to Europe. The squadron, decoyed by false radio transmissions from Nazi submarines, ran out of fuel in bad weather. The planes were abandoned in Greenland about 100 miles south of the Arctic Circle. All the pilots survived.

The team's goal is to retrieve all eight aircraft, which were buried as ice and snow built up on them over the years. The first plane recovered will go the the Danish government and the rest will go to sponsors of the expedition.

The group had not originally anticipated finding the planes buried so deeply in the ice.

''We started with the intention of just sweeping the snow off the wings with a broom,'' said Pat Epps, Taylor's partner, who owns a flying service at Atlanta's DeKalb-Peachtree airport.

In its effort to retrieve the planes, the team is using a ''super gopher '' a device that melts a tunnel through the ice by pumping heated water into it.

The explorers hope to have a man inside the cockpit of the B-17 in about three weeks, Taylor said.

TOKYO (JUNE 20) UPI - The state of Florida and the government-financed Japan Trade Promotion Organization signed an agreement Wednesday aimed at promoting the U.S. state's exports to Japan.

The agreement was signed by Minoru Masuda, president of the organization, known as JETRO, and witnessed by Florida Commerce Secretary William L. Sutton, JETRO officials said.

Under the agreement, JETRO will send a trade expert to Florida to offer advice on the promotion of the state's exports to Japan, the officials said. Florida was the third U.S. state to conclude such arrangements, following Indiana and Ohio. JETRO plans to sign similar agreements with 15 other U.S. states this year to help promote U.S. exports to Japan, the officials said.

The agreement is in line with the Japanese government's import promotion program to reduce Japan's trade surplus with the United States, which amounts to about $50 billion annually, the officials said. Florida ranked seventh among 50 U.S. states in terms of export trade in 1988, valued at about $9.4 billion, they said.

In a related development, President Bush's son John urged Japan to increase its investment in Florida, which he said has geographical advantages and good urban facilities. He told reporters Tuesday Japanese investment in Florida is less than that in other U.S. states. Bush, president of a real estate firm in Miami, was in Japan to help promote Japanese investment in the state.

(JUNE 20) UPI - Severe thunderstorms and tornadoes raked the Midwest and Plains, tossing a grain bin about and knocking over a brick house in Illinois, while sweltering heat baked the South.

A tornado touched down in Nickerson, Kan., and more funnel clouds were spotted in south-central Kansas and extreme eastern Colorado, the National Weather Service said.

Thunderstorms packing 100 mph winds struck a six-county area of south-central Kansas Tuesday night, causing widespread power outages and injuring 41 people in Sedgwick County alone, some of them when mobile homes overturned. About 40,000 people were still without power Wednesday morning in Wichita.

City civil preparedness spokesman Jack Kegley said most of the damage was caused by strong winds. Wichita's streets are littered with downed tree limbs.

A line of thunderstorms swept through central Illinois early Wednesday, ripping roofs from buildings, blowing out display windows and causing power outages and minor flooding.

There were more than a dozen tornado sightings but they could not be confirmed. ''We're still trying to sort through the information,'' said Dave Jacobs, official in charge of the Peoria NWS office.

Electrical power was lost in many communities, the Busboom Grain Elevator north of Champaign sustained about $1 million damage and farm buildings were reported blown over or damaged throughout the region. Lightning struck a house in Normal, touching off small fires but no injuries were reported.

Chillicothe, Ill., reported 4 1/2 inches of rain Tuesday night, the NWS said. To the north, thunderstorms moved through at 50 mph and pounded southern DeKalb County with golfball-size hail.

A major storm feared by central Iowa officials never came to pass Tuesday night but authorities in southern Iowa report flooding as the result of slow-moving torrential rains from the West. The weather service said 3 1/2 inches was common and high water forced the closure of several highways.

The Iowa State Patrol reported the Des Moines River in Marion County overflowed and will continue to do so as it collects runoff from the heavy rains.

Flood-battered Ohio braced for more severe weather with a flood watch over the entire state. The weather service advised residents in flood-prone areas to be on guard because of a potential for up to 3 inches of rain, producing urban and small stream flooding.

Strong thunderstorms and heavy rains marked the final day of spring across Indiana. A flash flood watch was posted for central and southern Indiana.

Hot weather continued in the South, with little rain in the east and 100-plus temperatures in the west.

Baton Rouge, La., registered a record-tying 100-degree reading Tuesday and a humidity index of 115 degrees. Dr. James Crowell, emergency room physician at Baton Rouge General Medical Center, said, ''Last week we really started seeing our first heat exhaustions and heat strokes. We admitted two heat strokes in the past week,'' both elderly people with body temperatures of 108 degrees.

''They lay up there in un-airconditioned apartments and they bake. They literally bake in there - it's like an oven.''

Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas registered heat indexes - the measure of how hot the air feels to the skin - of 100-plus Tuesday. The heat index reached 108 in Waco, Texas, and 106 in Dallas. North and central Texas were under an excessive heat advisory for the fifth day. Overnight lows in the 70s and 80s were common in Texas.

Cooler temperatures and partly cloudy skies covered much of Pennsylvania Wednesday while fog enveloped coastal Delaware and New Jersey. Maryland had scattered showers in the northeast.

Thunderstorms banged southeastern Massachusetts, Cape Cod and the Providence, R.I., area early Wednesday, followed by ''extensive area fog '' a weather service meteorologist said.

BEIJING (JUNE 20) UPI - China has freed three dissidents detained by police before the anniversary of last year's crackdown on the democracy movement, including a Taiwan-born pop singer who surfaced Wednesday in Taipei.

Taiwan's state-run Broadcasting Corporation of China said Hou Dejian, a singer who defected to mainland China in 1983, arrived in Taiwan Wednesday by fishing boat from an unspecified location in China after 50 hours at sea.

Earlier Wednesday, friends said a second freed dissident, Gao Xin, 33, telephoned at least two friends Tuesday to say he had been released and to tell a similar tale as that of activist Zhou Duo, 43, who was freed Sunday.

''He said he'd been held outside town and was treated well,'' a close associate said in a telephone interview. ''He sounded very good. He was in good spirits.''

No one reported actually having seen Gao, a Communist Party member and former editor of Beijing Normal University's newspaper.

Zhou said in an interview Tuesday he and Hou had been held at the same suburban Beijing hotel but said they had not been allowed to meet.

The Taiwanese radio said Hou arrived in Taipei at noon Wednesday and turned himself in to the Taipei district prosecutor after a brief visit with his family. Prosecutor Tsai Mao-sung ordered Hou detained for entering Taiwan illegally and for violating national security laws, the radio said.

Taiwan, seeking increased economic ties with China, recently moved to restrict entry of Chinese dissidents to the island.

Until Zhou's interview Tuesday, there had been no confirmation that the three had been detained because the government has rebuffed repeated inquiries.

The three dissidents disappeared May 30 - the eve of a risky scheduled news conference at which they had planned to issue an open letter asking China's hard-line leaders to free political prisoners held since the June 1989 crushing of the democracy movement.

Zhou, interviewed at his western Beijing home, said he was freed Sunday after being held by police since May 30.

He said uniformed police took him from his home on the night before the planned news conference, saying he would be detained until tension surounding the approaching June 3-4 anniversary had abated.

''They said they were going to choose a place for me to go and take a break, to have some fun,'' Zhou said with a wry laugh. ''They said they guessed I'd be away for about a week. But they really didn't even know themselves.

''They said they were taking me away for my own good,'' he said. ''They were extremely polite and forthright from the beginning to the end.''

Zhou said he was treated well during the 18 days of confinement at the hotel, whose name and location he declined to disclose. He said he complied with official requests to write about his personal circumstances and his opinions, and kept copies of his writings for himself.

Zhou said he was told that Gao had written letters home and been allowed to go fishing during part of his time in detention.

Hou, Gao and a fourth dissident, university lecturer Liu Xiaobo, conducted a last-ditch hunger strike last June in Tiananmen Square just before Chinese troops moved in and crushed the six weeks of protests. Liu remains in a prison north of Beijing.

Hou, 33, sought refuge in the Australian Embassy in Beijing for two months after the crackdown, finally coming out on his own after receiving Chinese government guarantees he would not be prosecuted.

Zhou was among 211 prisoners freed in early May after spending nearly a year in jail and losing his job as an executive at China's most successful private computer firm, Stone Co. Gao Xin had been freed last December.

The three dissidents had been the only ones bold enough to resume speaking out freely nearly a year after the government cracked down on dissent, but the timing of their news conference proved too sensitive, Zhou said.

MOSCOW (JUNE 20) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev told conservative critics Wednesday that the Communist Party may have a new leader soon, an apparent hint he might quit his party leadership post at the national congress next month.

''I think that comrades are making very free with the general secretary (of the party) and president of the country,'' Gorbachev said in an angry response to criticism on the second day of a conference of the Russian republic's Communist Party dominated by conservatives.

''I am not talking about myself. Tomorrow maybe or in 10 or 12 days there could be a different general secretary or chairman of the party,'' he said.

The crucial national 28th Soviet Communist Party Congress to decide the future of what was once the world's most monolithic ruling party begins in 12 days on July 2.

Even if Gorbachev resigned as general secretary, he would maintain his position as president of the Soviet Union, a new and more powerful post created in March. Gorbachev does not face an election for at least four years.

Moscow Communist Party boss Yuri Prokofiev said he did not know if Gorbachev's comments meant he planned to resign as general secretary.

''I think he was just realistically relecting reality,'' Prokofiev said. ''After all, in 12 days there will be the 28th Party Congress, and we'll decide about a new leadership and new leaders. Therefore, such a statement is completely natural.

''He was just emphasizing that everything is in the hands of the delegates and they can decide this problem themselves in two weeks at the Congress '' he said.

Gorbachev's comments Wednesday came during a debate on the relationship between party and government power at a conference of communists from the Russian republic. Delegates to the conference openly rebuked Gorbachev and called for his resignation Tuesday.

The Soviet leader was criticized again by party conservatives Wednesday for not strongly opposing a measure in the Russian republic's legislature, the Congress of People's Deputies, to differentiate between party and state power.

''Before expressing a judgment and especially (before making) accusations, one should know a great deal, investigate and not shoot from the hip,'' Gorbachev said.

''If there is such an attitude by (party) conferences and congresses toward Congresses of People's Deputies and toward all who we put forward (in positions of authority) in such a crucial phase of history, then I have to say that we will not get anywhere except to chaos,'' he said.

The Russian Congress of People's Deputies later failed to pass the resolution on the relationship between party and government power, sending it back to the smaller standing Parliament, the Supreme Soviet, for further work.

Gorbachev's comments Wednesday at the conference of Russian Communists - whose 2,744 delegates are dominated by conservatives - were a response to the harsh criticisms leveled at him Tuesday.

Ivan Osadchii, who headed the committee that planned the conference, blamed Gorbachev and his reform policies for crippling the party that once ruled the nation with an iron hand.

The party is ''surrendering its position without a fight'' because the leadership has pursued ''a very contradictory and at times unpredictable policy,'' Osadchii said.

Wednesday morning the conference delegates took a giant step toward forming a Russian Republic Communist Party by declaring the meeting a founding congress of the party.

Russia had been the only one of the 15 Soviet republics that did not have a separate branch of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, although Russians have always had the dominant role in the national party.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush appeared set to announce Wednesday a suspension of U.S. diplomatic contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization in response to its refusal to publicly condemn an attempted terrorist attack last month against Israel.

NBC-TV and the Cable News Network both reported that the Bush administration plans to announce a break off of the diplomatic talks with the PLO on grounds that the PLO ''had failed to distance itself'' from the beachfront attempted invasion at Tel Aviv.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater declined to confirm the reports, but advised reporters to stay tuned for an expected announcement at an afternoon news conference Bush scheduled to hold at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

As he headed for his helicopter on the south lawn of the White House to begin a campaign swing through Alabama and North Carolina, Bush told reporters, ''You're going to miss a lot of news down there at the press conference today.''

Bush told reporters last Thursday that the administration was still weighing its response to the PLO's failure to condemn the May 30 incident.

PLO officials and U.S. Ambassador Robert Pelletreau have been meeting from time to time in Tunis since December 1988. They have met four times in the past 30 days, but basically the talks have been almost paralyzed since the May 30 incident.

The PLO last week denounced attacks on civilians, but fell short of meeting U.S. conditions for a continuation of the dialogue authorized by President Reagan in December 1988 after PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat bowed to U.S. calls to renounce terrorism.

In testimony eight days ago to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Secretary of State James Baker said the United States had been urged by its allies and other friendly governments ''not to rush our decision'' out of concern for its impact on the moribund peace process.

At that time, Baker also blamed the government of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir for the political stalemate in the Middle East. In a rare public rebuke, Baker ticked off the telephone number of the White House and said his message to the Israelis was, ''When you're serious about peace, call us.''

Bush kept the pressure on earlier this week in a letter to Shamir congratulating him on the formation of his government and saying that ''Israel's security and well-being remain an important concern to the United States,'' Fitzwater said Tuesday.

''He reiterated his strong support for the Israeli government's May 14, 1989 initiative as the most realistic way forward in the peace process,'' Fitzwater added.

He also noted that Bush had asked Shamir for his views on the peace process ''and how they would like to proceed.''

Israel has opposed the U.S. overtues to the PLO from the start and again urged termination of the talks after the May 30 incident.

The Bush administration insisted that for talks to continue, Arafat must condemn or denounce the May 30 attack and ''take steps to begin the removal of Abul Abbas from the Palestine National Executive Council.

Abbas, a member of a PLO splinter organization, has taken credit for the May 30 incident.

On Tuesday, a senior administration official said the United States is not going to turn its back on the Middle East situation despite recent frustrations in getting the peace process on track again.

''Clearly our patience is not unlimited on this,'' he added.

''The United States is not going to turn its back on the Middle East situation,'' he told reporters. ''We have a lot of friends out there ... Israel and the Arab states.''

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (JUNE 20) UPI - Heavy fighting between troops and Tamil rebels in northern Sri Lanka left at least 49 people dead Wednesday, including 10 villagers killed by jungle land mines while fleeing their homes, a military source said.

In New Delhi, India, former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, whose administration engineered a failed 1987 military attempt to end ethnic violence in Sri Lanka, said Wednesday the fighting in the island nation threatened India's security interests.

Gandhi made his remarks in a letter to Indian Prime Minister V.P. Singh.

''Sri Lankan Tamils are facing annihilation and peace in the region may soon be threatened,'' Gandhi said in the letter, which accused the present government of ''not coming out with a clear-cut policy'' for the crisis.

In one of the worst incidents in Sri Lanka Wednesday, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam used grenade launchers and machine guns to attack a Sinhalese village near Kondaichchi, about 120 miles north of Colombo.

About 200 terrified families fled their homes to seek shelter in the surrounding jungle, but a number of villagers triggered land mines that had been planted in the area.

At least 10 people were killed in the blasts and an undetermined number were injured, the source said.

About the same time, the Tigers mounted a similar attack on a nearby military camp to prevent soldiers from coming to the aid of the villagers, the source said. At least two soldiers were killed and 13 others were wounded in the attack, the source said.

Further north, on the Jaffna Peninsula, the government's main naval installation at Karainagar came under rebel attack but troops killed four guerrillas during the encounter, the source said.

Rebels also fired heavy mortars at an army base at Palali, about 10 miles north of Jaffna, sparking fierce fighting. At least 20 rebels and four government soldiers were killed during the encounter and at least 22 soldiers wounded, the military source said.

Another encounter in the northwestern port town of Kankesanthurai left at least nine rebels dead, the source said.

Four other soldiers were injured in fighting at a nearby army fort, the source said.

Fighting between security forces and the Tigers erupted early last week and authorities say that more than 600 soldiers, police, rebels and civilians have been killed.

In a related matter, authorities in the southern Indian state of Tamil Nadu have rounded up some 600 members of six Tamil militant groups - including a number of Tigers - for questioning in connection with the killings of 16 people in the state's capitol of Madras Tuesday night.

Gunmen entered the headquarters of the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front and opened fire with automatic weapons, killing 15 members of the Tamil militant group and one bystander. Thirteen other members of the Front and two bystanders were wounded.

Tamil rebels believe a separate Tamil nation is necessary because of years of alleged discrimination by the majority Buddhist Sinhalese, who control the Colombo goverment.

LONDON (JUNE 20) UPI - A conference on saving the ozone opened Wednesday with pledges that the 75 nations attending will finalize a crucial strategy to end production of man-made chemicals eroding the natural shield that protects life on Earth.

Coinciding with the start of the 10-day meeting was the release of an analysis by British scientists who detected an even higher rate of ozone depletion due to the emissions of halons and chlorofluorocarbons, mostly used in aerosols and refrigerators.

The Stratospheric Ozone Review Group assessed ozone loss above Antarctica in 1989 to be the same as in 1987, belying optimistic assessments based on reports in 1988 that showed the ozone had thickened.

The group found a long-term decline of winter ozone levels in the Northern Hemisphere and potential for substantial Arctic ozone loss.

The conference is attended by the 59 signatory nations of the 1987 Montreal protocol on ozone depletion and 16 non-signatory countries. It opened with pledges to acheive solid results during weeklong group talks, which will be followed by a three-day climactic gathering of environment ministers.

''We are coming now to the most crucial part of the negotiations,'' said chairman Mostafa Tolba, the executive director of the U.N. Environment Program. ''What we want by next Tuesday is a completed package of all the ambitious goals of the (Montreal) protocol.''

The conference is expected to result in a pledge to phase out CFCs by the year 2000, a tighter timetable than that initially envisioned at Montreal because of mounting evidence of ozone destruction.

Halons and CFCs are the main ingredients gradually destroying the ozone layer, a natural belt of gas between 15 to 20 miles above Earth that blocks harmful radiation. Scientists believe a 1 percent reduction in ozone causes a 4 percent increase in cases of skin cancer.

The ozone issue has been unique in inspiring broad consensus among nations and observers believe a successful solution of the problem could serve as a template for international cooperation on the larger problem of global warming.

''No country, no region, no group will ever be capable of solving any of these problems,'' Tolba said. ''If failure is not an option, success is an imperative.''

But the delegates must negotiate a number of issues involving an end to CFC production, including a way to ensure that money donated is properly used, for example, in retooling a Soviet refrigerator factory.

New technology using alternative ozone-friendly chemicals is expensive, and the logistical problems of phasing out CFCs are also linked to broader issues such as whether developed nations are obligated to assist the Third World.

Washington last week ended its solitary stance that the ozone fund should be financed by money diverted from other development programs, and accepted that the ozone problem required a separate cash injection.

Richard Smith, the leader of the U.S. delegation, predicted the meeting would result in the creation of a fund of at least $120 million, which could start to be distributed within the year.

''We have an agreement in principle, but we need some assurances as to how the money will be spent,'' Smith said. ''We have some difficult work ahead but I think we can achieve a successful result.''

The conference also must solve issues that have prevented India and China from signing the protocol.

The world's two most populous nations are slated in coming years to become large CFC producers, but do not want to be subject to a ban on chemicals that helped industrialized nations to develop.

Mahesh Prasad, the leader of the Indian delegation, said New Delhi also wanted the ozone fund to be backed by concrete obligations that money would be spent for at least 10 years, lest Indian companies start phasing out CFC facilities and then find there is no money to replace the factories.

''If (the West) asks us not to use these chemicals, then they must give us the new technology on a non-restrictive, non-commercial basis,'' he said. ''If our concerns are met, then I can go back and say to my government that the time is propitious.''

(JUNE 20) UPI - U-S and Japanese officials say nine sailors were injured today when two explosions rocked the U-S Aircraft carrier Midway. The ship was conducting routine flight operations about 125 miles northeast of Tokyo in the Pacific Ocean at the time of the blast. The explosions ripped through a catapult on the Midway's deck.

Soviet President Gorbachev told conservative critics today the Soviet Communist Party soon may have a new leader. Gorbachev's comments indicate the Soviet leader may resign his post as the party leader. Even if he does resign, he would retain the powerful post as president of the Soviet Union.

Communists from the Soviet republic of Russia are moving toward forming their own branch of the communist party, dissatisfied with President Gorbachev's reform policies. Delegates to a conference of Russian communists yesterday called for Gorbachev's resignation as party leader.

The Big Apple welcomes Nelson Mandela today with the full fanfare of a ticker-tape parade. During his stay in New York, the South African black leader will attend a rally at Yankee stadium and address the United Nations. Next week, Mandela will meet with President Bush and members of Congress in Washington.

Officials say security precautions for Mandela's visit to the United States will be the largest effort ever undertaken by the U-S State Department. A police spokesman in New York says Mandela's visit will be treated like a presidential visit with 12-thousand officers deployed around the city and in the air.

(JUNE 20) UPI - Ion Iliescu was inaugurated today as Romania's president. The ceremony was boycotted by the United States to protest the government's suppression of anti-government demonstrations. The National Transportation Safety Board opens hearings today into the crash of an Avianca Airlines jetliner that killed 73 people in January. F-A-A released tapes yesterday showing that despite being very low on fuel the flight crew did NOT ask controllers at New York's Kennedy Airport for landing priority.

The drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry resumes this morning. Charles Lewis, a convicted drug dealer, is expected to testify once again. Yesterday, Lewis testified he first did drugs with Barry during a visit to the Virgin Islands in 1986 and again in March 1988 and then in Washington in December 1988.

The sixth International Conference on AIDS opens in San Francisco and protesters opposing U-S policy toward the virus are planning huge rallies to coincide with the meeting. Conference organizers say they welcome the protesters but hope they don't interrupt the meeting.

Authorities in Michigan City, Indiana, say about 150 people took to the streets last night for the second consecutive night. The group fired shots at police and threw rocks and bottles at passing cars. Officials link the unrest to a hit-and-run accident that left a teen-ager dead. Police say there were some minor injuries among the rioters.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - The first of a series of sales of antiquities and Greek and Roman coins from the collections of Texas' Hunt brothers brought $20 million at an auction Tuesday, 63 percent above the pre-sale estimate.

The auction at Sotheby's gallery sold 100 percent, a phenomenon in a season when many fine arts sales failed to find buyers for 30 percent to 70 percent of the lots offered. Sotheby's experts had put a high estimate of $12.2 million on the 164 Hunt lots, including Greek vases, classic bronzes and Greek and Roman coins.

''It was a landmark sale, a world auction record for any sale of antiquities,'' said Diana Levitt, a Sotheby spokesman. ''To sell 100 percent is not only unusual but almost unheard of for any auction, any day.''

The collections were consigned by Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt of Dallas, one-time billionaires whose fortunes fell when they tried to corner the world silver market in 1979-80. They are among personal assets to be sold by federal order within six years to pay back taxes and recompense creditors.

Breaking the auction record for any Greek vase was a 5th century B.C. two-handled bowl for mixing wine and water, its red figure decoration signed by Euphronios, one of the greatest of Greek vase painters. It was the first work by Euphronios to be sold at auction in this century.

The vase, which was expected to bring at least $600,000, was purchased by an unidentified European dealer for $1.76 million, breaking the record of $493,240 paid for a neck amphora sold in London in 1980. Euphronios's painting portrays Hercules slaying Kyknos as Athena watches.

Another work by Euphronios, a stemmed, two-handled drinking cup depicting the death of the hero Sarpedon on the battlefield of Troy, was sold for $742,500 to a European dealer.

Top price for a coin was $572,000 paid by an anonymous bidder for a Greek silver coin minted in Agrigentum, Sicily, in 410 B.C., showing Helios driving a four-horse chariot on one side and two eagles and a dead hare on the reverse. It carried a pre-sale evaluation of $350,000.

Another anonymous bidder paid $528,000 for a silver coin minted in Athens in 465 B.C. with the head of Athena on one side and the owl of wisdom on the reverse.

Other top prices in the sale were $577,500 paid by New York's Merrin Gallery for a Roman bronze bust of a man from the reign of Caesar Augustus $539,000 paid by a Japanese dealer of a 3-foot 2nd century A.D. bronze figure of a youth, and $517,000 paid by Merrin for a small 6th century B.C. Etruscan bronze horse figurine.

Two more sales of Nelson Hunt's Greek and Roman coins on Thursday and Friday will complete the first round of Hunt sales, which are expected to continue at Sotheby's over the period of a year.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - Prices of RJR Nabisco Inc.'s junk bonds surged Wednesday on reports of a planned buyback of the issues, which would allow the company to avoid resetting the bonds at costly yields next year.

A spokesman for Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., which took the food and tobacco giant private in a record $24.9 billion leveraged buyout last year declined to comment on an article in the Wall Street Journal detailing a $5.3 billion refinancing effort that includes retiring two poorly performing bonds.

The prospect of a buyback, however, sent RJR Nabisco's 14.07 percent convertible reset debentures up seven points to nearly 98 cents on the dollar and its 14.07 percent reset exchange debentures up about six points to 82 cents on the dollar in morning trading.

The notes, which traded earlier this year at prices of about 60 cents on the dollar, must be reset by next April. If prices remain depressed, the company faces the prospect of fixing the interest rate on these notes at yields as high as 20 percent.

A buyback - part of a larger refinancing effort that would drastically reshape the company's balance sheet - would allow RJR Nabisco to sidestep the reset problem, which is threatening to take a big bite from the company's cash flow.

The plan aims to retire more than $4 billion of the $6 billion in low-rated junk bonds used to help finance the RJR Nabisco buyout, the Wall Street Journal said.

According to the newspaper, RJR Nabisco intends to borrow $2.25 billion from banks, raise $1.5 billion through a preferred stock sale and use a $1.5 billion equity infusion from a buyout fund controlled by KKR for the refinancing.

Analysts said the run up in the bond prices may force RJR to repurchase the issues on the open market, rather than make a tender offer at a premium to the market price, since few investors would be tempted to tender their holdings if the bonds are trading near their face value.

Prices of the issues began moving ahead last week when investors learned that KKR planned to inject $1.7 billion into the food and tobacco giant in an effort to prop up the company's junk bonds.

Since the buyout, RJR Nabisco has divested $5.5 billion in assets to help pay down the monstrous debt associated with the transaction, and has shown healthy cash flow.

A buyback of the KKR issues, considered a bellwether of high-yield, high-risk paper, would be good news for the junk-bond market, analysts said. "It will have an upward effect overall," said Joan Greenburg, a junk bond specialist with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "When you take anybody out of a security, then they have to reinvest their cash."

A restructuring of a $25 billion deal may help other smaller, leveraged buyout bonds as well. "People will see there is a chance to refinance without having to go into Chapter 11 bankruptcy," said Lonnie Schaffer, a vice president of capital markets at First Albany Corp.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 20) UPI - Officials said Wednesday that Palestinian guerrillas whose speedboat raid last month was thwarted by Israeli forces also had planned to attack the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv.

The incident brought renewed calls from Israel for the United States to break off its dialogue with the PLO. The United States has called on the PLO to denounce the attack and expel Mohammed Zaidan Abbas, who heads the faction.

''After an interrogation of the terrorists, it is undoubtably clear that one of the targets of the PLO terrorists who were sent by Abul Abbas was the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv,'' Police Minister Roni Milo told the Israeli parliament, the Knesset, during a debate on the U.S. dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

''What more has to happen to cut the link between the United States and the PLO?'' he said.

On May 30, Israeli forces killed four guerrillas and captured 12 others from the PLO faction, the Palestine Liberation Front, who attempted to attack the Israeli coast. The heavily-armed guerrillas did not open fire and no Israelis were wounded.

The U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv is a few hundred yards from the shore.

PLO officials have said they had no advance knowledge of the attack and condemned terrorism against civilians, but stopped short of denouncing Abbas.

''The Israeli government believes that the U.S.-PLO dialogue represents a serious obstacle to progress in the peace process,'' Milo said.

However, several left-wing Israeli politicians rejected the newly installed right-wing government's position.

''We are calling on the government in the United States not to cut ties with the PLO and not to suspend the dialogue with it because this is the last thread, as slack as it is, for dialogue with the Palestinians,'' said

Yosi Sarid, of the Citizens Rights Movement.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - South African black leader Nelson Mandela's three-day visit to the Big Apple, opening his tour of the United States, promises to be a love fest.

The anti-apartheid hero's 12-day, eight-city tour of the United States, which began late Wednesday morning, was to include a traditional ticker-tape parade later in the day through the streets of America's largest and most racially diverse city.

This melting-pot metropolis has led the way in imposing sanctions against corporations that do business with the white-minority South African government.

The city's pension fund was the nation's first to divest itself of securities in companies that do business in racially repressive South Africa.

So the silver-haired, 71-year-old Mandela, released in February after 27 years in prison, will be preaching to the choir when he urges New Yorkers to keep economic sanctions and other pressure for change on Pretoria.

The Mandela motorcade was to wind its way through a predominantly black neighborhood in Brooklyn on its way the ticker-tape parade, but a speech at a black high school was canceled at the last moment.

Hundreds of cheering people, chanting, ''Freedom, freedom, freedom,'' gathered around Boys and Girls High School in the predominantly black Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood to await the arrival of Mandela's motorcade.

Trenton Mitchell, director of the Head Start program directly across Fulton Street from the high school, said, ''We have the same problems in this coutnry as they have in South Africa.

''There's no law that mandates that we have to stay in these neighborhoods but try and get out,'' he said. ''They took the shackles off of us, but put an economic ceiling over our heads. We're still in slavery.''

James White, 78, a retired longshoreman, said, ''I have the greatest respect for Mr. Mandela.

''There are not many people who would have stayed in jail as long as he did if they didn't have to,'' he said. ''I put him right up there next to

Martin Luther King. But I said next to him . I wouldn't put anyone over Martin Luther King.''

Victor Crosby, hawking $10 T-shirts with pictures of Mandela, said, ''We may never see this man again.''

For many black Americans, Mandela is a hero of the stature of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., martyred in 1968 in this nation's own struggle for civil rights.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference founded by King, has said Mandela's ''powerful dignity reminds you of Dr. King.''

A veritable army of 12,000 police mobilized to protect Mandela from the moment Wednesday when he stepped off his plane at Kennedy Airport onto a red carpet. Police officials promised him the same security given visiting presidents and popes.

He was to ride during the ticker-tape parade through the canyoned streets of lower Manhattan in a specially designed vehicle. Police have dubbed it the ''Mandela Mobile,'' a flatbed truck with a bulletproof glass-enclosed area large enough for Mandela to stand while accompanied by four aides.

The whirlwind schedule includes rallies in Harlem and at Yankee Stadium in the Bronx and an address at the United Nations. It is so packed that organizers worried it might be too demanding for Mandela, who will be 72 next month and is in uncertain health.

The U.S. visit comes at the end of a six-week, 13-country swing to persuade the world not to reward South Africa too early for easing up on apartheid.

Organizers of the visit, who have been flooded with requests for appearances by the de facto leader of the African National Congress, have worked out a schedule that gives him an opportunity to meet with city leaders and to speak to crowds in all parts of town.

Ethnic tensions flared in the weeks before the visit. Jewish leaders had threatened to demonstrate against Mandela because of his support for the Palestinian Liberation Organization, then backed off after meeting with him in Geneva and after Mayor David Dinkins asked them not to disrupt the visit.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (JUNE 20) UPI - Secessionist violence in the Kashmir Valley left at least 12 people dead Wednesday as government and military officials gathered in the state capital to discuss a rebel rocket attack that has escalated conflict in the region.

Police and hospital sources said six civilians and six members of the Central Reserve Police Force were killed in scattered incidents across northern Jammu and Kashmir state, including two policemen slain by militants as they bathed in a stream.

In Baramulla, 30 miles northwest of Srinagar, paramilitary police apparently mistaking a sonic boom for an attack opened fire on a group of civilians, killing a shopkeeper and wounding five other people, police sources said.

In Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, 400 miles north of New Delhi, Moslem militants hurled a hand grenade at a paramilitary patrol, killing two troopers. The rest of the patrol opened fire in the busy area, killing two civilians and wounding three others, police and witnesses said.

Government and military officials gathered in Srinagar Wednesday to discuss a Moslem rebel rocket attack the previous day on two hotels occupied by the paramilitary forces.

The attack has raised concerns about the safety of government facilities and has forced state authorities to review security arrangements in the region, a government source said.

''We are afraid that Governor's House (the state executive mansion) and other installations like the television center and radio stations could be made targets any time now,'' said the highly placed source, who asked not to be identified.

The source said the Jammu and Kashmir state government was considering restructuring the security network in the valley. Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed arrived in Srinagar Wednesday night to discuss the attack with senior government and military leaders.

The developments came a day after Kashmiri Moslem rebels aboard a boat in Lake Dal fired three rockets at two waterfront hotels being used as a barracks for paramilitary police. At least six policemen were killed and nine others wounded in the attack.

It was the first time the rebels had used rockets against security forces since the start of their 2-year-old struggle for independence from India. The secessionist movement flared into a popular uprising following clashes in mid-January.

Kashmiri Moslems say they want a separate state because of alleged denial of equal access to government service jobs, educational opportunities and economic development aid by the Hindu-dominated central government in New Delhi.

The rocket attack Tuesday severely damaged the upper floor of the Boulevard Hotel, a four-story wooden structure on the main Boulevard Road that curves around Lake Dal. The concrete face of the nearby Duke Hotel, also a target of rocket fire, did not appear to be damaged.

A source from the Hizb ul Mujahideen, one of the main rebel groups fighting for independence and an ally of the organization that fired the rockets, said the purpose of the attack was to force the paramilitary forces to withdraw from the hotels.

He said the militants wanted to drive the security forces out of the hotels and into a centralized base elsewhere. Then, he said, ''We are going to hit them in a much bigger way.

Authorities have detained more than 30 people for questioning in connection with the attack.

UNITED NATIONS (JUNE 20) UPI - Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar proposed Wednesday to set up a large U.N. peace force to monitor a cease-fire between Morocco and the Polisario rebel group and to supervise a popular referendum in Western Sahara.

He asked the U.N. Security Council to approve his plan to create the U.N. Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara. The cease-fire to end the 13-year-old conflict would take place 14 weeks after approval of the plan.

The 15-nation council is expected to meet later this week to discuss the proposal.

Perez de Cuellar said the peace force will be large and expensive, but he was unable yet to say how many U.N. troops would be needed. He said a technical team will visit Morocco soon to determine the size and cost of the force and other administrative matters.

The U.N. leader said his plan for the settlement of the conflict in Western Sahara will provide an ''effective means'' for holding the referendum and allow people in the region to choose their future without ''military or administrative constraints.''

Western Sahara was occupied by Spain for 54 years until 1976. Morocco and Mauritania immediately claimed sovereignty over the region, but Mauritania renounced its claim in the face of a war with Morocco.

Fighting broke out in the meantime between Moroccan troops and local insurgents, the Polisario Front, which was backed by Algeria. Perez de Cuellar had been mediating an end to the conflict with the backing of the Organization of African Unity.

The plan called for Morocco and the Polisario to withdraw their troops and confine them to specific areas before a referendum to determine the fate of the region.

(JUNE 20) UPI - The Soviet news agency Tass says delegates to a conference of Russian communists today decided to form their own branch of the Communist Party. The step toward forming a Russian Republic Communist Party may prove a serious conservative challenge to Soviet President Gorbachev. Tass says a formal vote is yet to be taken on creating the party.

Gorbachev addressed his conservative critics in the party today... saying it may have a new leader soon. The 28th Soviet Communist Party Congress meets next month to decide its future. Even if Gorbachev resigns as general secretary, he would maintain his position as president of the Soviet Union, a new and more powerful post created in March.

Czechoslovakian President Havel is expected to ask Premier Marian Calfa to stay on and form a government. Should Calfa accept Havel's offer... the ex-communist would have the task of selecting Cabinet members and a devising general program to present to the parliament in early July. Havel and Calfa met a week ago to discuss whether he would accept the post.

The National Weather Service says a tornado touched down in Nickerson, Kansas, last night... and more funnel clouds were spotted in the south-central part of Kansas and extreme eastern Colorado. CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 20) UPI - A Syrian ambassador called Israel's invitation to Syrian hard-line leader Hafez Assad to hold peace talks a joke and accused the Jewish state of trying to sidestep U.S. pressure, news reports said Wednesday.

''The invitation to Hafez Assad to visit Israel is a form of nonsense and an example of the maneuvers (Israeli Premier Yitzhak) Shamir is well known for,'' Cairo Radio quoted Syrian Ambassador Ahmed Essah in Tunis as saying.

Essah's remarks were published in Wednesday's edition of the Tunisian daily Al Sehafah.

Shamir issued the invitation to Assad last week, shortly after Secretary of State James Baker gave out the White House telephone number and told Israel to call when it was serious about peace.

The United States had pressured Israel to start a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization but the peace initiative fell through when a PLO faction took responsiblity for a thwarted sea attack on two Tel Aviv beaches May 30.

Israel pointed to the aborted raid as evidence the PLO had not renounced terrorism and the White House officially broke off talks with the PLO Wednesday when PLO leader Yasser Arafat refused to repudiate the raid in strong terms.

Former President Jimmy Carter, during a swing through the Middle East in March, said Assad wanted to talk with Israel about the Israeli-annexed Golan Heights, but Jerusalem at the time rejected the offer.

Although the Soviets have withdrawn some of its support for Syria, Assad remains a key power-broker in the Middle East.

Assad boycotted an Arab summit earlier this month because it was held in Baghdad, the capital of his arch ideological foe Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein. But Assad last year restored diplomatic relations with Egypt, has offered to cooperate with Iraq in case of war with Israel, and has moved toward improving its strained ties with the United States and the PLO.

Also Wednesday, an Islamic fundamentalist leader in Jordan called on Arafat to abandon a peaceful approach in the Mideast and wage an armed struggle against Israel.

Sheikh Sada Bayoud Tamimi, the leader of the Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, said at a news conference ''thank God the Jews have rejected peace, so that the end for the Jews will come through non-peaceful means.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - Richard Darman, President Bush's budget director, planned to present a new deficit cutting plan to White House and congressional budget negotiators Wednesday, but a key Democrat voiced suspicion of the proposal even before it was offered.

"I think it will be less than a full-blown plan but he will make some sort of a proposal," Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said of the new Darman plan. "He's not going to show a tax number (or) a defense number. I think he's going to sort of sketch out the dimensions."

Asked if Darman's plan - a $45 billion to $50 billion package reportedly heavy on cuts in domestic and entitlement programs such as Medicare and agriculture but light on defense cuts - would satisfy Democrats, Frenzel said, "No, but on the other hand I doubt they'll walk out either."

But Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said that if Darman did present a plan that was top-heavy on domestic and entitlement cuts, as reported, he could not support it. "It's absolutely unacceptable " Bentsen said. "It would be very disruptive."

House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said the Darman plan is "a non-starter legislatively but at least it might kick off the negotiations."

"I think that's going to face both Republican and Democratic opposition," Panetta said of the Darman plan. "It'll start the discussion and that's what we need to do right now."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee and a participant in the bipartisan budget summit, also confirmed that Darman would offer a plan later in the day.

Asked about his reported plan as he entered the talks Wednesday, Darman was coy. "I assume that there'll be many proposals and that we will have one and that others presumably will have some and that ours won't be our first and it won't be our last," Darman said.

After five weeks of preliminery talks, budget negotiators were ready to begin real bargaining after first reviewing the latest Congressional Budget Office deficit estimates for fiscal year 1991, which begins Oct. 1.

The CBO projected the deficit will be $162 billion next year if the huge cost of bailing out failed savings and loans is removed from deficit calculations. In mid-May, the CBO projected a deficit of $149 billion to $159 billion excluding S&L bailout costs, so the new estimate is higher. With S&L bailout costs included, the CBO said, the fiscal 1991 deficit would jump by $70 billion to $232 billion.

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law, Congress must reduce the deficit to $64 billion in fiscal 1991 or face steep, automatic, across-the-board spending cuts split evenly between defense and domestic spending.

A Republican source indicated Darman will offer a deficit reduction package containing about $17 billion in savings from entitlements, such as Medicare and farm programs. That would be about $5 billion more that the entitlement reductions proposed by Bush when he submitted his budget in January.

The plan also will include about $3.5 billion in domestic spending cuts as well as a defense cut slightly larger than the $3.2 billion Bush proposed in January, the GOP source said. But Darman will offer no new revenue or tax proposals beyond the roughly $20 billion in revenues Bush proposed last January, the source said.

Democratic congressional leaders have repeatedly demanded that Bush be the first to outline his proposals for cutting the deficit since the president was the one who requested the budget summit with Congress. Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said the plan Darman will offer "just meets the test - the Democratic test" for a new proposal.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The House voted Wednesday to override President Bush's veto of a bill that would lift a half-century ban on partisan political activity by federal employees.

The House re-passed the bill on a 327-93 vote and sent it to the Senate where supporters also were trying to muster the two-thirds vote necessary to override the president's veto. The Senate, which originally passed the bill on a 67-30 vote, was scheduled to take up the veto Thursday.

The bill would allow some 3 million federal workers to take part in nearly all political activities, except running for public office on a partisan ticket.

Bush vetoed the bill Friday, saying the 1939 law was intended ''to protect federal employees from political pressure and preserve the impartial, evenhanded conduct of government business.''

Lifting the restrictions on partisan political activity ''would inevitably lead to repoliticizing the federal work force,'' Bush's veto message said.

Bush's disapproval of the Hatch Act bill was his 12th veto and Congress so far has been unable to override any of them. A 13th veto is expected shortly when he sends back the recently passed family medical leave bill.

The Hatch Act was passed by Congress in 1939 in response to numerous scandals involving political patronage and efforts to solicit campaign contributions from federal workers.

In recent years, critics have argued the law has become outdated by the protections contained in the expanded civil service system and they have tried several times, without success, to amend the law. President Gerald Ford vetoed a 1976 bill that would have eased the restrictions.

The bill would allow federal employees, on their own time, to take part in political activities, such as working in campaigns or voter registration drives, or serving as delegates to nominating conventions. They would be allowed to hold office in a political party, but could not run in a partisan election for public office.

The bill would prohibit federal employees from using their official positions to influence an election outcome, and would restrict their fund-raising efforts by allowing workers to solicit contributions only from members of their own unions, and not from workers in other government agencies or from the general public.

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, told the House Bush's veto was based on ''well-intentioned but misguided advice from his inner council.''

Ford said the proposed change in the Hatch Act has ''built-in safeguards to protect the federal work force from becoming politically pliable. Employes will still get and hold their jobs on merit, not on connections and loyalty litmus tests.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board, in its regular "beige book" review of the domestic economy, Wednesday predicted more slow growth in the months ahead and little change in the moderate inflation rate. The Fed also reported there was little evidence of a widespread credit crunch.

"Reports on the behavior of consumption are mixed, and construction is indicated to be softening further," the Fed said. "Capital goods industries are, on balance, pointing toward growth."

"Manufacturing is expected to strengthen" in some regions, the Fed indicated in the "beige book" report, which is issued eight times a year. The nationwide survey also said there has been "little change in the underlying inflation rate," which has been hovering around four and five percent.

Retail sales have slowed and are expected to remain down in the short term but "ample rainfall" has improved the prospects for a good harvest this year in drought-stricken parts of the country, the Fed said.

"The slow-growth economy is accompanied by an easing in demand for credit " the report said. "Real estate loans, consumer loans, and business loans are still growing, but at reduced rates in recent months.

"Lenders are reported to have tightened standards especially for real estate loans, but there is still little information that suggests credit restraint is spreading to other markets," the Fed said. By region:

Boston - Weak economic activity. Employment losses expected to continue through end of 1990. No significant job growth expected until 1992. Some retailers report modest improvment in sales.

New York - Retail sales sluugish. Homebuilders report shortage of credit becoming major problem. Manhattan office vacancy rates highest in two decades. Regional employment below national average.

Philadelphia - Manufacturing ready to level off after year-long decline. Bank lending fairly healthy. Real estate business sluggish; construction dropping.

Cleveland - More optimism reported among businesses. Higher motor vehicle output. Larger capital spending increases by manufacturers. Export growth expected to continue.

Richmond - Manufacturing softened somewhat. Retail sales little changed. Tourism mixed. Exports rose at seaports; imports little changed. On farms, planting ahead of schedule.

Atlanta - More slow growth. Weakened construction sector sees no quick relief. Banks report weak loan growth. Shortage of skilled workers increasing.

Chicago - Construction off but outperforming most of nation. Retail sales weakening. Manufacturing mixed. Auto industry reported improvement. Weather slowed planting, damaged crops.

St. Louis - Slow growth, no decline expected. Commercial banks have tightened loan standards to small and mid-sized businesses. Excessive rainfall damaged crops, delayed planting.

Minneapolis - Economy moderately good. Employment growth low. Retail sales off. New car sales very slow. Tourism industry expecting good summer. Mining, forest products strong.

Kansas City - Modest growth. Spring rains have apparently ended the region's two-year drought. Harvest underway. New car sales mixed. Oil and gas drilling stable, stronger than year ago.

Dallas - Economy growing slowly. Oil and gas drillers optimistic. Agricultural prices down but remain well above year earlier.

San Francisco - Economy healthy. Real estate healthy. Wage and price increases averaging 4 and 5 percent. Manufacturing mixed. Farming conditions satisfactory.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration approved a drug used to worm animals Wednesday as part of a new treatment for advanced cases of colon cancer, the No. 2 killer cancer in the United States.

Levamisole, a drug used by veterinarians to kill intestinal parasites, was approved for use with the already approved drug fluorouracil for patients whose cancer has spread to their lymphnodes - known as Dukes' C colon cancer.

''The combination therapy is a promising advance in the treatment of certain patients with colon cancer,'' said Dr. Greg Burke of the FDA's division of oncology and pulmonary drug products.

Dr. Michael Friedman of the National Cancer Institute said the development of the drug combination is ''an important advance'' because it may reduce the risk of relapse and death in some patients.

About 21,000 of the 110,000 Americans diagnosed each year with colon cancer have Dukes' C or state III colon cancer. Such patients have had a five-year survival rate after surgery of only about 40 percent.

Colon cancer overall kills more than 53,000 Americans each year, making it second only to lung cancer as the leading cause of cancer death in the United States.

Scientists do not yet understand what makes the levamisole and fluorouracil combination effective. But in two large government studies, giving patients the drugs after surgery cut the death rate for patients with Dukes' C colon cancer by about one-third and the recurrence rate by about 40 percent.

In the therapy, levamisole tablets are given orally for three consecutive days every other week and fluorouracil is given intravenously once a week. The treatment is continued for a year.

The most common side effects of the treatment are nausea, occasional vomiting, headache, diarrhea, sores in the mouth and depression of blood count.

Agranulocytosis, a blood disorder, has also been associated with the treatment and caused one death among the more than 1,000 patients who received the combination in the NCI trials. Because of this, patients must have regular blood tests.

Fluorouracil previously has been approved to treat cancer of the colon, rectum, breast, stomach and pancreas. Levamisole has been used to treat intestinal worms in domestic animals and, until the new approval, was commercially available in the United States only for veterinary use.

The drug, which is manufactured by Janssen Research Foundation of Piscataway, N.J., and will be marketed under the trade name Ergamisol, began to be studied as a cancer treatment after scientists observed changes in animals treated for parasites.

Levamisole has been available since May 1989 under an FDA program that releases promising but experimental drugs to desperate patients and through a National Cancer Institute program. More than 4,000 patients with Dukes' C colon cancer have received the combination treatment under these programs since May 1989.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - House Republicans protested the Democratic leadership's decision Wednesday to shortcut normal procedure and schedule a vote Thursday on a proposed constitutional amendment to protect the U.S. flag.

The two sides escalated their accusations that the issue is being used for political advantage.

Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., an opponent of the amendment, said the GOP is less interested in protecting the flag than in gaining an election campaign issue.

Foley said the outcome of the Thursday vote ''remains a real question.'' Supporters of the proposed amendment need a two-thirds majority to pass it and send it to the Senate.

The House Judiciary Committee voted Tuesday to send the amendment to the full House. Under normal procedures, a bill would not come up for at least three days, but the Democratic leadership told the House Rules Committee to clear the amendment for consideration Thursday.

Republicans said the move was intended to defuse lobbying efforts in support of the amendment.

''What you are doing deliberately is gagging 10 million veterans throughout this nation from being able to mobilize and contact members of this House individually,'' said Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y.

Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., objected to ''bringing this matter up prematurely and waiving rules of the House that are designed to give due deliberation to imporant measures.'' He said the vote should be put off until next week.

At his daily news conference, Foley said he was ''puzzled'' by the GOP protests. ''This bill has been before the Congress for over a year. It has been debated and discussed as much as any other'' measure.

Foley cited comments by top Republican strategists about how the flag vote can be used as an election issue. ''All this talk about being concerned about the flag, they are concerned, apparently, about the political issue and the political opportunities that they think this presents.''

He accused the GOP of ''crass political opportunism, a kind of wringing their hands gleefully and saying, 'This is where we are going to clean up.'''

Foley said the public will understand the position of those who oppose the amendment. The opponents, who argue that the Bill of Rights should not be changed merely to deal with flag burning, ''will be historically vindicated,'' the speaker said.

In the Senate, the latest ''whip'' count by assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston showed 54 senators supporting the amendment, 29 ''solidly'' opposed and 17 undecided. The only change from Friday was a pickup of five votes by the opposition.

In brief Senate speeches, Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., spoke out against the constitutional amendment.

Bradley said, ''I trust more the wisdom of the Founding Fathers in devising a system that guarantees liberty than I trust the posturing of today's politicians seeking to gain political advantage.

''On one level, the debate about the flag amendment is not about the nature and limits of American symbols and American freedom,'' Bradley said. ''It is pure politics.''

Anticipating negative political ads aimed at those who voted against the amendment, Bradley called such tactics ''sleazy politics'' and added: ''A government or a politician who gains power by the slur will find little patience from the people and none from the opposite party when times get tough.''

The amendment was drafted in response to last week's 5-4 Supreme Court ruling holding that flag burning is constitutionally protected free speech. The court overturned a law Congress passed last year in an attempt to bar desecration of the flag.

The amendment would give Congress and the states the power to prohibit the physical descration of the flag.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 20) UPI - West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Secretary of State James Baker will meet in East Berlin Thursday in advance of a ministerial session of the six-nation German unification negotiations, a ministry official said Wednesday.

A foreign ministry spokesman said Genscher will brief his U.S. counterpart on recent bilateral talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Shevardnadze will also be present at Friday's conference - the second meeting of the foreign ministers involved in the negotiations, known as two-plus-four because of the participation of the two Germanys and the four World War II victors - Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United States.

The conference is scheduled to focus on the ''political-military'' angle of unification, a key issue in view of continuing disagreement between the Western powers and the Soviet Union over the proposed military affiliation of a united Germany.

The two German states favor the Western concept under which Germany would be a member of NATO.

The Soviet Union has rejected the proposal with varying degrees of emphasis, and made counter-suggestions which were in turn dismissed by the Western powers. One of the Soviet proposals was for Germany to be a member of both NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

The issue was one of the main topics at the meetings between Genscher and Shevardnadze in the Soviet city of Brest, June 11 and in the West German city of Muenster one week later.

The two foreign ministers did not reach agreement on the question of Germany's military future but a ministry spokesman said Wednesday that they had made progress.

He said Genscher ''will have plenty to tell Mr. Baker'' when the two meet in East Berlin Thursday afternoon.

But he stressed there had been no dramatic breakthrough and that none was expected at Friday's negotiations.

''We do not expect one spectacular success. Because of the complexity of the issue, it is rather a question of a series of partial successes which bring us closer to the goal,'' he said.

''The solution will not come up now. We shall see it at the end of the negotiations - in fall,'' he said.

He said he was confident outstanding issues will be resolved before the end of the year, and that they will not stand in the way of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's plan for swift unification.

Earlier this week Kohl said that ''1990 will be the year of German unity''. He said he expected all-German elections will be held in December this year.

LONDON (JUNE 20) UPI - Police sealed off Stonehenge Wednesday to try to stop sun-worshipers and nomads from reaching the ancient stones in an annual summer solstice rite that deteriorated into rioting in 1988.

''We do not anticipate any trouble,'' said Wiltshire Police Sgt. Chris Hunt. ''They have so far made no move to approach the stones and the police do not expect to have any trouble keeping an eye on them.

He said the numbers of people seeking to approach the Stone Age relic on the Salisbury Plain, 80 miles southwest of London, had shrunk considerably compared to last year.

Every June 21, the longest day of the year in the Northern Hemisphere, the first rays of the dawning sun shoot straight under Stonehenge's main arches - if the skies are cloudless.

Druids once conducted a solstice ceremony within the circle and some people believe the event is magical. Millions have flocked to the site over the decades.

Police were enforcing a Wiltshire Council order that prohibits processions within a 4-mile radius of Stonehenge through June 24. The edict was issued for a second year to protect the monument and prevent a repeat of violence that occurred two years ago when 5,000 people came to the site.

About 1,000 people hurling rocks, iron bars and bottles clashed with police at Stonehenge in 1988, turning the mystical dawn rite into a bloody riot under the floodlights of a police helicopter that ended with 115 arrests.

Last year, 261 people hoping to reach the ancient monument were arrested 2 miles away. About 800 police from 12 forces were deployed.

Local landowners also obtained injunctions to prevent people from camping on their land.

About 100 people were camped Grateley, 10 miles from Stonehenge, with another 100 to 200 people expected to join them for the solstice dawn.

''I must say that the police are overreaching their power this year,'' said Don Atkin, trustee of the Travellers Aid Trust. ''The gathered people will try to approach the stones.''

The Travellers Aid Trust, set up to help Britain's travellers, people who have no permanent address, called the exclusion area ''a human-rights-free zone.''

''There is no law here,'' said Willy X. ''If your hair is more than 6 inches long you will be arrested. If it isn't, you won't.''

Most travellers said they decided to avoid the risk of approaching Stonehenge and instead head to the Glastonbury festival, 40 miles away.

The Musicians Network issued a flier advertising a ''birthday suit party'' Thursday, and urging readers to ''do the Stonehenge streak.''

DETROIT (JUNE 20) UPI - When the Wayward Princess begins cruising the Detroit River and elsewhere this summer, it'll be a little like the Love Boat without clothes.

The 110-foot cruiser, featuring male and female nude dancers, is to make its maiden voyage next week, said owner Jacques Beauchamp, who has been running cruises out of Windsor, Ontario, for six years.

In his latest venture, Beauchamp plans to take the Wayward Princess out on the Detroit River and lakes Erie and St. Clair six nights a week.

''Hey, it's going to be a fun thing to do, as long as the ship remains a clean ship,'' he said.

To discourage prying eyes, the 325-capacity ship's windows will be equipped with shades so boaters can't see in. And the dancers will be separated on the vessel's two decks - women on top, men on the bottom.

Beauchamp told the Detroit News the intense competition from other cruise operators forced him to create his newest business.

''I have to do it,'' he said. ''It's either that or we're going to go out of business. We got no choice to survive.''

Beauchamp said he plans to charge a $5 cover if the ship sits at anchor and $10 when it cruises. Alcoholic beverages will be sold on the ship, he said.

Ronald Reaume, Windsor's licensing commissioner, said the ship meets all the legal critera and he had no choice but to license it, despite opposition from Windsor police.

''Personally, I'd rather not see it,'' he said. ''But we're not there to license the morality of the situation.''

Ontario laws allow nude dancing but Beauchamp's smooth sailing in Canada could turn into troubled waters if his Wayward Princess drifts into U.S. waters, where tougher obscenity laws apply.

''Heck, this is something new,'' said Detroit Police Officer Dan Smith of the Harbormaster's Section. ''But he'd probably be ticketed or arrested for indecent exposure.''

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 20) UPI - Libyan official sources claim military monitors tracked a squadron of Israeli war planes on their way to U.S. bases in southern Europe in preparation for a strike on Libya, an Abu Dhabi newspaper reported Wednesday.

''Libyan official sources said that Libya military monitors tracked a squadron of Israeli warplanes heading for U.S. bases in southern Europe,'' the daily Al Ittihad reported.

''Libya has information that Israel intends to use these warplanes in launching an air strike against Libya and the bases of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Tunis,'' Al Ittihad quoted the Libyan sources as saying.

''Libyan forces have been placed on maximum alert to repel any possible aggression by Israel against Libya,'' the newspaper said.

Israeli sources in Jerusalem denied the charges.

In a separate development, the daily quoted a high-ranking Palestinian source as saying the PLO leadership had received an urgent cable from its bureau in the Libyan capital Tripoli, warning that Israeli warplanes were tracked near Libyan airspace.

The newspaper gave no further details.

It was not immediately possible to reach Tripoli by telephone or telex from Cairo to confirm the Al Ittihad report. Libya last year restored diplomatic ties with Egypt, but has not yet opened a diplomatic mission in Cairo.

Israel accused Libya of helping organize a seaborne Palestinian guerilla raid on beaches south of Tel Aviv May 30. Four Palestinians were killed when the Israeli military thwarted the attack.

But Libyan Foreign Minister Azzouz al Talhi denied the Israeli claim during a stop-over with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi in Cairo in early June, shortly after the Arab summit in Baghdad.

On Tuesday, the Libyan news agency Jana denied reports that Gadhafi had hinted in a speech last week that he plans to build nuclear weapons. The Libyan agency said Gadhafi's remarks had been distorted.

The Washington Times recently reported that Libya was building a second chemical weapons plant with Chinese help.

U.S. administration officials said Gadhafi's claim that a fire burned down the first plant at Rabta, south of Tripoli, was probably a hoax.

Washington had hinted at the time that it would consider taking military action against the Rabta plant, situated some 40 miles south of Tripoli, which Western diplomats said Gadhafi was using to manufacture chemical weapons. Libya insists the Rabta plant was used only to manufacture pharmaceuticals.

(JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush appears ready to announce a suspension of U-S diplomatic contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Broadcast reports said Bush would stop the contacts because the P-L-O has NOT condemned an attempted beach-front invasion of Israel last month. The White House declined comment on the reports, but a spokesman advised reporters to pay attention for an expected announcement at a Bush news conference scheduled for this afternoon.

U-S military officials say one sailor is missing and 16 were injured today when a fire and two explosions hit the carrier Midway during routine flight operations off the coast of Japan. A Navy spokesman says an explosion ripped a damage control storeroom four decks below the flight deck at mid-day. A Pentagon spokesman in Washington, D-C, said the resulting fire had been contained. But the Navy said the fire was still burning.

It was Inauguaration Day for Romania's president... but the United States boycotted a ceremony for Ion Illiescu to protest a government crackdown on opposition protesters. Illiescu won the presidency last month with 85 percent of the vote in Romania's first free elections in nearly half a century. His National Salvation Front assumed power after last year's bloody revolution. But Romania again erupted in violence last week when government backers and police clashed with opposition demonstrators.

University of Georgia researchers report that students quit school at less than half the rate federal statistics indicate. WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Bush administration's efforts to crack down on fraud in the savings and loan industry has been ''anemic at best, irresponsible at worst,'' a public interest group charged Wednesday.

''The original S&L calamity is now being compounded everyday by the administration's failure to bring law and order to the nation's financial industry,'' said Michael Waldman, director of Public Citizen's Congress Watch.

The organization, founded by Ralph Nader, released a report detailing widespread fraud in the thrift industry and efforts by the administration to bring those responsible to justice.

''Unless a real crackdown begins against these buccaneer bankers, this financial crime wave will be fully subsidized by average taxpayers,'' Waldman said.

The collapse of the thrift industry is expected to cost taxpayers anywhere from $132 billion to $500 billion, making it the worst financial debacle since the Depression.

''The Bush administration's efforts to pursue and punish S&L fraud have been anemic at best, irresponsible at worst,'' said Sherry Ettleson, a Public Citizen staff attorney.

The administration, which launched an ambitious program last year to rescue the savings industry, has come under fire recently for the slowness of its efforts.

On Tuesday, the issue came to a sudden head, with the White House and Congress aggressivley trading charges as to who should take responsibility for the industry's collapse.

President Bush is scheduled to give a speech about the savings and loan industry Friday at the Justice Department. All 93 U.S. attorneys nationwide have been summoned to attend by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

The Justice Department has come under criticism for the slow pace of thrift failure prosecutions and the White House is concerned Democrats are turning the massive taxpayer bailout into a campaign issue.

The U.S. attorneys will have ''an ongoing discussion of S&L prosecutions '' Justice Department spokesman Dan Eramian said, adding they will be ''sharing information, sharing investigative techniques.''

Treasury Secretary Nicolas Brady also will attend the meeting.

The Justice Department is wrestling with a growing backlog of unaddressed thrift fraud cases. According to the Public Citizen report, the department was actively pursuing only 891 cases, out of nearly 7,000 referrals and complaints received as of February.

The FBI has said there are more than 20,000 thrift fraud and embezzlement cases that have yet to be addressed.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., introduced legislation Wednesday to step up the prosecution of thrift fraud cases and to authorize the seizure of ''ill-gotten'' assets.

Simon's proposal, which has been referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee, also would encourage ''whistle-blowers'' in the thrift industry to come forward by allowing them to share in any court awards that result from successful prosecutions.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Air Force said Wednesday it bought specially made pliers for $999.20 each, but defended the purchase as necessary to modify the aircraft engines in its F-111 fighter-bombers.

''We feel that's a fair price to be paying for this specialized tool. There's nothing else that can do the job,'' said Maj. Victor Andrijauskas of the Air Force Logistics Command at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio.

The purchase and price were first reported by Knight-Ridder news service Tuesday.

Andrijauskas said the Air Force bought four of the pliers, beginning in September 1987, at a cost of $999.20 each.

Bob Carroll, a spokesman for Pratt & Whitney, the aircraft engine manufacturer that supplied the tool to the Air Force, insisted in a phone interview from the company's West Palm Beach, Fla., headquarters that it was ''a custom-made installation tool'' and ''not a set of pliers.''

''You can't buy this at Hechingers,'' Carroll said, referring to chain of East Coast hardware stores. ''The only similarity between it and a pair of pliers is that they both meet in the middle.''

The proper name of the 9-inch tool, however, is the ''transition duct floatwall installation and removal pliers,'' the Air Force said.

Comparing the tool, which has curved handles, to normal pliers would be like ''comparing a kitchen knife to a scalpel. They're both knives - and both can be called pliers. But it would be impossible to do this job with a pair of pliers,'' Andrijauskas said.

Carroll said the Air Force came to his company when it was having problems with the insulation on its TF-30 engines, which power the F-111 warplanes. The insulation was cracking and breaking up from the heat.

Pratt & Whitney produced a ''floatwall,'' individual pieces of insulation that expand when heated and do not crack, Carroll said. But it required special retaining clips to be installed in a tight area on the TF-30 engine.

This is where the special tool came in. Something was needed that could get into the tight space to install the retaining clips.

After consulting with the Air Force, Pratt & Whitney requested bids from tool manufacturers and took the lowest one of four it received, Carroll said. The winning manufacturer, also in West Palm Beach, made the pliers for $669 each.

Carroll said Pratt & Whitney then added $330.20 to each to cover overhead and profit and sold it to the Air Force.

''The Air Force considered the cost fair and reasonable,'' Carroll said, noting that his firm provided guarantees for the product.

The tool was ''made of stainless steel and coated with nickel,'' Carroll said. ''It took a customized-type design. Only four of them were ever made.''

Carroll said the specially made tools are ''saving the Air Force and the taxpayers millions of dollars'' by helping to increase the longevity of the 20-year-old aircraft engines.

The Air Force agreed and said this purchase could not be compared to the 1985 procurement scandals where the military services were paying exorbitant prices for aircraft coffee-makers, toilet seats and hammers.

''It's not a matter of taking an off-the-shelf product,'' Andrijauskas said of the specially made pliers.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 20) UPI - East Germany's former Stalinist leader, Erich Honecker, Wednesday denied sheltering ultra left-wing extremists wanted in West Germany for a string of terrorist attacks, including assaults against U.S. military personnel.

Honecker said that he, East Germany's Communist Party and the country's former leadership had ''always sharply condemned - on political and humanitarian grounds - every form of terrorism and participated with all its power in the struggle against international terrorism.''

''I emphatically deny these publicly raised claims of support for terrorism,'' the 77-year-old Communist hard-liner said in a statement released through his attorney.

West German authorities have indicated they were considering bringing charges against Honecker following recent revelations that the former leader's secret police, the Stasi, had helped hide extremists wanted in West Germany, given them new identities and provided them with jobs and housing.

The revelations were made during a crackdown in the past two weeks on extremists living in East Germany, where police are now holding eight suspects.

They were accused in attacks ranging from the kidnapping of Italian politician Aldo Moro and assassination of West German banker Juergen Ponto both in 1977, to the 1985 killing of a U.S. soldier and bombing of a U.S. military base.

''It appears that supporting the Red Army (Faction) was a hobby of Erich Honecker and (former Stasi Chief) Erich Mielke,'' Interior Minister Peter-Michael Diestel said Tuesday.

''The current campaign is obviously aimed at spoiling the good reputation of the GDR (East Germany) as a haven of peace and detente,'' said Honecker who played a major role in the secret planning for the Aug. 13, 1961 erection of the Berlin Wall.

Since he was ousted last fall, Honecker has lived in public disgrace in a small house outside of Berlin, provided by the Lutheran Church.

Honecker, who suffers from cancer of the kidney, was hospitalized on several occasions this year and the East German authorities declined to prosecute him on charges of corruption because of his poor health.

They had earlier dropped charges of treason for lack of evidence.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Pentagon, facing the prospect of laying off enlisted personnel, endorsed the idea Wednesday of severance pay for soldiers thrown out of work as the U.S. military shrinks in the 1990s.

Four senior enlisted men told a Senate Armed Services personnel subcommittee that some sort of payment is the top priority for members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines who may lose their jobs.

There are just over 2 million men and women in U.S. uniforms and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has estimated that 2 percent annual cuts in spending over the next five years would cut the force by 425,000.

For fiscal 1991, which starts Oct. 1, the services now plan to eliminate 38,000 positions - a figure that could rise if deeper budget cuts are made in response to deficit pressures and lessening world tension.

Currently, ''separation pay'' is given to officers ordered out before reaching the 20-year point, when they become eligible to retire and draw retirement pay. The program allows a payment of 10 percent of basic pay, multiplied by years of service, up to a maximum of $30,000.

There is no program for enlisted personnel, although legislation creating one has been introduced and is expected to be added to the 1991 defense bill. That legislation suggests doubling the cap on severance pay to $60,000.

Senators and Pentagon officials indicated the payments could be made to servicemen with between five and 15 years service.

The non-commissioned officers told the subcommittee that men and women in uniform are interested first in severance pay, but they also want job counseling and planning, and access to medical insurance until they get private sector jobs.

Master Chief Petty Officer Duane Bushey, speaking of servicemen thrown out of work, said, ''At that point, they look to survive. ... They want to put meat and potatoes on the table and that's what they're looking for first.''

Bushey also said financial counseling should be provided for servicemen walking out the gate with a large check in hand.

Christopher Jehn, the Pentagon's personnel manager, who endorsed an expansion of the separation pay program to include enlisted personnel, also detailed a variety of possible aid programs. Some could be accomplished without changing the law.

They included:

-Extend medical care or providing access to medical insurance.

-Boost unemployment compensation for soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines to match the civilian level of up to 26 weeks of coverage. It is now 13 weeks.

-Provide government housing for up to 90 days to separated servicemen in hardship cases.

-Pay for a final move from a military post to the area of a serviceman's choice.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The number of farms that grow tobacco plunged dramatically during the last 35 years, and dropped 23 percent from 1982 to 1987, theAgriculture Department said Wednesday.

The department's Economic Research Service said 137,000 farms grew tobacco in 1987, compared with 179,000 in 1982 and 512,000 in 1954. North Carolina the leader producer of flue-cured tobacco, showed an 83 percent drop from 1954, going from 150,000 farms with tobacco acreage to 22,000 in 1987.

Kentucky, the No. 1 grower of burley tobacco, had a 56 percent decline. It had 136,000 farms with tobacco acreage in 1954, compared to 62,000 in 1987. "The trend to fewer but larger farms will continue," the Research Service said, with the rate of change depending on technology, changes in the tobacco program, demand for tobacco, and opportunities for farmers to find alternative crops or off-farm jobs.

Economists said the 73 percent drop since 1954 was due to legislation allowing farmers to sell their quotas and adoption of technology that reduced the amount of labor needed to grow tobacco. The number of burley producers has fallen at a slower rate than flue-cured farms, they said, because the burley industry has not been as quick to adopt labor-saving methods.

"There has been little mechanization of the burley harvest and only since the late 1970s has it been sold looseleaf in bales," the Research Service said. Economists classified 88,000 of the tobacco-producing farms as tobacco farms, meaning the crop accounted for at least 50 percent of the farm's sales.

Tobacco farms had an average of 5.2 acres of tobacco out of an average of 31 acres of cropland and a total of 117 acres in the farm. The farms accounted for 73 percent of U.S. tobacco production.

About 80 percent of the tobacco farms were located in Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina. Those three states plus Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia had 93 percent of all tobacco farms. The average age of tobacco growers was 52 years. The department listed 2,061 farms growing tobacco in Georgia, 2,519 in South Carolina, 9,750 in Tennessee and 9,750 in Virginia in 1987.

The Research Service said the decline in farm numbers between 1982 and 1987 could be attributed to consolidation of farms, mechanization, a drop in overall production, a reduction in the tobacco support price in 1986 and 1987, and a sharp increase from 1982 to 1985 in the fees collected from growers to operate the tobacco program at no cost to the government.

Tobacco production is based on acreage or poundage quotas with the federal support price intended to set a minimum price for tobacco.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - Bankers resurrected a plan to pull tycoon Donald Trump from the brink of insolvency, a bank source said Wednesday, but still had to sell Japanese and other secondary creditors on the deal.

''The general agreement in theory seems to be a go,'' the source said of a plan by which banks that Trump owes about $2 billion would give him some $60 million new cash and a breather from interest payments.

To service $1.3 billion in bonds underlying his three Atlantic City casinos, the cash-starved Trump must refinance $2 billion borrowed from banks to build his Manhattan real estate empire and other holdings.

Lending urgency to proceedings was a June 26 deadline by which Trump must pay nearly $43 million in overdue interest and principal on bond issues for Trump's Castle casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

If his Trump's Castle Funding Inc. legally defaults, creditors could move to foreclose and seize assets including the casino - toppling a row of Trump dominoes that could lead to bankruptcy.

Emerging from intense negotiations on how to divide the burden of keeping Trump afloat in an ocean of debt, bankers and lawyers turned to the equally tough job of selling the plan to his subordinate debtors.

Agreeing in principle were Bankers Trust New York Corp., Citicorp, Chase Manhattan Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp. Pitching in with the money center banks were New Jersey institutions First Fidelity Bancorp., Midlantic Corp. and a unit of National Westminster Bank.

Officers of Citicorp and Chase were in talks with Japanese and other foreign bankers, to whom they sold portions of Trump loans in the days when he was an avid collector of hotels and casinos.

The two banks ''are dealing with their syndicate members trying to get them to see the benefit of this agreement,'' said the banking source, who spoke on condition neither he nor his bank be named.

''They've got to get it done by the end of the week or the Trump Organization may be in jeopardy,'' the banker said. ''These foreign banks have to come across or the agreement mey by jeopardized.''

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (JUNE 20) UPI - H&R Block Inc. said Wednesday fiscal 1990 earnings were $123.5 million, or $2.31 a share, up 23.3 percent from $100.2 million, or $1.90 a share, a year ago.

Revenues for the year ended April 30 were $1.1 billion, up from $899.6 million in fiscal 1989.

The company said revenues from worldwide tax operations, including tax preparation volume and electronic filing services, increased 20.1 percent to $546.9 million, a new high. Volume from company-owned and franchised offices was a record $805.6 million, up 17.9 percent.

H&R Block said the company and franchises served a record 15.2 million taxpapers during fiscal 1990, up 13.4 percent from the previous year.

CompuServe Inc., the company's computer communications, information and software subsidiary, reported revenues of $206.7 million, up 19.4 percent from the prior year.

Personnel Pool of America Inc., Block's supplemental help subsidiary, had revenues of $232.3 million, up 10.6 percent.

Chairman and chief executive officer Henry W. Bloch said officers were pleased that revenues exceeded $1 billion for the first time.

''This constitutes the 35th year of consecutive revenue increases since the company started in the income tax preparation business and the 18th consecutive year of earnings increases,'' Bloch said. ''The outstanding success of the nationwide roll-out of our electronic filing system, Rapid Refund, led tax operations to another excellent year as it recorded a significant increase in total taxpayers served for the seventh consecutive year.''

GREENFIELD, WI (JUNE 20) UPI - The Veterans of Foreign Wars is trying to mobilize its 3 million members to protest a planned snap vote that could kill a proposed constitutional amendment to protect the American flag, the group's national commander said Wednesday.

''We feel (the scheduling of the vote for Thursday is) totally unfair,'' said VFW commander Walter Hogan, 57, a Korean War veteran. ''Because when a hearing comes up on such short notice, you really don't get a chance to contact your people or make the people aware of it in time to contact their congressmen or senators.''

The Democratic leadership of the House, through a waiver of the usual rules requiring at least three days between committee consideration and a House floor vote, has scheduled a vote Thursday on an amendment that would prohibit desecration of the U.S. flag.

Backers of the proposed amendment, seeking time to mobilize their supporters for a vote that is expected to be close, want it put off until next week. A two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress is required to send a constitutional amendment to the states for ratifcation.

''Our position and my personal position is we support a constitutional amendment,'' Hogan said. ''We're saying to Congress: Let the people decide whether it's right or wrong to desecrate the flag.''

Hogan said the VFW was urging state chapters to put pressure on House members to postpone the vote. The group also started a campaign Wednesday with half-page advertisements in a number of newspapers, urging House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., an opponent of the amendment, to delay a vote.

''I think the Democrats are kind of afraid to go home this weekend for some of the heat they will take from their constituents for not allowing enough time to allow people to contact them and let them know what their wishes are,'' Hogan said.

LONDON (JUNE 20) UPI - Prison officers voted Wednesday to begin a job action that could include refusing to accept new prisoners as they to press demands for more staffing and government action to deal with chronic overcrowding in English and Welsh jails.

The nation's penal system was rocked in April by 30 riots, the worst occurring at Strangeways Jail in Manchester, which was occupied by inmates for 25 days and virtually destroyed. The upheavels left one prisoner dead and scores of inmates and guards injured.

Members of the Prison Officers Association, the union for guards in the 124 penal institutions in England and Wales, voted 10,103 for industrial action and 2,446 against.

The organization said the vote also showed 122 prisons favored action but did not specify what would be its next move, although an all-out strike was ruled out.

''No action is planned which would affect prisoners within the system,'' it said. ''Our primary aim will be to prevent overcrowded establishments becoming more overcrowded and unsuitable prisoners being placed in unsuitable establishments.''

Association spokesman John Bartell said the vote showed officers were ''not prepared to acquiesce any further and watch another rerun of what happened recently, where we had deaths and serious injuries in the prison system.

''Where prisoners are three to a cell, where prisoners are locked up 24 hours a day, we are saying we are not going to put up with these circumstances,'' he said.

Officers have said their likely action would be for officers to refuse any new inmates in overcrowded facilities until populations had been reduced to meet official quotas for each institution.

They have been demanding the immediate recruitment of about 600 personnel to cope with overcrowding resulting from the loss of hundreds of cells in the disturbances. Subsequently, about 1,000 convicts have been transferred to local police stations.

''Prisoners cannot just be let out on the streets,'' said Home Office Minister David Mellor. ''Perhaps 3,000 will be put into police cells and these cells are not as secure as prison cells, so the public would be at risk.''

The Home Office, which is in charge of the nation's jails, responded to a similar industrial action two years ago by using military camps as jails. It can also request judges give custodial sentences sparingly, and release non-violent offenders who are nearing completion of their sentence.

The April riots aroused calls from many quarters for a complete review of the penal system. The government has said it plans to upgrade the prisons, many of which are Victorian-era and lack toilet facilities in each cell.

CAIRO (JUNE 20) UPI - The Soviet Union might accept Arab oil as payment for billions of dollars owed for Soviet weapons and military equipment already delivered to Mideast nations, Egyptian oil industry sources said Wednesday.

"After a recent series of meetings in Moscow between Arab chambers of commerce and Soviet officials, one idea that gained prominence was for a number of Arab debts to be paid off in oil," one industry source told United Press International.

"But the whole scheme is still in a preliminary stage, and it would have to happen over a period of years," he added. "Also, it would not only involve oil. The idea is to encourage Arab economic growth as well."

Arab countries such as Egypt, Syria, Iraq, Libya and Sudan still owe the Soviet Union billions of dollars for military hardware, and Moscow wants quick payment to alleviate its economic problems, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

But Persian Gulf producers such as Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, which are pumping more crude oil than Western markets can absorb, would deliver oil to Moscow and be reimbursed by debtor nations such as Egypt, the sources said.

"The idea is not that gulf Arab states will necessarily pick up the tab for weapons purchases by countries such as Egypt but that Egypt could repay, let us say, Kuwait or Saudi Arabia with consumer goods and food products and the Kuwaitis and Saudis could in return send oil to the Soviets," the source said.

Egyptian economists said a shortage of hard currency in the five Arab debtor nations and the Soviet Union's urgent need to boost its economy made a three-way barter deal with Arab countries the best option.

Cash-poor Moscow, a major oil producer in its own right, would benefit from such a deal by selling gulf crude oil to other nations in exchange for hard currency, they said.

Moscow also would establish closer links with the anti-communist gulf Arab producers in anticipation of the day when the Soviet Union becomes a net importer of crude.

Egypt alone owes the Soviet Union at least $2.5 billion for military hardware. Debts from other Arab countries are estimated between $5 billion and $10 billion, according to Egyptian economists.

The economists noted that countries such as Iraq, which received large supplies of Soviet weapons during the nation's eight-year war with Iran, were already exporting crude oil to Moscow. Iraq was also exporting tobacco products, car batteries, and light industrial products, they said.

Egypt's exports to the Soviet Union include cosmetics, leather and textile products, furniture, citrus fruits, alcoholic products, and footwear, while its imports include heavy industrial machinery.

The economists noted that Moscow had little else other than military hardware worth exporting. Most of the Soviet Union's trade with the Arab world has been limited to countries such as Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Libya, and the Sudan, because Moscow was unable to export quality manufactured goods to the demanding, oil-rich Arab states of the gulf, economists said.

Even though the Soviet Union and Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, do not maintain diplomatic ties, a Saudi commercial delegation visited Moscow this month.

The Saudis have expressed interest in investing in the Soviet Union, provided Moscow goes ahead and passes legislation to allow for the privatization of thousands of Soviet public-sector companies. Moscow has announced plans to enact a new investment law later this year, and privatization plans were expected to be implemented over a three-year period.

The Soviet Union also is encouraging joint ventures with other Arab gulf states. But businessmen in Kuwait said they would need additional guarantees for the security of their investments before pursuing this course. They said Kuwait currently earns more from its overseas investments than from crude oil exports.

KATMANDU, Nepal (JUNE 20) UPI - Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai said Wednesday his recent visit to India helped restore friendship between the two Hindu nations after a year-long trade boycott by New Delhi.

''We have basically succeeded in recreating the atmosphere of friendship which ... marked Nepal's relations with its close neighbor, India,'' he told the Nepal Council of World Affairs.

''We have already been able to give our people a great deal of relief by negotiating with the government of India for the restoration of status quo and reopening of all 15 transit points and 22 trading points on the Nepal-India border.''

Refuting charges by some political leaders that a secret understanding was reached to calm India's security fears over Chinese influence, Bhattarai said ''I have said times without number that there is no secret treaty with India. But still people are writing that there is one. I can't help it.''

India blocked trade after Nepal bought anti-aircraft weapons from China, which badly mauled India in a 1962 Himalayan border war.

India has also objected to Chinese road-building projects in Nepal near India's border that might be used for spying. New Delhi has long sought security from a possible Chinese attack before it crossed the crest of the Himalayas along Nepal's northern border.

Nepal's seven-week pro-democracy movement launched Feb. 18, which led to the replacement of the royally-dominated regime by Bhattarai's government, was not ''historically or politically linked with what transpired in Eastern Europe although it came in the wake of the events there,'' the 65-year-old bachelor premier said.

In the democracy movement, 83 people were killed, 22 were missing and 1,598 injured - mostly by bullets - said Prakash Kafle, secretary general of the independent Forum for the Protection of Human Rights, Wednesday. The reports are still incomplete, he said.

Bhattarai has said 500 people were killed in the movement. An independent judicial commission is investigating the loss of life and property.

Bhattarai said amnesty had been given to many under his new administration but an exiled group linked with terrorist activities would be granted amnesty only conditionally.

Five years ago Wednesday the Peoples Front, a left-wing anti-monarchy group, launched a series of attacks killing 10 people and injuring 25.

The group is led by Ram Raja Prasad Singh, a former member of Parliament and now based in the Indian state of Bhiar.

London-based Amnesty International, in a report published this month, asked for the release of 12 people arrested five years ago in connection with the bombings, and the waiving of death sentences against four in absentia, including Singh.

Bhattarai said ''Singh should accept the present political developments and welcome the democratic order. Then only I can help him get amnesty. Otherwise, I cannot help.''

Singh had been advocating the overthrow of the monarchy, which is still a generally popular institution in Nepal.

SPRINGFIELD, IL (JUNE 20) UPI - A licensed practical nurse has lost her license for playing a ''malicious practical joke'' by telling patients they had AIDS, a state agency said Wednesday.

Carolin Jo Newlin, 47, Toledo, also pleaded guilty in Coles County to battery for illegally drawing blood samples, a prosecutor said.

Geri Miller, a spokeswoman for the Illinois Department of Professional Regulation, said Newlin agreed that a mimimum six-month suspension of her state LPN license was ''fair and equitable under the circumstances and in the best interest to the people of Illinois.''

The disciplinary order said Newlin told Mattoon residents they had caught the AIDS virus or been exposed to it, which she admitted was ''a malicious practical joke,'' Miller said.

Coles County Assistant State's Attorney Mark Novak said Newlin pleaded guilty to three battery counts covering a period from August 1988 to February 1989.

She was ordered to undergo mental health treatment, pay court costs and a $200 fine and to serve one year of probation, Novak said.

CHARLOTTE, NC (JUNE 20) UPI - Imprisoned television evangelist Jim Bakker said Wednesday he has retained constitutional law expert Alan Dershowitz to help appeal his fraud and conspiracy convictions.

Bakker, 50, is serving a 45-year prison term at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn. for his 1989 conviction on 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy stemming from money-raising tactics at his Praise The Lord ministry.

''Alan Dershowitz has joined the legal defense team along with Harold Bender of Charlotte, N.C., and Don Ervin of Houston, '' Bakker said. ''Alan has agreed to be the voice on my appeal. He will make the presentation of our case.''

Dershowitz, 51, is a Harvard law professor and a recognized expert expert on constitutional law.

He represents New York hotel queen Leona Helmsley in her tax fraud case and was recently described by Time magazine as a kind of judicial Saint Jude, the lawyer of last resort for famous criminals.

Dershowitz could not be reached for comment but Ervin said Bakker will find some measure of victory in the appeal filed Monday with the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

Ervin cited several errors by U.S. District Judge Robert ''Maximum Bob'' Potter, who presided over Bakker's trial last fall in Charlotte, just 10 miles from Fort Mill, S.C., where Bakker built his PTL ministry and its religious retreat.

''We raise six grounds for appeal based on errors made by the trial court '' said Ervin. ''The fact is no fair jury could have been empaneled in that community.

''To make matters worse, the judge didn't do much to select a fair jury,'' Ervin said. ''He denied individual voir dires. He denied a change of venue. He denied defense requests to individually question the jurors. He denied a request to sequester the jury.

''He failed to take those steps necessary to ensure the jury would be impartial,'' the lawyer said.

Ervin said the key to the Bakker appeal is the constitutional issue of separation of church and state. He said the government flagrantly invaded the religious arena in prosecuting Bakker.

''The trial in general was unfair,'' Ervin said. ''Where does the government get off standing up and telling people how they can spend their religious contributions?''

The defense in Bakker's trial claimed the lifetime partnerships sold by PTL were gifts to the ministry. A lifetime partner typically donated $1,000 and was promised three nights free lodging each year for life at a PTL hotel.

Prosecutors claimed the partnerships were a classic pyramid scheme with those signing up first getting their benefits and latecomers being swindled. They made an issue of huge salaries and bonuses paid to Bakker, his wife Tammy Faye and other ministry executives.

But Ervin pointed out wealth is just part of the prosperity theology subscribed to by the Assemblies of God and other charismatic groups.

''I think it should have been brought out in the defense that Jim and Tammy Bakker were very much in tune with the religious feelings of the '70s, with this idea that God enriches those he loves,'' Ervin said.

But the appeals court will not allow Bakker's defense team to raise new issues on appeal so lawyers will have to stick to evidence presented in the trial.

''The responsibility is weighty because it's such a horrible situation and it's not just Jim Bakker we are talking about,'' Ervin said. ''It's a police mentality that is pervasive across this land. It's chilling.''

Bakker, meanwhile, is spending his prison time working in a hospice program and making ceramics. Visitors report he is in good spirits but Ervin said that doesn't mean he enjoys prison life.

''Nobody does too well in prison,'' the lawyer said. ''It's a horrible existence.''

ST. PETERSBURG, FL (JUNE 20) UPI - Federal regulators have prepared ten criminal allegations against former CenTrust Bank chairman David Paul which could lead to charges of fraud, securities violations and bribery against the executive, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Federal regulators charged in documents known as criminal referrals that Paul spent the Miami thrift's money to bribe the mayor of Miami Beach, to buy oriental rugs and a sailboat and to renovate his lavish waterfront home on swank La Gorce Island, the St. Petersburg Times reported.

Those documents apparently were turned over to the FBI and the U.S. Attorney's office in Miami early this year, the newspaper said. The documents, which were obtained by the Times, said Paul spent millions of dollars in CenTrust money as if it were his own, the newspaper reported.

Federal regulators seized CenTrust in February, and officials have estimated that the bailout could cost taxpayers more than $2 billion, in what was expected to be one of the most expensive rescues on record.

"This misuse of position and corporate funds is only one example of a pattern of abusive activities by Mr. Paul in which he uses CenTrust assets for his personal use," regulators said in outlining one of the cases. No charges have been filed against Paul, but the criminal referrals were the first step in process which may ultimately lead to criminal charges.

Paul's attorney, Sanford Bohrer, said the case against Paul appeared flimsy. Paul himself has denied any wrongdoing. "If that's what they're looking at to possibly indict him, I'm a little relieved," Bohrer said. "I keep waiting for them to come up with some serious stuff."

The ten accusations compiled by thrift regulators included an allegation that between 1988 and 1989, CenTrust and another party paid Miami Beach Mayor Alex Daoud $35,000 and disguised that payment as a legal fee to buy Daoud's "favorable consideration" of a zoning variance.

Daoud has called allegations he accepted the money in exchange for his vote "groundless and unfair." Daoud said he earned the money doing legal work for CenTrust.

Regulators also alleged that Paul had a CenTrust subsidiary pay $54,736 to cover the insurance on his yacht "Grand Cru" and for credit card bills and moving expenses of the yacht's captain. Regulators reported that Paul has partly reimbursed the subsidiary.

Another document alleged that Paul "strongly encouraged" employees to contribute to CenTrust political action committees that gave money to the election campaigns of members of Congress, Florida Comptroller Gerald Lewis and others, the paper said.

Paul also was alleged to have instructed another subsidiary to purchase a 40-foot sailboat called the "Bodacious" in 1989 for $232,355. Regulators said Paul tried to hide the purchase from investigators.

The Times said regulators also believed Paul used CenTrust money to pay for renovations on his $8.6 million home, and to purchase $208,000 worth of Oriental rugs.

The executive also was suspected of illegally "parking" $25 million in securities in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International so other investors would not be worried about the thrift's financial health.

York City today for his first visit to the United States. He and his wife Winnie stepped off a Canadian government jet at Kennedy International Airport and received a tumultuous welcome. Mayor David Dinkins called the African National Congress leader a ''magnificent example of commitment, conviction and courage.'' The visit is part of Mandela's 13-nation tour and comes after his release earlier this year following 27 years in prison.

President Bush set an afternoon news conference in Alabama, where news reports indicate that he may announce suspension of U-S talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater refused to confirm the reports, but told reporters to stay tuned for an annoucement at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville. Bush today begins a campaign swing through Alabama and North Carolina.

Another Soviet republic is considering declaring independence from Moscow. The Soviet news agency Tass says the republic of Uzbekistan is considering a resolution to declare independence and take control of its domestic and foreign policy. The resolution was introduced today in the Central Asian republic's parliament in Tashkent , 17-hundred miles southeast of Moscow. The three Baltic republics earlier declared their independence.

Soviet President Gorbachev today responded to his critics and said the Communist Party might have a new leader soon. It's an apparent hint that he might quit his party leadership post at the national congress next month. Gorbachev made the comment on the second day of a conference of the Russian republic's Communist Party in Moscow. Conservative delegates leveled strong criticism at Gorbachev yesterday and today. Even if he resigns as general secretary, he would remain the president of the Soviet Union.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush's recommendation that China retain its most-favored-nation trade status met little opposition Wednesday as the Senate Finance Committee began hearings on whether to block the president's proposal.

Both Republican and Democratic members of the committee said downgrading China's trade status could deprive U.S. farmers of their largest export market for wheat and would hurt American companies with factories in China.

They also argued that sanctions could backfire politically, causing China's leadership to withdraw further from world affairs and eroding U.S. influence.

Bush recommended May 24 that China retain its trade status, which makes Chinese products much cheaper in the United States. Legislation has been introduced in both houses to overturn the president's decision.

Although Sens. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Robert Packwood, R-Ore., took a hard line toward China at the hearing, most members either supported Bush or indicated they were withholding judgment.

"I happen to believe President Bush has made the right call. ... I want to keep the door open," said Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas. "We're going to be shooting ourselves in both feet if we don't take a careful look at this," said Dole, whose state is a leading wheat producer. "If we don't supply the goods, other countries will."

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said China has made it "quite clear" that it would retaliate if its trade status were downgraded and warned that could hurt U.S. farmers. China bought more than $1 billion in American wheat last year.

"I am not willing to sacrifice the interests of American farmers, businessmen, and workers in a hollow show of outrage," Baucus said. "It may make us feel better. But it would do nothing for the democracy movement in China."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, committee chairman, said sanctions imposed by Bush after last year's Tiananmen Square massacre - such as ending military sales - were not working. But he stopped short of supporting trade sanctions, saying they only would work if other Western countries followed the U.S. lead.

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said China "has never responded well to pressure" and that the challenge for the committee was to take steps that would encourage reform and not simply make Americans feel better.

(JUNE 20) UPI - China has released three dissidents who were detained by police before the anniversary of last year's crackdown on the democracy movement. Taiwan's state-run Broadcasting Corporation of China says one of the three... a Taiwan-born pop singer... arrived today in Taiwan by fishing boat. Friends of a second dissident say he telephoned them to say he had been released. A third activist was freed on Sunday. But sources at the University of Beijing say a student who spoke out at a rally on the anniversary of the crackdown has been arrested.

Severe thunderstorms spun tornadoes over the Midwest and Plains. A twister hit Nickerson, Kansas... with more funnel clouds spotted in south central Kansas and eastern Colorado. Storms with 100-mile-an-hour winds hit a six-county area in Kansas last night, knocking out power. About 40-thousand people were still without power today in Wichita.

CHICAGO (JUNE 20) UPI - Grain and soybean futures tumbled from their highs about midday Wednesday as traders took profits.

Grain prices were mixed and soybeans were higher at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade, but were well below the day's highs.

Heavy rain and flooding during the past week raised the possibility of lower corn and soybean yields because of damage to crops already planted and the likelihood of fewer acres being harvested.

State officials continued their assessment Wednesday of weather-related damage.

Corn was mostly lower at the final bell as buying interest faded at session highs and locals turned to the sell side.

Soybeans gave up some of their double-digit gains to profit-taking but closed higher across the board. In addition to the weather, beans were supported by hopes of an increase in export business during the coming months.

Wheat was moderately higher on weather-related harvest delays and reports of deterioration of the soft red wheat crop.

At the close, corn was off 2 3/4 to up 1 1/4, soybeans up 4 1/2 to 7 1/4, wheat unchanged to up 3 and oats off 3/4 to 1.

BATON ROUGE, LA (JUNE 20) UPI - A deadlocked state Senate committee voted Wednesday to send a virtual ban on abortions to the Senate floor without a recommendation for approval or rejection, setting up an almost immediate test vote on the floor.

The action came after the seven-member Health and Welfare Committee - with onemember who has supported past anti-abortion measures absent without explanation - recorded several tie votes after more than two hours of contentious debate and testimony.

The House-passed bill would, if enacted, become the nation's toughest anti-abortion law and set up a direct Supreme Court challenge to the high court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which made abortion legal in all states.

The measure would make it a crime to perform an abortion in Louisiana, unless the mother's life was threatened by the pregnancy. Doctors performing abortions could be sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

The committee decision not to recommend the bill was a major blow to backers of the proposal. Under Senate rules, the 39-member full chamber would now have to approve a procedural motion later Wednesday to keep the bill alive. That vote would not have been necessary had the committee recommended the measure.

A labor lobbyist who asked not to be identified said that the absent senator who could have supplied the fourth vote needed for a recommendation - Sen. Joe McPherson, D-Alexandria, who is running for Congress - was persuaded it was not in his best political interest to attend the hearing.

''A couple of people told him he needed to go home to Alexandria for a meeting,'' the lobbyist said. ''He took their advice and went.''

Gov. Buddy Roemer, who opposes abortion, has said he opposes the legislation because it does not include a provision allowing abortions in cases of rape and incest.

Should the Senate approve the measure in its present form, Roemer would be faced with the prospect of vetoing a bill with which he is largely in agreement. A veto override attempt has not succeeded in Louisiana in at least 69 years.

Roemer could also refuse to sign the bill, allowing it to go into effect after a certain period without his signature.

The Senate committee vote Wednesday came after a hearing in which panel Chairman Mike Cross, D-Baker, repeatedly interrupted abortion rights activists who testified against the bill.

At one point in the debate, an angry Sen. Cleo Fields, D-Baton Rouge, accused the chairman of ''committee bashing.''

Cross has sponsored an anti-abortion measure that closely tracks the House-passed bill, which was sponsored by Rep. Louis ''Woody'' Jenkins, D-Baton Rouge. The senator's measure has been approved in committee, but has yet to reach the floor in the upper chamber.

BUFFALO, NY (JUNE 20) UPI - The Federal Resolution Trust Corp. has put the financially troubled Empire Federal Savings Bank up for sale, the thrift's managers said Wednesday.

John Feil, the RTC's managing agent at Empire since January, said federal regulators hope to find a buyer for Empire by Sept. 28. The offering includes Empire's 122-branch network, along with $7 billion in deposits and $2.5 billion in home mortgages and consumer loans. Feil said while bids will be taken for portions of Empire, "The preference would be to sell the package as a whole."

Kent Dixon, Empire's president and chief executive officer, said a number of potential buyers have shown an interest in the bank over the past year. "It doesn't mean they will bid after looking at us, but I've had a number of calls since I've been here," said Dixon, who became Empire's president in May 1989.

The bank lost a record $1.07 billion in 1989, but Dixon said operating losses have declined substantially each month this year as the bank trimmed expenses. Two of Empire's subsidiaries, Empire of America Realty Credit Corp. and Empire of America Relocation Services Inc., will be sold separately.

The RTC also is looking for buyers of the bank's $650 million credit card portfolio and a $1 billion portfolio servicing auto loans. Feil said that since the takeover in January, the RTC has been able to easily identify all of Empire's assets. "This has been an easy institution to work with," he said. "Management has stayed intact."

Feil said a team of RTC investigators found no evidence of fraud on the part of the bank's directors or officers. "They have reported zero fraud to us," Feil said. "Fraud is just not an issue at Empire."

(JUNE 20) UPI - The House voted 327ride the president's veto of a bill that would lift a half-century ban on political activity by federal employees. The House sent the bill to the Senate, where supporters are trying to gather the two-thirds vote needed to over-ride the veto. President Bush vetoed the bill on Friday, saying the 1939 Hatch Act was intended ''to protect federal employees from political pressure.'' The new bill would allow federal workers to take part in nearly all political activities.

Black leader Nelson Mandela received a hero's welcome in New York City, where he's being hailed for his courage and commitment to help end South Africa's racial policy. Dignitaries... from New York Mayor David Dinkins and Governor Mario Cuomo to New Jersey Governor James Florio and the Reverend Jesse Jackson... greeted Mandela at Kennedy International Airport. Mandela stepped onto a red carpet amid the tightest security in New York since the 1979 visit of Pope John Paul.

Budget Director Richard Darman plans to present a new deficit-cutting plan to White House and congressional budget negotiators today. Republicans say it probably WON'T be a full-blown plan, but instead will be a sketching out of dimensions. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen voiced suspicion of the plan even before it was offered. He says that if it's top-heavy on domestic and entitlement cuts, as reported, then it is ''absolutely unacceptable.''

Severe thunderstorms blasted central Illinois early today, ripping the roofs off buildings, causing power outages and minor flooding. Police say divers are searching for a Washburn rescue squad member who fell into a flooded creek in Woodford County, when a bridge collapsed. The National Weather Service at Peoria says more than one dozen tornado sightings were reported, but could NOT be confirmed.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - A U.S. forensic team arrived in Malaysia and has begun analyzing barrels of bones found on a Vietnamese refugee boat and said to be the remains of up to 30 U.S. soldiers, the Pentagon said Wednesday.

''A three-man forensic team from the (Army's) Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii left Saturday'' for Malaysia and has begun its work, said a Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Edward Lundquist.

The team, which includes a forensic anthropologist, another member of the CIL scientific staff and a photographer, has not made any preliminary findings, such as whether the bones are human or animal.

If the bones are found to be human and if they appear to be that of North Americans, Lundquist said, ''any or all remains will be brought to the CIL in Honolulu for further analysis.''

A boat carrying nine Vietnamese refugees who left their homeland May 30 was discovered June 11 on a beach at Kota Tinggi, in the southern state of Johor, Malaysia.

Aboard the boat were seven barrels of bones that the refugees claimed were the remains of U.S. servicemen from the Vietnam War.

Malaysian officials said they believe the refugees intended to hand over the remains to the U.S. Embassy in Singapore in the hope they could gain entry to the United States and also receive a monetary reward.

The 52-foot-long vessel had ''USA remains in my boat'' and ''This boat has USA army remains'' written across the sides, said Malaysian Deputy Police Superintendent Roslan Dolah.

In addition, the refugees turned over U.S. military identification ''dog tags'' that they said belonged to the remains.

''We received 27 dog tags and one piece of paper with dog-tag information '' Lundquist said earlier. ''A preliminary review indicates that none of these 28 names were those of missing Americans.''

Lundquist has said it was not unusual for refugees to come out of Vietnam with fragmentary skeletal remains. ''Only once have any remains returned by a refugee proven to have been those of an American,'' he said. ''The others either have been animal remains or Southeast Asians.''

HUNTSVILLE, AL (JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush broke off U.S. diplomatic contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization Wednesday because the PLO refused to act against a member who plotted to attack Israel.

''We've raised this incident with the PLO in Tunis. We told them that it could not avoid responsibility for an attempted terrorist action by one of its constituent groups and needed to take steps to deal with the matter by condemning the operation,'' Bush said of the attempted May 30 beachfront invasion at Tel Aviv spearheaded by terrorist Abul Abbas.

''We've given the PLO ample time to deal with this issue. To date, the PLO has not provided a credible accounting of this incident,'' Bush added.

The president said the United States recognized that the PLO had ''distanced itself'' from the May 30 incident, ''but this alone is not sufficient.''

Bush also said the United States was willing to begin talking again once the PLO met the U.S. conditions.

''At any time the PLO is prepared to take the necessary steps, we are prepared to promptly resume the dialogue,'' the president said.

Bush insisted the action was a narrow one in response to terrorism and expressed hope that the stalled Middle East peace process can be moved forward.

''It's not an easy call,'' Bush said of his decision.

PLO officials and U.S. Ambassador Robert Pelletreau have been meeting in Tunis, Tunisia, periodically since 1988. They have met four times in the past 30 days, but basically the talks have been almost paralyzed since the May 30 incident.

The PLO last week denounced attacks on civilians, but fell short of meeting U.S. conditions that would continue the dialogue authorized by President Reagan in December 1988 after PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat bowed to U.S. calls to renounce terrorism.

Israel has opposed the U.S. overtures to the PLO from the start and again urged termination of the talks after the May 30 incident.

Reaction from Israel came quickly. As Bush was still speaking with reporters in Alabama, a spokeswoman at the Israeli Embassy in Washington, Ruth Yaron, said, ''We note with satisfaction the timely decision of the U.S. administration on the dialogue with the PLO.''

Calling the failed attack ''a reminder of the true nature of the PLO (as) a terrorist organization,'' Yaron said: ''Israel believes that the administration's decision will enhance and promote the peace process and will encourage those Palestinians seeking peace with Israel to seize upon this opportunity to begin a direct dialogue with Israel.''

Asked if he was concerned the U.S. move might provoke terrorism, Bush said he hoped that Palestinians would ''note in my statement a rather temperate view.''

Since the May 30 incident, the administration has insisted that Arafat denounce the action and ''take steps to begin the removal of Abul Abbas from the Palestine National Executive Council.

Abbas, a member of a PLO faction, has claimed responsibility for the May 30 incident.

Before Bush announced the break, Faisal Husayni, a Palestinian activist, anticipated the action and told a Washington meeting of the Foundation for Middle East Peace, ''This is a very sad day.''

He said the real reason for Israeli pressure to cut off the dialogue is Israel's determination to prevent creation of a Palestinian state on its borders.

Husayni added that if Palestinian and Israeli peace activitists fight together, ''We can cross the river togeter.'' Otherwise, he said, there are chances for a devastating Middle East war as extremists on both sides take control.

In testimony eight days ago to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Secretary of State James Baker said the United States had been urged by its allies and other friendly governments ''not to rush our decision'' on dealing with the PLO out of concern for its impact on the moribund peace process.

At that time, Baker also blamed the Israeli government for the political stalemate in the Middle East. In a rare public rebuke, Baker ticked off the telephone number of the White House and said his message to the Israelis was, ''When you're serious about peace, call us.''

SALT LAKE CITY (JUNE 20) UPI - Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson, religious leader to the world's 7 million Mormons, was hospitalized Monday in serious condition, church officials said.

The 90-year-old Benson was taken by ambulance to LDS Hospital about 7:45 a.m. Preliminary tests ''indicated a form of infection, for which he is receiving treatment,'' the church said in a news release.

He was taken to the hospital ''after experiencing difficulties at his Salt Lake City apartment,'' the release said.

Benson was agriculture secretary during the Eisenhower administration. He was the first Mormon to serve in a presidential cabinet and the first clergyman in 100 years to attain cabinet rank. He became the church's 13th president on Nov. 10, 1985.

He has suffered from recent health problems and was hospitalized a month ago for medical tests.

Mormons believe their president receives direct revelations from God.

(JUNE 20) UPI - More violence in India's Kashmir Valley. Police and hospital sources say at least 12 people... including six civilians... were killed in scattered incidents across the region. They are the latest victims in violence stemming from Kashmiri Moslem's demands for secession from India. The two-year-old struggle for independence flared into a popular uprising following clashes in mid-January.

A military source says heavy fighting between soldiers and Tamil rebels left 49 people dead in northern Sri Lanka. The source reports that the victims included 10 villagers killed as they fled their homes and triggered land mines planted in the jungle 120 miles north of the capital. Hindu Tamil rebels are fighting for a separate state because of years of alleged discrimination under the majority Buddhist Sinhalese who control the Colombo government.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - New Yorkers Wednesday honored South African black leader Nelson Mandela with a ticker-tape parade that swirled up Broadway like a joyous blizzard.

Riding along the famous ''Canyon of Heroes'' stretching from Bowling Green to City Hall, the 71-year-old Mandela smiled and waved at the cheering thousands lining the street as he began his first trip to the United States.

Tons of streamers, confetti, and sheets of computer papers poured out of skyscrapers of Manhattan's financial district and fell on the ''Mandela-mobile,'' a bullet-proof glass box mounted on a truck.

Inside rode Mandela, his wife, Winnie, and daughter, Zenani, along with Gov. Mario Cuomo and Mayor David Dinkins.

At City Hall, a red carpet was rolled out and the keys of the city presented to the deputy president of the African National Congress who spent 27 years in prison for his fight against apartheid.

Mandela arrived from Canada Wednesday morning for a 12-day, eight-city trip across America.

In his greeting at Kennedy International Airport, he told Americans that because of their support for economic sanctions against South Africa, ''We can see the light at the end of the tunnel'' in the escape from apartheid.

Mandela said that in his current 13-nation, six-week whirlwind tour away from his homeland, ''Our simple message for all these countries is that the sanctions should be maintained.''

On Broadway, some of the crowd had waited up to five hours for the long-delayed parade. People were packed behind barricades from the gutter to the sides of buildings.

They stood in two-foot snowdrifts of paper as they cheered the gray-haired African hero and waved banners that read, ''Keep the Pressure on Apartheid '' ''Release All Political Prisoners.''

''I like him - like what he stands for, and hope he can solve the predicament for South Africa,'' said retired salesman Val Turner, 71, of Guttenberg, N.J., who recalled watching the first ticker-tape parade in 1927 for Charles Lindbergh.

The parade was filled with marchers and musicians of every race, group and age - Africans, American Indian, Koreans, Arabs, Chinese, Irish, Germans, Kurds and Hispanics. Girl Scouts marched, police pipe bands skirled and Harry Belafonte, Arthur Ashe and Spike Lee waved from an antique open car.

Mandela's visit was amid the tightest security in New York since the visit of Pope John Paul II in 1979.

''We welcome you with open arms and full hearts - as a leader, as a brother, as a friend, as an ally and as a magnificant example of commitment, conviction and courage,'' said Dinkins, New York's first black mayor, in his welcoming speech at the airport.

Cuomo, a leader in the campaign to press economic sanctions against South Africa, said, ''We honor him best by joining with him, by joining his cause. Until South Africa is completely free, we must not relent - we must continue the use of sanctions unil apartheid is a terrible memory.''

Mandela left the airport in a motorcade that wound through cheering throngs lining the streets of Brooklyn, which has more black residents than any city in the United States.

Schoolkids waved the black, green and gold flag of the African National Congress and copies of Mandela's picture.

At Boys and Girls High School in Bedford-Stuyvesant, thousands chanting ''Nelson, Nelson, Nelson,'' and ''Keep the pressure on,'' waited in a football field under the hot sun, entertained, bands and dancing troupes.

''As a black person, he's a syumbol for me of the fight against racism,'' said student body President Darryl Gee, 17.

In an address from the back of a makeshift stage on a truck, Mandela told the youths, ''If in our struggle we receive the support of the youth then our goal can never fail, can never be lost.

In his speech at the airport, Mandela hailed the United States as ''the only country that has introduced a clause into its law which makes it a criminal offense for any person or company to trade with South Africa.''

He said he was looking forward to meeting with President Bush when he travels to Washington June 26, underlining reports that he is concerned about Bush administration plans to review its sanctions program and the possibility that some may be lifted. He was also to address a joint session of Congress.

Mandela's schedule in New York also includes a huge rally-concert at Yankee Stadium Thursday and a Friday address at the United Nations.

NEW HAVEN, CT (JUNE 20) UPI - Ina Balin, a stage, film and television actress who had roles opposite John Wayne, Elvis Presley and Paul Newman, died Wednesday. She was 52.

The Brooklyn-born actress died in Yale-New Haven Hospital of pulmonary hypertension, her agent announced.

Balin's films included ''From the Terrace,'' ''The Black Orchid,'' ''The Greatest Story Ever Told'' and ''Charro.''

The New York University-educated Balin also appeared on stage in ''Compulsion'' and ''A Majority of One,'' and won such awards as the Theatre World, Hollywood Foreign Press, Golden Globe Award and the Film Daily Award.

Balin was co-owner of the Balin-Traube Art Gallery and toured hospitals and visited U.S. troops in southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

The actress helped evacuate 400 Vietnamese and Cambodian children from Asia to the United States in the waning days of the war in 1975 and eventually adopted three of the orphans as a single mother.

In her last years Balin became involved in a new business venture, Palace Seasonings in Sante Fe, N.M.

Balin is survived by her father, Sam Rosenberg of Florida, a brother, Richard Balin of California, and three daughters, Ba-Nhi Mai and Kim Thuy of Westport, and Mrs. Nguyet Baty of Berlin, Germany.

Funeral services will be held Friday at Spear Funeral Home in Fairfield. Plans for a memorial service in Los Angeles were incomplete.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - For the youth of one of Brooklyn's most troubled neighborhoods, Wednesday was a day to be proud and a day to be humble.

Nelson Mandela's first stop in the United States was at a rally at Boys and Girls High School in Bedford-Stuyvesant, a predominantly black area plagued by crime and drugs but populated by a group of proud black activists determined to uplift their community.

The visit was a shot in the arm to an economically depressed neighborhood that served as the setting for the movie ''Do the Right Thing,'' which chronicled racial tensions in the ghetto on a sweltering summer day.

Students at Boys and Girls erupted into spontaneous chants as Mandela's motorcade wound its way down Atlantic Avenue, one of the borough's main thoroughfares. The bursts of emotion did not stop throughout his visit.

''I cried the whole time,'' said Youree Spence, 22, after Mandela spoke. ''It was unexplainable. It touched my heart.''

Mandela directed his comments to the many young people in the audience that numbered more than 10,000, striking a chord when he spoke of educational inequities in his homeland.

''Our education is not controlled by our people but by whites,'' Mandela said. ''The students are not able to control their own affairs. Because of all this our youth, our students are seeking help abroad.''

The leader and the crowd seemed to ignite each other's jubilant spirits. As he stepped to the platform, Mandela grinned and waved and as he concluded his remarks, he proclaimed, ''We love you.''

''We love you'' the crowd shouted back repeatedly.

Mandela asked the blacks of Brooklyn to band together to assist the education of blacks in South Africa.

The crowd gathered about 9 a.m. to greet the leader and maintained its enthusiasm even though Mandela was two hours behind schedule.

When Mandela stepped to the stage, the members of the audience pushed as close as possible to the podium. But the atmosphere remained orderly, charged only with awe.

''I will remember this for a very long time,'' said Tunu Thom, 12. ''He is a very great man. He's an example to all the youth. He tells kids how they should be and what road they should follow.''

Community activist Jitu Weusi, one of the organizers of the rally said, ''It was beyond our wildest dreams. (The Mandelas) were obviously moved by what they saw here. This was historic. They'll be talking about this in Brooklyn for a long time.''

HARTFORD, CONN (JUNE 20) UPI - The Travelers Corp. announced Wednesday it will stop offering auto and homeowners insurance in nine more states as part of a plan to focus on ''the very best business opportunities.''

Travelers said it had informed insurance departments in the nine states of its decision and would work with officials in each state to ensure an olderly withdrawal.

In addition to pulling out of the nine states, the Travelers said it also has reduced its agency force by about 900 people and is overhauling the way it pays agents commissions on private auto policies.

Ronald E. Foley, senior vice president for personal lines, said the actions were part of a plan to make the company's personal lines more competitive and to focus on markets with the greatest long-term potential.

''In today's competitive environment, we must preserve our capital for only the very best business opportunities, and that requires increasingly higher standards of performance,'' Foley said in a statement.

The nine states where Travelers will no longer offer auto or homeowners policies are Arkansas, Idaho, Nevada, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, West Virginia and Wyoming.

The company earlier announced it is not currently writing new auto policies in Pennsylvania and is completing its withdrawal from the private passenger auto market in California.

The company said it would continue to offer auto and homeowners policies in other states where it sees opportunity for long-term growth and profitability. It also will continue to offer other lines of insurance, including commercial property-casualty, life, health and annuities, in all 50 states.

Travelers also announced that begining Jan. 1, 1991, agents in most markets will be compensated for private passenger auto policies through a variable commission schedule.

Agents will be paid on a schedule that relates directly to the profitability of the auto policies they write, the company said.

Highly profitable agents will receive additional performance commissions while agents who generate less profitable business will receive lower commissions, the company said.

In addition to changing the commission schedule, the Travelers has reduced its agency force by about 900 agents over the last year, Foley said.

''We intend to dedicate more resources to the most profitable agents in the best markets,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Norwegian owners of the crippled tanker Mega Borg have agreed to pay for an environmental study on the extent of oil spill damage in the Gulf of Mexico, Commerce Department officials said Wednesday.

Commerce Deputy Undersectary Gray Castle said the firm K/S Megaborg II would foot the entire $275,000 bill for the government study under a ''landmark agreement'' between the tanker owner and the agency's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

''They have agreed to fund appropriate scientific studies by NOAA and the Texas Water Commission aimed at learning whether any environmental damage has resulted from the spill,'' Castle said.

''This is a unique agreement because no court has ordered the company to pay for these studies and neither NOAA nor the state of Texas has yet made a determination if damage has taken place,'' Castle said. ''The owner of the tanker, K/S Megaborg, has acted responsibly.''

The tanker Mega Borg leaked at least 3.9 million gallons of light crude oil into the Gulf after it was rocked by explosions June 8 resulting in a fire that raged for days at the site 57 miles off the Texas coast.

NOAA officials at the news conference said as a result of ongoing cleanup efforts and natural dissipation the amount of oil remaining on the water surface is ''a few tens of thousands of gallons.''

Meanwhile, Coast Guard officials in Galveston, Texas, said it was possible the remaining oil slick might not reach the shore.

Charles Ehler, director of NOAA's office of oceanography and marine assessment, said the seven-part study would attempt to assess any injury to sea mammals such as dolphins and turtles, the effect on other marine life with a particular emphasis on the shrimping industry, and other factors such as concentrations of oil in sediment and fragile coastal habitats.

The joint study by NOAA scientists and the Texas Water Commission is expected to take two to three months, he said, and would include attempts to protect two endangered species of sea turtles from any effects of the spill.

''The release of oil does not necessarily result in documentable injury to natural resources,'' Ehler said, adding there has not yet been any evidence of harm to wildlife or habitats in the Gulf as a result of the Mega Borg spill.

NOAA general counsel Tom Campbell said the agreement with K/S Megaborg would in no way mitigate any liability by the tanker owner if the study uncovers environmental damage in the Gulf.

''If anything it will enable us to spend more money to determine whether or not liability has occurred,'' Campbell said. ''If an injury has occurred then we will open this up to a fullscale damage assessment.''

The House today lopsidely over-rode President Bush's veto of a bill that would allow federal employees to engage in partisan politics. The Hatch Act extension measure now goes to the Senate, where an over-ride vote is scheduled for tomorrow.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - Australian-based Westpac Banking Corp. said Wednesday it was shutting down Westpac Pollock Government Securities Inc. after failing to find a buyer for the U.S. Treasury bonds primary dealer.

Westpac Banking's statement said the investment unit, which lost $29 million in the six-month period ended March 30 and faced an increasingly lean market, ''no longer fits within its global capital markets strategy.''

For months Westpac Banking had sought a buyer for the operation, considering a management buyout, but neither option proved viable.

''We have looked strenuously for a buyer for the last three months and no important proposal has emerged,'' said Anthony Walton, executive vice president and general manager of Westpac Americas Division, in an interview.

''Our firm preference would have been a sale as opposed to a liquidation but no proposal has emerged,'' Walton said.

One Westpac employee commented, ''This was kind of sudden. I was expecting to be sold - I didn't expect to be closed.''

Noting the firm had been profitable for years, he added, ''I think they pulled the trigger a little fast.'' Closure of the securities firm at the first sign of trouble was ''a black eye'' for Westpac, he said.

Westpac Banking said the dealer, one of the 10 largest in the country, would proceed to liquidate its portfolio ''in an orderly manner.'' Walton declined to assign a value to the positions Westpac was carrying.

Spokeswoman Elaine Svensson said the investment unit ''remained consistently profitable through the last fiscal year'' ended Sept. 30. But its U.S. holding company, Westpac Pollock Inc, sustained losses last year on a mortgage-backed securities operation which it later shut down.

She said the search for a buyer was unsuccessful ''given the longterm market outlook for the profitability of U.S. primary dealers.''

''The margins are very much slimmer, there are more market participants, and as a consequence it has become just much more difficult unless one has a broad range of financial products,'' Walton added.

Westpac Banking said most of the firm's 160 employees have been let go, while a team of Westpac and Pollock executives would oversee the orderly transition of customer accounts and other aspects of the closure.

Westpac Banking Corp., Australia's largest financial services group, in May reported half-year, after tax profits of $267 million, down 8 percent from its year-earlier earnings of $315 million, Svensson said.

HUNTSVILLE, AL (JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush, under fire from Democrats who claim a veto of the family and medical leave bill will violate a campaign promise, said Wednesday he went back and checked the record to prove them wrong.

Asked at a news conference at the Marshall Space Center how his planned veto of the leave bill would fulfill his 1988 pledge to ensure that women who have children will not lose their jobs, Bush reiterated that employers should make the changes on a voluntary basis, and not be forced.

''You've got to keep working for them 'til they do, because my campaign promise did not go to what they call mandated benefits,'' the president said. ''And just to be sure I was right, we looked it up again yesterday, and - but my position has not changed.

''And I see (the chance to) convince some Republicans as well as many Democrats that it hasn't changed.''

Bush, who feels worker benefits should be negotiated between employers and employees and that the government should play no role, told a group of Republican women during the presidential campaign, ''We need to assure that women don't have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child during a serious illness. That is what I mean when I talk about a gentler nation.''

Last week, after the Senate sent the measure to the White House, Bush, as promised, said he would veto the bill to require employers with more than 50 workers to offer 12 weeks of unpaid leave in one year to care for a newborn, adopted child or seriously ill parent, child, spouse or themselves.

Workers would receive health benefits and job protection during the leave.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., the measure's chief Senate sponsor, led Democrats who charged the president's action did not jive with his promises. ''He's going to have to explain the contradiction,'' Dodd said.

Asked Wednesday how he would convince employers to make such leave policies on a voluntary basis, Bush responded: ''Well, I have a great, great faith that collective bargaining and market forces move towards progress. And we've seen it in the private sector, and I want to see it faster and quicker in the private sector without burdening every business by the same formula of mandated benefits.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has agreed not to misrepresent scientific studies about cigarette smoking and disease, the Federal Trade Commission announced Wednesday.

The commission said it has issued a final consent order against the tobacco giant settling charges that it ''made false and misleading advertising claims regarding the health effects of smoking,'' in particular about a government study.

The American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society and the American Lung Association - acting in unison as the ''Coalition on Smoking OR Health'' - filed a complaint against Reynolds with the commission four years ago.

The complaint was directed at a paid advertisement by Reynolds that resembled an editorial. The ad interpreted a government study as suggesting that cigarette smoking is not as hazardous as the public has been led to believe.

The coaliton said Wednesday the Reynolds announcement represented a ''major victory'' in the case.

A member of the coalition's steering committee, Scott Ballin, said the commission order ''provides the government and the health community with a powerful new tool against the abuse of scientific information by the tobacco industry.''

''The consent (order) means that an advertiser who blows this kind of smoke is going to get burned,'' Commissioner Andrew J. Strenio Jr. said in a statement accompanying the consent order.

The settlement ''represents a victory for the public interest as well as a vindication of the commission's authority to challenge false or deceptive advertising in any guise,'' Strenio said.

Strenio said the order, which states that the tobacco company's ads were ''commercial speech'' under the First Amendment, affirms that the Federal Trade Commission has jurisdiction over such ''advertorials.''

Reynolds claimed its paid ads were editorials and as such represented ''free speech'' protected under the First Amendment.

''This is the format where advertising wolves attempt to dress up in the sheep's clothing of editorials,'' Strenio said.

Reynolds spokeswoman Betsy Annese said the order ''is no admission of a law violation and is for settlement purposes only.'' After four years of discussions with the commission, ''rather than drag this any longer we decided to accept (the order) and put the matter behind us,'' she added.

''We are still convinced that the (advertising) message constitutes free speech protected by the First Amendment,'' Annese said.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., is a subsidiary of RJR Nabisco Inc. It manufactures more than 20 brands of cigarettes and accounts for one-third of the U.S. cigarette market.

The long-term government study, the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial, or ''Mr Fit,'' is funded by a branch of the National Institutes of Health. Under the order, Reynolds agreed not to misrepresent in future ads the purpose or results of the Mr Fit study, the commission said.

In addition, the order prohibits Reynolds from misrepresenting the results or purpose of scientific studies concerning any claimed association between cigarette smoking and ''chronic or acute health effects.''

The commission charged that a Reynolds ad, titled ''Of Cigarettes and Science,'' made false and misleading claims about the Mr Fit study.

The ad, which mainly appeared in weekly magazines, contended that the study ''provided scientific evidence that smoking is not as hazardous as the public has been led to believe and falsely maintained that the Mr Fit study tends to refute the theory that smoking causes heart disease,'' the commission said.

The complaint, issued in June 1986, also charged that the ad was deceptive because Reynolds ''failed to disclose that the men in the Mr Fit study who quit smoking had a significantly lower rate of heart disease than men who continued to smoke.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - Senior "Star Wars" program officials were warned Wednesday that Congress is unlikely to go along with their request for $4.6 billion in the coming fiscal year.

''I have real difficulty with it. You have the administration coming asking for a significant increase over last year's budget for (the Strategic Defense Initiative) and since last year we have a larger budget deficit,'' Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., told the officials at a meeting of the Armed Services Committee's strategic subcommittee.

''And the president anounces the threat of nuclear war is significantly reduced. There may be theats still out there. Conventional weapons are being terminated,'' said Levin, whose own state is due to see M-1 tank production cease.

''I think you're off the mark in terms of asking to increase the SDI budget in the environment where you have a big budget deficit,'' he said.

At the hearing, the officials said the program is aiming to have enough information at hand for a president in mid 1993 to decide whether to a system ought to be developed for deployment.

It is emphasizing a system known as ''brilliant pebbles,'' a program of tiny space rockets that can home in on a missile or warheads and destroy it by the sheer force of impact. A 100-pound, yard-long rocket with an array of sensors to find a target is the goal.

Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., complained that the emphasis on developing a first phase system that might be deployed in the late 1990s robbed money from advanced technologies using such things as lasers and partical beams.

Stephen Hadley, assistant Defense Secretary for international security policy, told the subcommittee that although the threat of strategic nuclear weapons is declining, there is a growing threat to the United States and its allies from ballistic missiles with a variety of warheads in the Third World.

While the Pentagon has included the threat of Third World missiles in its arguments for the program in the past, it appeared to draw a greater emphasis at Wednesday's session.

Hadley also said SDI takes on greater weight under a strategic arms control treaty as a hedge against cheating and as a way to kill warheads from hard-to-target mobile missiles.

And he said Moscow appears to be making ''dramatic movement ... real movement'' in Soviet perceptions of the SDI program.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - Nearly all U.S. airlines have expressed interest in buying the Trump Shuttle, but Donald Trump still is waiting for the right offer, the airline's president said Wednesday.

"We have not received any offer for the shuttle yet, but there is a lot of interest from virtually all the U.S. airlines," Trump Shuttle President Bruce Nobles said. "Actually, the only airlines which are not interested are Pan Am and Eastern."

He declined to disclose the asking price for the airline, which was put on the auction block almost at the same time as the Pan Am shuttle, its competitor on the Boston-New York-Washington corridor.

"If Donald Trump gets a great offer, he would certainly consider it," Nobles said. "Donald Trump has said in the past that he would consider an offer for the shuttle of more than $500 million."

Industry analysts place a substantially lower value on the Trump Shuttle, while some doubt that the troubled developer could even get his money back for the airline he acquired for $365 million just a year ago.

Trump, who was unable to meet almost $43 million in bond payments Friday for his Trump Castle casino, was seeking funds from his creditor banks to avoid defaulting and losing control over the Atlantic City, N.J., gaming property.

"When Eastern sold its shuttle to Trump last year, the $365 million deal was then regarded as quite generous," said airline analyst Leigh Walzer at R.D. Smith & Co. "A lot of airlines which had then expressed an interest did not want to pay that much."

Walzer said, "The conventional wisdow is that it will be less than that with two shuttles on the market at the same time. It is salable, but at a price." Analysts have placed the value of the Trump Shuttle, including its aging fleet of 20 Boeing 727s planes, in the $270 million to $300 million range.

"The Pan Am shuttle will probably get a lower price than the Trump Shuttle because they don't own the planes," Walzer said. "The current estimate for the Pan Am shuttle is in the $250 million range."

Nobles denied that Trump's financial problems were affecting the shuttle or its possible sale in any way. "This does not hurt us at all," he said. "We have no timeframe for the sale, nor are we under any pressure."

But Nobles conceded that with two shuttles competing for a buyer a sale might take longer than expected. "This certainly slows the process down," he said. "But Merrill Lynch, which is handling the sale of the Trump Shuttle, has been receiving a lot of calls, although there is no formal offer yet."

Nobles added that there were "a lot of alternatives" involved in a possible sale of the airline, which could include spinning off the shuttle's routes and gates separately from the fleet.

In an unusual announcement, the Trump Shuttle said Tuesday it met a $1 million payment to a lending group led by Citibank. Nobles said the Trump shuttle was doing well and placed its current market share at "about 50 percent."

The Trump Shuttle, however, was also forced to announce Tuesday that it will cut down the number of its weekend flights, which will depart every two hours instead of every hour on Saturday afternoons and Sunday mornings.

The reduction in service, which the airline said was designed to cut costs follows other saving measures, such as paring down the number of free magazines and eliminating free coffee at the terminal.

Pan Am Corp., which was forced to put its shuttle on the market after reporting continuous and heavy quarterly losses, said its property also is attracting potential suitors.

"We are pursuing a sale for the shuttle through Kidder Peabody & Co.," said Pan Am spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon. "We will not comment on the progress until there is something substantive. But we definitely can report a strong interest."

JACKSONVILLE, FL (JUNE 20) UPI - Relatives of James Pough were given police protection Wednesday after they reported receiving death threats in reprisal for his massacre of eight people in a loan office.

Authorities and family members refused to disclose details of the alleged threats or the steps being taken to safeguard relatives still living in Jacksonville. Duval County sheriff's spokesman Asa Higgs said the matter was being taken seriously.

''They've had some threats on their lives. We're aware of it and we are dealing with it,'' Higgs said. ''We're taking their word that somebody is calling them and threatening them. I feel quite sure somebody is.''

The Monday attack on the General Motors Acceptance Corp. auto finance office was the final act in a two-day shooting spree that ended when Pough 42, shot and killed himself in the loan office.

Pough began his rampage by killing a prostitute and her pimp early Sunday and then wounding two teenagers 10 minutes later, Sheriff James McMillan said.

The next day Pough entered the GMAC office and sprayed it with gunfire from a .30-caliber semiautomatic rifle, killing eight people and wounding five others before committing suicide with a .38-caliber revolver.

McMillan has said that the GMAC attack may have been triggered by the January repossession of Pough's car, however, the sheriff has acknowledged that investigators may never know for certain the motivation behind the killings.

The grief-stricken city was preparing for a prayer vigil scheduled to be held Friday at the Jacksonville Convention Center. Mayor Tommy Hazouri has called the violent episode ''one of the darkest chapters in this city's history.''

Hazouri also called for tougher gun control laws after it was disclosed that Pough was able to purchase guns despite a history of violent crimes dating back to 1966, including a 1971 aggravated assault conviction.

Under current state law, Pough was able to legally buy guns after the 1971 conviction was purged from his record following five years of probation, as ordered by a judge.

McMillan said Pough voluntarily registered with the Sheriff's Office a .357-caliber revolver in 1976 and a .38-caliber pistol, different from the one he used in the GMAC attack, in 1979. A 9mm semiautomatic pistol found in Pough's car following the massacre was purchased from a gunshop in May 1990.

A new state law that takes effect Oct. 1 will allow people charged with a violent crime to buy guns only if their case ends in an acquittal.

But even that law would not have kept Pough from acquiring the semiautomatic rifle or the .38-caliber revolver he used in the loan office.

Authorities did not know where those guns came from, and Higgs doubted they ever would.

''The .30-caliber we know we won't be able to trace. It's such a popular weapon,'' Higgs said. ''It probably had hundreds of owners and there's no way of tracing its background.''

The same is true of the revolver, Higgs said. ''He could have got it on the street corner somewhere.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - Fourteen years after Congress first required such testing, the EPA has reviewed for possible harm to human health or the environment less than 1 percent of the 66,000 industrial chemicals now in use, investigators said Wednesday.

In a report that prompted admissions of mismanagement from Environmental Protection Agency officials, congressional investigators said the agency has looked at only 386 substances for potential danger even though Congress first ordered a comprehensive chemical testing program in 1976.

Of that number, the EPA had compiled complete toxicity data on only six chemicals, according to investigators with the General Accounting Office, the auditing arm of Congress.

''What is even more disturbing is that the EPA has not finished assessing any of those six chemicals to determine, from a toxicity standpoint, whether they should be regulated,'' Richard Hembra, leader of the GAO investigatory team, told a House government operations subcommittee on the environment.

Hembra noted that under the Toxic Substances Control Act of 1976, the EPA has the authority to order private industry to test chemicals to determine if they could harm factory workers, the public or the environment.

However, he said the EPA has failed to exercise that authority in a timely manner, leaving tens of thousands of industrial workers and other Americans exposed to chemicals long suspected of causing cancer, nerve damage or birth defects.

For example, Hembra cited aryl phosphates and glycidol and its derivatives both produced in large quantities and believed to be hazardous to human health.

The GAO said millions of pounds of aryl phosphates are produced each year for use as plasticizers, hydraulic fluids and in lubricants. Preliminary testing indicates exposure to aryl phosphates may cause paralysis and nerve damage.

More than 1,000 pounds of glycidol and its derivatives are manufactured yearly for use in epoxy glues. Experts estimate more than 100,000 workers are exposed to the chemical, which may cause cancer and genetic damage.

In its report, the GAO said the EPA had proposed toxicity testing for those two chemical groups in 1983, but never followed up with final requirements on industry.

''Until a final rule is issued, testing does not begin and industry does not develop the data needed to determine the health and environmental effects of potentially harmful chemicals,'' the GAO said.

''Since EPA has been slow to issue final rules, the health and environmental effects of thousands of chemicals remains unknown.''

Linda Fisher, assistant EPA administrator for pesticides and toxic substances, acknowledged delays in toxicity testing and said the EPA was moving to accelerate the program by focusing on the most heavily used chemicals of greatest concern. She said 14,000 chemicals were on the initial priority list, which might be narrowed down in the future.

''One of the keys to revitalizing (the program) is to assure that we are not 'testing for testing's sake' and that our screening and testing efforts actually lead to reduction of unreasonable risks in the real world

'' Fisher said. ''It is clear we must change the direction of the program.''

Fisher said one reason progress had been so slow was that EPA officials had been reviewing each chemical individually. The agency hopes to move faster by examining ''families'' of chemicals that are similar in structure and other characteristics, she said.

Fisher also said the EPA was working more closely with international environmental agencies and other countries to share the chemical testing burden.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - A convicted drug dealer testified Wednesday that he and Mayor Marion Barry plotted together to cover up their use of crack cocaine once they discovered that police were investigating them.

Charles Lewis, a former city worker and the prosecution's prime witness in its drug and perjury case against Barry, said that on four different days in December 1988 he smoked crack with Barry in the bathroom of a Ramada Inn in downtown Washington.

But after police began investigating activities in the hotel room, Barry phoned Lewis and they established an alibi, Lewis testified.

Lewis said, ''Believing that the phone was bugged and at the same time that the mayor and I needed to talk, the conversation went like this: I said, 'You didn't see any drugs in the room, did you Mr. Mayor?' and he said, 'Right, I didn't.'''

Lewis testified that if the phone was bugged, he wanted investigators to hear that ''I didn't know him to use any drugs and he didn't know me to use any drugs.'' He called the conversation ''a message of trying to fix a dam. ... We had a problem and we had to fix it.''

He said he talked to Barry again later that day, and Barry told him he would set up a meeting between Lewis and police. ''My understanding is that I ... would be telling the police a lie,'' Lewis testified.

The witness, who originally told a grand jury that he and Barry did not use drugs but later changed his story, was testifying as part of a plea agreement reached in November under which 14 felony counts - including seven perjury charges - were dropped.

Lewis, 50, was sentenced Jan. 19, to 15 months in prison for two counts of cocaine distribution. He could have faced a term of more than 150 years had he been tried and convicted on all the counts.

He was released from federal prison this month but still faces a sentence of up to 20 years on a separate drug conviction in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

''You got a pretty sweet deal, didn't you?'' defense lawyer R. Kenneth Mundy prodded Lewis in cross-examination.

''They put (the Virgin Islands sentencing) off for 14 or 15 months, since April of 1989,'' Mundy said. ''Isn't it true that the government wants to wait and see your performance here?''

Lewis responded affirmatively, and Barry smiled.

''You're still under the gun while you're testifying, aren't you?'' asked Mundy.

''I'm not under a gun,'' Lewis replied. ''My testimony isn't to convict the mayor. My testimony before the grand jury wasn't to indict the mayor.''

Mundy mocked Lewis. ''You were facing big time,'' he said, ''and then you had a pang of conscience.''

Barry is charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine use and one misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. If convicted he faces a maximum 26 years in prison and $1.85 million in fines.

At least seven of the 14 counts against Barry, including all three felony perjury charges, directly involve Lewis. Four counts charge Barry possessed cocaine on Dec. 16, 17, 19, and 22, 1988, at the Ramada Inn.

Lewis, who began testifying Tuesday, said Barry smoked crack with him on all four days. The mayor once smuggled a crack pipe into the hotel inside an overnight bag, and on another day had his chauffer deliver $100 cash for Lewis to buy crack, Lewis testified.

Lewis became the focus of a police investigation on Dec. 22, 1988, after a Ramada Inn maid told police he had offered her cocaine in exchange for sex. But as police were conducting undercover surveillance of Lewis later that day, Barry arrived and the investigation was aborted.

Lewis said he offered the maid drugs, but did not ask for sex. He said he asked her for a pen and paper because he was filling out a D.C. employment application at Barry's suggestion.

''I asked her if she wanted some crack cocaine,'' he said. ''I just asked her if she wanted some coke as a friendly gesture.''

Lewis said he learned about the police investigation an hour after Barry had left from a crack-smoking session when a reporter showed up at his hotel door.

Lewis said he then went into the bathroom, smoked the rest of the crack, smashed the glass pipe and flushed it down the toilet.

Lewis also testified that on Dec. 19, D.C. Department of Public Works official James McWilliams was in the hotel room when Barry smoked the crack. Lewis said McWilliams did not use the drugs, but had given him $50 to buy crack.

The grand jury probe that led to Barry's drug arrest in an FBI sting five months ago began with an investigation of the Ramada Inn incident. When Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at another city hotel, the Vista International, it was after the FBI allegedly videotaped him smoking crack cocaine.

Barry's defense says the mayor was entrapped and that the government made a deal with the ''devil'' to establish its case.

The perjury counts say Barry lied when he told a grand jury on Jan. 19, 1989, that he never knew Lewis was involved with drugs or talked to him about drugs, never gave cocaine to Lewis and never received cocaine at the Ramada Inn.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush declined to "pour fuel" on the raging debate over responsibility for the multibillion-dollar savings and loan debacle Wednesday, but he said industry loan policies of the 1980s were "foolish" and "certainly ill-advised."

Bush waded into the controversy during a news conference at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., a day after his spokesman launched a vigorous counterattack against members of Congress who have been blaming the White House for the crisis.

"You're almost getting me into the fight by the way you asked the question " Bush responded when asked if he felt Democrats were to blame for the scandal, which is expected to cost taxpayers as much as $500 billion over the next 30 years.

"But no, I want to get the savings and loan problem solved," Bush said. "A spark seemed to be ignited there, and I think more important than continuing to pour fuel on that spark is to work cooperatively with the Congress and try to get this mess solved."

Bush was questioned about the politics surrounding the collapse of the thrift industry and the resulting federal bailout because White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater went out of his way Tuesday to say that Democrats share blame for the mishandling of the problem and dared them to make the crisis a campaign issue in November.

Fitzwater "properly" responded to assertions "from certain distinguished members of the United States Senate" so as not "to acquiesce in those attacks."

"What he did was appropriate," Bush said. "But what I am trying to do is not respond to individuals and to simply keep moving forward on this process and not try to be out there saying, 'Here's who to blame and here's who's not to blame."'

But the president did criticize "some of the excesses of the loan policies" practiced by the industry and the negligence in savings and loan regulation when the crisis began building with the collapse of the 1980s real estate boom.

"I don't want to argue in favor of re-regulation of industries," Bush said. "But I will say that I think some of the loan policies instituted after the (1980 banking laws) changes were made were foolish and were certainly ill-advised."

A public interest group also joined in the fray Wednesday, saying the administration's efforts to crack down on fraud in the industry have been "anemic at best, irresponsible at worst."

"The original S&L calamity is now being compounded everyday by the administration's failure to bring law and order to the nation's financial industry," said Michael Waldman, director of Public Citizen's Congress Watch.

The collapse of the thrift industry is expected to cost taxpayers anywhere from $132 billion to $500 billion, making it the worst financial debacle since the Depression.

Bush also responded to charges that the administration, which launched an ambitious program last year to rescue the savings industry, has been slow to prosecute those responsible.

Reasserting that the first obligation of the government still is to protect depositors, he added that he has been assured by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh that "an active prosecution (is) underway" and that "impressive numbers of the cases ... are being followed up on now."

Bush is scheduled to discuss the crisis further Friday at the Justice Department, where Thornburgh has summoned the nation's 93 U.S. attorneys. At the Justice Department, wrestling with a growing backlog of thrift fraud cases and facing increasing criticism for the slow pace of prosecutions, a spokesman said Wednesday the prosecutors will be "sharing information, sharing investigative techniques."

Treasury Secretary Nicolas Brady also will attend the Friday meeting. According to the Public Citizen report, the department was actively pursuing only 891 cases of the nearly 7,000 referrals and complaints received as of February. The FBI has said there are more than 20,000 thrift fraud and embezzlement cases that have yet to be addressed.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., also introduced legislation Wednesday to step up the prosecutions, a measure that would encourage "whistle-blowers" in the thrift industry to share in any court awards that result from successful prosecutions.

CHARLOTTE, NC (UPI) - First Union National Bank Wednesday announced cuts, effective immediately, in home mortgage rates for low- and moderate-income customers.

First National said it is cutting the rates from 10.5 percent to 9.75 percent for a limited time this summer on mortgage loans made by its banks in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee.

The loans are made by the Charlotte-based bank's Affordable Home Mortgage Loan program.

The loans were introduced by First Unon in December 1989, and are available in amounts from $10,000 with as little as a 5 percent downpayment and terms of up to 30 years.

To qualify for the loan, the borrower's family income must be at or below 80 percent of the median income for the county in which the family lives.

First Union Corporation President John R. Georgius said the loan program has been well received throughout the bank's system.

''We know from our conversations with customers ... that we can make this product available to more people by offering even greater rate flexibility '' he said.

The mortgage program offers flexible qualifing criteria. The required five percent downpayment may include gifts, may be financed, or may include ''quantifiable sweat equity'' in some situations, Georgius said.

Sweat equity is work performed by the owner that adds value to the property.

In the special loan program, a borrower is permitted to take on mortgage payments amounting to up to 30 percent of his or her gross monthly income. All monthly debt payments can total up to 38 percent of the borrower's gross monthly income.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation has a mortgage plan allowing a borrower to take on payments amounting to up to 28 percent of the borrower's gross monthly income, with total monthly payments of up to 36 percent of gross monthly income.

The loans require no discount points and an origination fee of only one percent of the loan.

The loan program is part of First Union's continuing effort to meet needs of low and moderate income residents of communities served by the bank, said Barbara K. Massa, First Union senior vice president and director of community investment.

''We're happy to make this product more affordable - and housing more accessible - for our customers.''

First Union Corp. reported assets of $39.1 billion as of March 31.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - The dollar firmed up against the key currencies in New York trading Wednesday on reports that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev might soon resign his post as Communist Party secretary.

Rumors concerning resignation by the Soviet leader have periodically buffeted foreign exchange markets - but this time Gorbachev himself, in angry remarks to conservative Soviet critics, set them going. Currency traders said the market, hungry for news, bought the dollar to reverse the slump it had been in since late last week.

"The market seemed to be looking for a reason to correct a bit, and this was the perfect opportunity," said Gillie Augeri, chief dealer for the Connecticut National Bank's foreign exchange desk in Hartford.

In late New York trading the dollar was quoted at 1.6780 West German marks up from 1.6715 at Tuesday's close. It was fetching 153.97 Japanese yen, also up from 153.45 yen the previous session. "People are grasping for straws," said Morris Armstrong of the Girozentrale Vienna bank in New York.

Lingering uncertainties about the July 2 German monetary unification and the British pound's anticipated adhesion to the European exchange-rate mechanism have added to the dollar's appeal, both traders said.

Also helping the dollar are lower expectations that the Federal Reserve will bring down short-term U.S. interest rates soon. "Fed easing is going more and more by the wayside," Armstrong remarked.

Other dollar rates: 1.4125 Swiss francs, up from 1.4090; 5.6400 French francs, ahead from 5.6210; and 1,231 Italian lire, up from 1,227. The British pound eased slightly to $1.7215 from $1.7220.

In Europe, the dollar closed higher against all currencies but the pound and held to narrow ranges in the absence of fresh indicators.

"It's all swings and roundabouts at the moment. There's no direction," said analyst Stephen King ofd that the dollar also rose in Europe on the Gorbachev resignation reports.

But in London, the pound closed higher at $1.7215 compared with $1.7210. Dealers reported hectic late trading on indications that Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major would reveal Britain's plans for full adherence to the European Monetary System in a speech late Wednesday.

But the British Broadcasting Corp. said Major would offer a rival plan to the EMS exchange rate mechanism instead of British entry.

In Frankfurt, the dollar climbed to 1.6815 deutsche marks against 1.6730, and moved up in Zurich to 1.4185 Swiss francs from 1.4075.

The U.S. unit closed slightly higher in Paris, Milan and Brussels, at 5.6395 francs from 5.6370, 1,230.70 lire compared with 1,230.15 and 34.50 Belgian francs against 34.46 at the close Tuesday.

Earlier in Tokyo, the U.S. dollar edged up against the Japanese yen in a dull trading day, ending at 153.98 yen against 153.72.

European currencies, especially the British pound, were actively bought while there was little interest in the dollar or yen.

In Zurich, gold declined to $347 an ounce from $348.20, but rose in London to $348 an ounce compared with $347.75 the day before.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $350 an ounce, up from $348.50 Tuesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $350.50 an ounce, also ahead from $349.10 the day before.

Silver was up in Zurich at $4.85 an ounce from $4.84 Tuesday but was down in London at $4.82 an ounce against $4.84.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.85 an ounce, up from $4.845. Comex silver settled at $4.832 an ounce, ahead from $4.815.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - Republican and Democratic managers of the first overhaul of the nation's housing policy in a decade, warning of an impending financial crisis, pressed Wednesday for changes in the government's single-family home loan insurance program.

Sens. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., outlined separate proposals to the housing bill to assure the financial soundness of the Federal Housing Administration program, the government's primary source of assistance for for moderate and middle income home buyers.

D'Amato and Cranston agreed that there is a problem - and that Congress must act now - but differed on the scope and gravity of the cash crunch in FHA's highly popular home loan insurance program.

Cranston said FHA ''is in some jeopardy, not now but in the future'' unless changes are made. But D'Amato warned the FHA program ''could eventually become another thrift problem'' in reference to the savings and loan crisis that is costing taxpayers billions to resolve.

D'Amato and Cranston presented their proposals and negotiations continued with the administration over a possible compromise which, if reached, both said they would embrace.

Senate and administration representatives were also working on several other provisions in the complex bill, designed to revamp federal housing policy in an effort to provide decent and affordable housing for all Americans.

The scope of the FHA single-family mortgage loan insurance program was set out in an audit by Price Waterhouse June 6 which found the fund currently solvent but showed an ''alarming erosion'' in the past 10 years.

D'Amato said Price Waterhouse estimated the FHA Mutual Mortgage Insurance would lose $200 million to $500 million this year but said that would be a ''miniscule'' estimate of the total loss.

The Cranston proposal would require an up-front FHA premium of not less than 3.8 percent, which the administration has recommended, eventually declining to 1.35 percent. There also would be a ''pay-as-you-go'' annual premium of not less than .6 percent for the run of the mortgage. The up-front premium would not be refundable in the event of foreclosure.

D'Amato's more radical changes would establish risk-based premiums, higher premiums with lower down payments; require all closing costs be paid up front and not rolled into the mortage loan; would increase the down payment to 5 percent, instead of the current 3 percent on the first $25,000; require lenders to maintain a net worth of $250,000 or 1 percent of their FHA mortgage value; and increase capitalization of the mortage funds to up to 2 percent of the loans outstanding ''in the future'' after staggered increases in the next five years.

The Senate approved 89-11 an amendment by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., which would authorize $452.5 million for a variety of social and health services for persons in subsidized housing and in low-income neighborhoods in in an effort to prevent and reduce homelessess.

It's Nelson Mandela's day in New York City.

Mandela arrived in the Big Apple this morning to be greeted by dignitaries cheers and fanfare. He flew into the city from Canada, accompanied by his wife Winnie.

The 71-year South African black leader was hailed on his arrival for his ''conviction and courage'' in the field of human rights. Mandela said his current 13-nation, six-week tour will continue to center on his opposition to lifting sanctions against the Pretoria government.

He's being welcomed with what has become a New York tradition... a ticker-tape parade up Broadway to City Hall. He even has his own ''Mandela-mobile'' to ride in the parade. It's a special truck with a bullet-proof glass enclosure mounted on it.

New York is Mandela's first stop on a 12-day, eight-city tour of the United States.

(JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush has broken off diplomatic contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization because of the P-L-O's failure to distance itself from an attempted raid on Israeli beaches last month.

The president told reporters in Huntsville, Alabama, that Washington has given the P-L-O- QUOTE- ''ample time to deal with this issue.'' He added that- ''to date, the P-L-O has NOT provided a credible accounting of the incident.''

The Bush administration had insisted that P-L-O chief Yasser Arafat denounce the May 30th failed attack, which was launched by a P-L-O splinter group led by Abu Abbas.

Although the P-L-O last week denounced attacks on civilians, it did NOT point a finger at Abbas, falling short of meeting U-S conditions for continued dialogue.

Those conditions were authorized by President Reagan in December 1988 after Arafat bowed to U-S calls to renounce terrorism.

(JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush suffered a setback in the House today when lawmakers over-rode his veto of a bill that would allow federal workers to engage in political activities.

The vote to over-ride came on a 327-93 ballot. The measure was then sent to the Senate, where a vote is scheduled tomorrow.

The bill would allow three-Million federal employees to take part in nearly all political activities. They would be barred, however, from running for public office on a partisan ticket.

The bill would alter the Hatch Act, which was passed by Congress in 1939 in response to scandals involving political patronage. Bush vetoed the bill last week, noting that the Hatch Act was designed to protect federal workers from political pressures and preserve an impartial, even-handed conduct of government business.

His veto was his 12th since taking office. Congress has so far NOT been able to over-ride any of them.

China has freed three dissidents arrested before the anniversary of last year's crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing

Taiwan's state-run radio says pop-singer Hou Dejian... the last of the three dissidents arrested before the June 3rd anniversary... arrived in Taiwan today by fishing boat from the Chinese mainland.

Earlier, Zhou Duo and a former editor of Beijing Normal University's newspaper were released.

In an interview yesterday, Zhou said he was treated well during his stay at a suburban Beijing hotel.

All three of the dissidents disappeared on May 30th.

That was the eve of a scheduled news conference where they planned to issue an open letter asking China's hard-line government to free political prisoners.

The dissidents' release coincides with reports that authorities have arrested a Beijing University student.

University sources say Li Mingqi was arrested on June 15th for speaking at a midnight campus rally marking the anniversary of the Tiananmen Square Massacre.

(JUNE 20) UPI - Budget Director Richard Darman is to present a new deficit-cutting budget plan to White House and congressional negotiators today.

The plan reportedly calls for a 45-BILLION to 50-BILLION-dollar package that will propose cuts in domestic and entitlement programs... such as Medicare and agricultural programs. The proposal also is reported to contain only minor reductions in defense spending.

But even as Darman prepared to submit the plan, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen expressed doubts. The Texas Democrat said that if the plan is top heavy in cutting domestic and entitlement programs he could NOT support it.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sesser voiced a similar view. Said the Tennessee Democrat: ''I am very pessimistic and very discouraged about chances for a successful budget summit'' if the rumored cuts are contained in the plan.

Officials have NOT determined the cause of a fire and two explosions aboard the aircraft carrier Midway during routine maneuvers today off Japan.

16 sailors were hurt in the incident and another man is listed as missing.

Nine of the wounded were evacuated to Tokyo-area hospitals where Japanese officials say two Americans are listed in critical condition with severe burns.

Navy spokesman Gary Gunderson says the Midway was conducting routine flight operations in the Pacific about 125 miles northeast of Tokyo when an explosion ripped through a damage control storeroom four decks below the flight deck.

A Pentagon spokesman says the fire is contained, but Gunderson says it's still burning and sailors are unable to get to it.

Officials say the 45-year-old carrier lost one of its two aircraft-launching catapults in the explosion.

The ship reportedly is under its own power and on its way back to Japan, where investigators will try to figure out what exactly happened.

The National Weather Service says a tornado touched down in Nickerson, Kansas, and more funnel clouds were spotted in south central Kansas and extreme eastern Colorado. Thunderstorms packing 100-mile-an-hour winds struck a six-county area of south central Kansas last night.

Widespread power outages were reported, and 41 people were injured in Sedgwick County, Kansas. Some of the injuries occurred when fierce winds overturned mobile homes.

About 40-thousand people were without power this morning in Wichita. The city's streets were littered with downed tree limbs.

As the Midwest and Plains experienced harsh weather, the South was gripped by a heat wave.

A convicted drug dealer testified today that he and Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry plotted together to cover up their use of crack cocaine once they discovered police were investigating them.

Charles Lewis, a former city worker, is the prosecution's prime witness in its drug and perjury case against Barry.

And during today's second day of testimony, he told jurors that he smoked crack with Barry in a bathroom of a Washington, D-C, Ramada Inn on four separate occasions in December 1988.

Lewis said that once they knew police were onto them, he and Barry tried to establish alibis but were worried about taps on the telephones.

Reportedly, the two men... believing investigators were listening in on their phone conversations... would make a point to say how they did NOT do drugs.

Lewis testified as part of a plea agreement.

Earlier this year, he was sentenced to 15 months in prison on two counts of cocaine distribution.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - Stocks closed narrowly mixed Wednesday in light trading after the blue chips got a late boost from a bout of computerized program buying.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 11.38 Tuesday, edged up 1.74 to close at 2895.30.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.23 to 195.84 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.63 to 359.10. The price of an average share rose 4 cents.

Declines led advances 765-673 among the 1,995 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 137,420,000 shares, versus 134,930,000 shares traded Tuesday.

The market opened higher, with the Dow industrials posting double-digit gains and advances leading declines by about 2 to 1.

Prices were bolstered by strength in the Treasury bond market after a few sessions of weakness. In the early going, Treasuries were up about 1/4 point.

But the gains in stocks and bonds were wiped out by midday when the Federal Reserve issued its ''beige book'' report on economic conditions around the country. The report cited continued slow growth in the economy with little change in the underlying inflation rate.

But it also said the manufacturing sector seemed to be rebounding in some regions and that capital goods industries were growing, which sparked selling by bond traders who felt the report would not encourage the Fed to cut interest rates.

The long bond traded at 102 30/32, up 3/32, before the report but in late trading was about 3/8 point lower.

The blue chips were saved from a close in the minus column, however, by a late bout of computerized program buying, used to profit on price spreads between stocks and stock index futures.

''Basically the programs came in to cover short positions,'' said Tom

Gallagher, managing director in charge of capital commitment at Oppenheimer & Co., referring to buying by investors who had sold stocks short thinking prices would go still lower. When they didn't fall further, those players then began to buy, thinking that prices were at their low point for the time being.

''Most people expected the market to get hit worse than it did. It went down but didn't fail badly,'' said Gallagher.

Gallagher said the advance might extend into Thursday's trading, taking the Dow up perhaps 5 or 10 points.

''But the market is in a correction phase,'' he said. ''I think the bigger move will be to the downside here.''

On the trading floor, Varity was the most active issue, off 1/8 at 3.

Canadian Pacific followed, up 1/8 to 18 in dividend-related trading. Banc One was third, down 5/8 to 28 7/8. An issue of 10 million shares was priced at $29 a share through underwriters led by Goldman Sachs.

Drug companies fared well. Upjohn was active, up 2 1/8 to 42 1/8 amid renewed takeover speculation. Abbott Laboratories was actively traded as well, up 1 to 40 after a Food and Drug Administration panel reportedly recommended approval for the company's test kit to help doctors assess the growth or shrinkage of tumors in breast cancer patients.

And Schering-Plough, which has been mentioned as a possible acquiror of Upjohn, added 3/4 to 45 3/4 after saying again it expects an increase of 18 to 20 percent in 1990 earnings per share.

Among the blue chips, AT&T rose 5/8 to 43 1/8, IBM fell 3/4 to 118, Philip Morris lost 3/4 to 43 1/2 and pharmaceutical giant Merck was up 3/4 to 82 1/4.

COLUMBIA, SC (JUNE 20) UPI - A federal grand jury returned a four-count indictment Wednesday against a Pickens, S.C., company accused of falsifying tests on weapons components sold to the Department of Defense and other defense contractors.

The components division of Sangamo Weston Inc. was charged with one count of conspiracy to defraud the Defense Department and three counts of making and causing the submission of false statements to the agency.

Authorities said Sangamo and a number of its current and former employees conspired to falsify the results of mandatory Defense Department testing the company performed on random sample lots of mica capacitors used in the Minuteman and Hawk missile systems, the Poseidon submarine, the F-4 Phantom fighter and other weapons.

The government claims the activities began at an unknown time and continued through about March 1986, when the irregularities were reported by an employee of a company that bought the Sangamo Weston components division.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mary Gordon Baker, who is involved in the prosecution of the case, said there have been ''no known field failures from the mica capacitors that were able to be traced from Sangamo Weston.''

Federal authorities alleged tests on the capacitors were falsified through a method of replacing failing numerical test readings with fabricated data supplied to employees by supervisory personnel.

The altered test data was then presented to a Defense Department quality assurance representative for certification, and the fraudulent results were later summarized and submitted to the Defense Electronics Supply Center in order for Sangamo Weston to continue as a government-qualified supplier.

A company spokesman was not immediately available to comment Wednesday.

During the 1980s, as much as half of Sangamo Weston's average annual sales of $20 million came from the Defense Department and other defense contractors.

About 40 percent of the company's total mica capacitor production is used for military purposes. The devices store electrical energy, block the flow of direct electrical energy and permit the flow of alternating or pulsating electrical current. They have varied defense applications.

U.S. Attorney Bart Daniel said the components division, a former subsidiary of Schlumberger Technology Corp. of Houston and currently a subsidiary of Cornell-Dubilier Electronics Inc. of Wayne, N.J., could face a total of $2 million in fines if convicted on all counts.

The investigation was conducted by the Atlanta field office of the Defense Criminal Investigative Service and the Greenville, S.C., office of the FBI.

WILMINGTON, DEL (JUNE 20) UPI - The Court of Chancery released Wednesday a decision favoring former Shell Oil Co. shareholders in a lawsuit contesting the 1985 merger of Shell Oil into Royal Dutch Shell.

Vice Chancellor Maurice A. Hartnett found the Dutch company erred in failing to disclose $1 billion in oil and natural gas reserves in materials distributed to shareholders before the merger transaction.

But Hartnett did not award damages in the case, leaving it up to the parties in the class-action suit, filed on behalf of stockholders who collectively owned 15 million Shell Oil shares, to suggest a course of action.

Shell Oil said it was ''disappointed'' in the ruling because the court based its decision on ''an inadvertent error which left out about 8 percent of the discounted future net cash flow from estimated oil and gas reserves.''

The company said a discounted cash flow analysis is ''soft data'' based on numerous assumptions and estimates.

''In view of the voluminous information that was furnished to the shareholders, we believe they could readily have made an informed decision with respect to the 1985 merger proposal,'' said a Shell Oil statement issued from the company's Houston headquarters.

Royal Dutch breached its legal obligations to the shareholders, said Tom Preston, the attorney who represented them in the class action.

Traditionally, the remedy in such a case would be to dissolve the merger, Preston said, adding Hartnett does not want to dissolve the merger because it happened five years ago.

One option would be for Hartnett to consolidate the suit the Chancery Court ruled on with another pending lawsuit involving holders of another 1 million shares. Hartnett then could decide how much additional money these stockholders deserve for each of their shares.

''That would mean you would have some 16 to 17 million shares being awarded something like $10 a share. That's very substantial,'' Preston said.

Preston said the most important factor in the case was an analysis that contained the $1 billion error concerning the existence of oil and gas reserves, which Royal Dutch executives maintained they knew nothing about.

''But the court says, 'You just can't walk away from that as a majority shareholder. Even though you didn't know, you should have known,''' Preston said.

Royal Dutch owned 70 percent of Shell Oil stock in 1984 when it decided to acquire the remaining 30 percent.

The Shell board rejected the Royal Dutch offer, prompting Royal Dutch to initiate a hostile takeover during which it ended up acquiring 94 percent of Shell Oil's stock for $58 a share. Under Delaware law at that time, Royal Dutch was entitled to take over Shell Oil once it acquired 90 percent.

Ray Smith of High Point, N.C., initiated the class-action lawsuit. The biggest single shareholder in the class-action lawsuit is the Shell Oil pension fund, Preston said.

Preston and a Shell spokesman in Houston both said they did not know how many pension fund shares were involved in the suit.

NEW YORK (JUNE 20) UPI - The U.S. air transportation industry grew to $594.2 billion in 1989 - a 13.8 percent increase over 1987 - amounting to 5.6 percent of the U.S. gross national product, an independent industry group said Wednesday.

The air transportation industry, which covers aviation and related sectors generated 8.4 million jobs in 1989, according to a report by the Washington-based Partnership for Improved Air Travel, which represents consumers and members of the aviation and tourism industries.

The group said the $594.2 billion figure included $86.5 billion from the airport sector and aviation industry manufacturing; $108 billion in travel-related revenues; and $399.7 billion in a broad range of economic activities resulting from air travel.

About 8.4 million people were employed in 1989 in the air transportation sector and earned a total $178.1 billion in wages and salaries, up 14.6 percent compared to 1987, the association said.

In commercial aircraft manufacturing, employment jumped 22 percent, and wages and salaries increased 33 percent in 1989 compared to 1987, the report said.

''The study again demonstrates that air transportation makes a major contribution to the American economy and the economies of every state amd major metropolitan area,'' said Herbert Kelleher, chairman of the group and president of Southwest Airlines.

''But some results foreshadow future economic consequences if insufficient airport and traffic control capacity and other economic factors team up to reduce air travel,'' he said.

Kelleher said the group will seek nationwide support to obtain a broad improvement of air transportation infrastructure, including improved capacity and efficiency at U.S. airports, better traffic control systems and modern infrastructures between airports and the cities they serve.

The partnership also said it will oppose ''unnecessary increases in taxes on air travel,'' in response to a proposed 25 percent increase in airfare taxes submitted by House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees.

''The governement has not yet been able to fully use the $4 billion in user taxes collected every year, let alone the $7 billion surplus in the Aviation Trust Fund,'' Kelleher said. ''What is the extra money for?''

He pointed out that current airfare taxes would be enough to fund a $2 billion increase in the Federal Aviation Administration budget for 1991.

''Congress should not agree to an aviation user tax increase that will add a billion dollars to air travel costs, just to make the federal deficit appear smaller - on paper,'' Kelleher said. It will be just another gimmick.''

Another industry group, the Washinton-based Airport Operators Council International, simultanously released its 1989 annual report on 367 airports throughout the world.

The report said 1.12 billion passengers boarded a plane last year, a 3.2 percent increase from 1988, and projected that 1.9 billion passengers will travel by air by the year 2,000.

Americans are the world's most frequent flyers, with 480.4 million passengers boarding a plane in the United States in 1989, a small 1 percent increase compared to 1988, the report said.

BOSTON (JUNE 20) UPI - A tugboat captain said he mistook a pleasure boat on his radar screen for a navigational buoy when he steered a 465-foot barge into a rocky ledge in Buzzards Bay this week, the Coast Guard reported Wednesday.

''The master of the vessel said he mistook a small boat in the channel for a buoy,'' said Petty Officer Dan Vineski. ''That may or may not be the case, but it will be part of the investigation.''

The tug pushed the barge into Cleveland Ledge in foggy weather Monday, grounding it and damaging its hull Sunday five nautical miles from Cape Cod Canal.

A preliminary investigation by the Coast Guard is focusing on human error, officials said.

''Preliminary investigations basically found that there was no problem with any of the navigation or propulsion machinery of the tug,'' Vineski said. ''It could be human error or a combination of human error and the weather.''

Rocks ripped several cracks and a 70-foot gash into the hull of the barge, which spilled about 200 gallons of No. 2 diesel fuel. The barge, owned by Bouchard Shipping Co. of New York City was carrying five million gallons of oil.

Divers patched the leaks with plywood, wood chips and glue Wednesday to prepare it to be towed to New York for permanent repairs, Coast Guard officials said.

''We're hoping the hull repairs and pumping will be completed sometime today, tonight at the latest, with departure sometime tomorrow if everything goes well,'' Vineski said.

Either the operator or owner of the tug will be cited for violating the Clean Water Act, with a fine set by the Coast Guard Hearing Officer in Boston.

The vessel was refloated Monday and towed 3 miles west to deeper, sheltered waters in Buzzards Bay, and repair crews Tuesday completed pumping oil out of four ruptured storage tanks.

The barge hit bottom approximately one mile from where the passenger liner Bermuda Star ripped open its hull on rocks last week.

SANTIAGO, CHILE (JUNE 20) UPI - Health authorities declared a ''total ecological alert'' Wednesday in Santiago because of excessive air pollution, ordering 40 percent of motor vehicles off the streets and closing smog-producing industries.

The measure was the first ''total alert'' of the year for Santiago, whose customary smog is being worsened by a drought that fills the air with dust.

The city, clouded in by dense smog, has had two 48-hour partial ecology alerts since March, with less stringent decontamination measures than the ones decreed Wednesday.

On any given day 20 percent of Santiago's fleet of 460,000 motor vehicles are not allowed to circulate, a routine environmental protection measure.

Police Wednesday ordered 40 percent of the motor vehicles off the streets, controlling those permitted to take to the roads by the numbers of their license plates.

In another restriction, 80 industries judged to be Santiago's worst polluters were temporarily closed.

Police also stopped buses and other vehicles with bad exhaust systems Wednesday and ordered them off the streets.

Subway service was stepped up by 20 seconds between trains, which normally circulate every 2 1/2 minutes, to help make up for the shortage of surface public transportation.

Government scientists said weather conditions have produced 630 micrograms of suspended particles in the air in Santiago. Health experts say any amount of suspended solids in air beyond 300 micragrams represents a danger to the health of children, pregnant women and the elderly.

TWINSBURG, OHIO (JUNE 20) UPI - Revco D.S. Inc. Wednesday said it would close two Alabama stores and sell 44 other outlets, raising to 485 the number of stores to be eliminated from what was once the nation's largest drugstore chain.

Revco, which has been operating under federal bankruptcy protection since July 1988, announced Jan. 26 it would seek buyers for 712 stores in 17 states and keep its 1,100 stores in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New York, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, the Carolinas and eastern Tennessee.

The company said Wednesday it will sell six of its drug stores in Alabama, one in Columbus, Ga., and one in Starkville, Miss., to Big B Inc. of Bessemer Ala. Two Alabama stores are to be sold to Harco Drug Inc. of Northport, Ala.

Big B is also purchasing pharmacy files and inventory of 20 other Revco stores in Alabama, and one each in Madison, Fla, Columbus, Ga., and Waveland, Miss. Harco Drug will purchase pharmacy files, inventory and fixtures of another 10 Revco stores in Alabama and one in Columbus, Ga.

Two other Alabama stores, one in Auburn and one in Tuscaloosa, will be closed by Revco.

''The disposition of these stores places Revco a good step closer to completion of our divestiture program,'' Chairman Boake Sells said. ''I commend the people of Revco for the strength they've shown throughout this process.''

Revco on June 5 announced an agreement to sell 220 stores in Texas, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana and Oklahoma to the Jack Eckerd Corp. of Clearwater, Fla.

On April 27 an agreement was announced to sell 221 stores in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan and Missouri to the Reliable Holdings Corp. of Fort Worth, Texas.

Revco's bankruptcy filing in July 1988 came only 19 months after founder and Chairman Sidney Dworkin took the company private in a $1.2 billion leveraged buyout amid optimistic sales and earnings forecasts.

Sells later replaced Dworkin.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - Victor Stello, the Energy Department official in charge of two of the government's most troubled nuclear weapons plants, gave suspect testimony to Congress about his role in a Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigation, an NRC investigator said Wednesday.

In a report to the NRC commissioners, NRC Inspector General David Williams said Stello made false and contradictory statements to Congress about his actions as the NRC's executive director of operations, the post he held prior to joining the Energy Department last year.

In particular, Williams said Stello was not straightforward in explaining his actions in an internal NRC probe into Roger Fortuna, an NRC official accused of divulging sensitive information to an anti-nuclear activist. The probe never verified any substantial wrongdoing by Fortuna.

Stello was criticized for not promplty investigating alleged safety problems at a New York nuclear power plant. Stello claimed he did not act for fear of jeopardizing the probe of Fortuna, but the inspector general said that contention was not borne out by the facts.

''Investigation disclosed that Stello's testimony to Congress and to (NRC) investigators concerning this matter is contradicted in some instances by either his actions, other statements that he makes, or other facts in the case,'' Williams concluded.

Williams, who also questioned statements by other NRC officials in regard to the Fortuna matter, said he was referring parts of his report to the Justice Department to determine if there had been criminal misconduct.

Williams did not specify which individuals were involved in the Justice Department referral, but he said Stello's conduct ''presents the possibility'' of perjury.

Williams' report is the latest setback for Stello, who in April withdrew his nomination to be assistant energy secretary for defense programs because of controversy over his record at the NRC, particularly the Fortuna affair.

Stello withdrew after the Senate Armed Services Committee in January delayed hearings on his nomination to await Williams' report.

As assistant energy secretary in charge of defense programs, Stello would have overseen the cleanup and modernization of the Energy Department's troubled nuclear weapons complex.

Those facilities have been the subject of intense controversy due to widespread toxic and radioactive contamination and safety problems threatening residents living near the plants.

After he withdrew his nomination, Energy Secretary James Watkins named Stello deputy assistant secretary for facilities, a post that does not require Senate confirmation.

However, in his current job Stello is responsible for restarting the department's aging weapons reactors at the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina and also rehabilitating the Rocky Flats plutonium processing plant in Colorado.

Both plants are shut down because of safety problems and the focus of intense public and congressional scrutiny. Watkins says both must be reactivated soon to maintain the nation's nuclear weaspons arsenal.

In response to Williams' report, the Energy Department issued a statement saying Stello was doing an ''outstanding job'' and that Williams' report raised no new significant issues. The department said Stello ''continues to have Admiral Watkins' full support.''

Scott Williams, a spokesman for the Senate Armed Services Committee, said committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., had no immediate comment on the report.

However, Greenpeace, the environmental group, called on Watkins to remove Stello's responsibility for Savannah River and Rocky Flats, saying Williams' report showed Stello could not be trusted by the public to tell the truth about safety at the sensitive facilities.

In his report, Williams also said that during the course of the Fortuna probe, Stello ''did not act in a timely manner'' to address safety issues brought to his attention concerning the Nine Mile Point nuclear power plant in upstate New York.

Williams said Stello defended his failure to act promptly on the safety issues on the grounds they were related to the Fortuna controversy and he did not want to jeopardize that probe by tipping off Fortuna about the probe.

However, Williams said: ''This argument is not credible. The health-safety allegations could have been examined without jeopardizing the Fortuna investigation.''

Williams also said Stello's explanations were contradicted by facts in the case and at times contradited his previous statements.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The House soundly defeated a move Wednesday to cut funds by 50 percent for TV Marti, the recently launched program of government-sponsored television broadcasts to Cuba.

The proposal to cut funds from $16 million to $8 million was offered by Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., during debate on the 1991 appropriation bill for the Commerce, Justice and State Departments and other agencies. The amendment was rejected on a 306-111 vote.

Alexander argued the decline of communism around the world makes the U.S. propoganda broadcasts unncessary. The appropriations bill ''is clinging to the Cold War. We all know that communism has been defeated by capitalism and democracy.''

He said the money should be used to reduce the deficit or to fight drug abuse.

Alexander cited support for his amendment by the National Association of Broadcasters, which is concerned about efforts by Cuba to jam the broadcasts, interfering with U.S. stations.

TV Marti recently began broadcasting on a test basis. A report on the effectiveness of the broadcasts will be sent to President Bush who will decide whether to continue the effort.

Opponents of Alexander's amendment criticized the timing of the move.

Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-Fla., a native of Cuba, said the TV Marti broadcasts have ''opened up the eyes of the Cuban people by broadcasting uncensored images ... that dispel the misinformation and outright lies that Fidel Castro has perpetuated.''

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, opposed the amendment. The Cold War may be over in Alexander's view, he said, ''but it isn't over as far as Castro is concerned.''

The bill also provides $13.2 million for radio broadcasts to Cuba. That program, also run by the U.S. Information Agency, has been in operation for several years.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 20) UPI - In a volatile atmosphere mixing hope and frustration, the head of the National AIDS Commission Wednesday urged the 12,000 people attending the 6th International AIDS Conference to turn anger into action.

Despite organizers' pleas to allow the world's premier AIDS research meeting to proceed uninterrupted, AIDS activists staged demonstrations inside and outside the Moscone Convention Center to protest discrimination against people with the AIDS virus and the lack of a cure or vaccine for the deadly disease.

Several hours before the meeting opened, protesters began handing out 10,000 buttons and flyers, bearing the message ''Walls Will Not Protect Us from AIDS'' to people entering the conference hall. Police had already erected barricades intended to keep demonstrators at least a half-block away from the convention site.

In Washington, the National Association of People with AIDS said it sent 600 white roses to the White House with a message calling for stronger leadership from President Bush, who declined an invitation to speak at the conference opening.

''I would like to say how sorry I am, and how embarrassed as an an American, that our country - whose tradition serves as a proud beacon for emerging democracies - should persist in such misguided and irrational current policy,'' Dr. June Osborn, head of the U.S. National AIDS Commission, said in a speech prepared for delivery at the opening ceremony.

But Osborn, who dedicated her remarks to groups boycotting the meeting, added: ''We must learn to cope usefully with anger. There is room, and cause, for anger ... but it must be transformed into resolve in order to be useful.''

In the almost 10 years since the mysterious syndrome was first diagnosed among U.S. homosexual men, the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus or HIV was discovered, tests were developed to protect the blood supply and some drugs have been developed to slow disease progression.

''Despite those scientific milestones, much remains to be done. There is, as yet, no cure. There is no effective vaccine. Many social and political policies remain discriminatory. And the epidemic is spreading,'' Dr. Julius Krevans, chancellor of the University of California-San Francisco, a co-sponsor of the conference, said in welcoming remarks.

Also scheduled to address the gathering was Peter Staley of the New York-based AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, or ACT UP, who is infected with the AIDS virus.

''On my side the level of anger and frustration is reaching such a point that attitudes claiming that all of you (researchers) are uncaring and in it for greed are now widespread,'' Staley said in prepared remarks.

The keynote address was to be delivered by Eunice Kiereini, head of the World Health Organization's nursing task force in Kenya.

The National Academy of Sciences, meanwhile, released a report that concluded the AIDS epidemic will broaden its deadly attack on the United States over the next decade, striking more women, teenagers and others once thought at low risk for the devastating disease.

''The disease is becoming more a generalized American phenomenon and less a bicoastal, urban entity,'' the report said.

Embroiled in controversy almost as soon as the 1989 AIDS meeting ended in Montreal, about 100 health and civil rights groups, including the League of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies and International Planned Parenthood Federation, were boycotting the San Franciso meeting to protest U.S. restrictions on AIDS-infected travelers.

About 500 demonstrators tied up downtown traffic Tuesday with a noisy march and at least eight people were arrested, mostly for trespassing by jumping over police barricades at a federal building housing the offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

San Francisco police, criticized for overreacting in past demonstrations, have approached the AIDS conference with new crowd control training that calls for a gentler approach to potentially explosive situations. They have provided AIDS education classes for officers and assigned special ''gay sensitive'' officers, many of them homosexual, to the demonstration sites.

About 10,000 delegates - about triple the number that attended the 1984 Democratic National Convention in San Francisco - are attending the conference from 74 nations, along with about 1,700 journalists.

The meeting coincides with Gay Pride Week, an event that draws more than 100,000 people to San Francisco, the U.S. city hardest hit by the AIDS epidemic.

Although the conference is the leading scientific forum for AIDS research and some promising new findings are expected to be reported, no major advancements in the development a vaccine or treatment are anticipated.

The AIDS virus has infected at least 6 million people worldwide, including about 1 million Americans. More than 136,000 AIDS cases have been reported in the United States since the epidemic was detected in 1981 and more than 83,000 have died, more than the number of Americans killed in the Vietnam and Korean wars combined.

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 20) UPI - A spokesman for McDonnell Douglas Corp. said Wednesday the defense contracting giant was preparing plans for across-the-board layoffs that reportedly threaten to idle 10 percent of its workers nationwide.

Spokesman Jim Reed refused to comment on reports that about 10 percent of the company's 127,000 work force would be laid off in the next few months.

But the aircraft and weapons manufacturer is seeking to cut about $700 million in annual costs and ''substantial layoffs across the corporation'' wiil be required, Reed said.

Reed said the company would have a cost-cutting plan detailing the number and nature of layoffs and other economy moves by early August.

KMOX Radio in St. Louis cited sources in the aerospace company who said 10 percent of its workers would be laid off in the next few months.

Reed said the cost-cutting was made necessary by reduced U.S. defense in face of easing world tensions.

McDonnell Douglas, the largest employer in Missouri and manufacturer of such staples of the U.S. military as the F-15E Eagle fighter jet, employs 127,000 workers nationally, including about 40,000 workers at its military production plant in the St. Louis suburb of Hazelwood.

Representatives of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, the largest union at the St. Louis plant, said they were awaiting word of the layoffs from company executives and planned to issue a statement Thursday.

Reed said the layoffs would affect all levels of employees from management to blue collar workers, including the company's passenger jet plant in Long Beach, Calif.

''The objective here is to reduce costs,'' Reed said. ''We want to eliminate approximately $700 million per year from the corporation's cost structure, and to do that we need to have substantial layoffs across the corporation. We're also looking at overtime, travel, new hiring, advertising and support activities.

''This is going to be a substantial, across-the-corporation layoff,'' he said. ''The objective is to reduce costs, and that will imporove our profitability.''

Reed said, ''We want to have the overall plan to achieve these cost reductions by early August. These decisions about how many people will be affected, where they are, who will be affected, are being made now, but they haven't been made yet.''

(JUNE 20) UPI - President Bush cut off all diplomatic contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization today on grounds that one of its associatied groups plotted a terrorist attack against Israel. Bush said he acted because the P-L-O failed to act against the faction involved in a plan to stage a beach attack in Israel last month. Speaking at Huntsville, Alabama, Bush said the United States would be willing to resume talks with the P-L-O once it condemns the incident.

South African black leader Nelson Mandela was the toast of New York City today. Soon after his arrival in the Big Apple this morning, Mandela and his wife Winnie road up Broadway in a ticker-tape parade to the cheers of thousands of well-wishers. The couple also was greeted by tons of streamers, confetti and sheets of computer paper pouring out of skyscrapers in the city's financial district. The coupled smiled and waved as they rolled along in a so-called ''Mandela-mobile,''

Soviet conservative hard-liners reportedly said today that President Gorbachev might have to choose between his roles as head of the government and head of the Communist Party. The Soviet news agency Tass says Gorbachev's critics implied that the Soviet president should step down from his post as Communist Party General Secretary if he is unwilling to devote complete attention to it.

Western diplomats in Liberia say the country's six-month civil war appears to have ground to a halt. MIAMI (JUNE 20) UPI - The U.S. government agreed Wednesday to ask foreign governments to release the millions of dollars in frozen assets of former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega to pay for his legal defense.

The government made the concession in an out-of-court settlement with Noriega's attorneys, who had threatened to withdraw from the case because of lack of funds to pay for Noriega's defense on drug-trafficking charges.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler approved the agreement during a 10-minute hearing, which Noriega did not attend.

''The government decided it was in the best interest of all parties to resolve this issue once and for all,'' Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Sullivan told the judge. ''We entered into this voluntary agreement to recognize the unique circumstances we are operating under.''

Sullivan said the agreement had the approval at the highest level of the Justice Department, and that it ''basically sets out that the U.S. government will make its best effort to persuade governments to unfreeze accounts that are frozen in Europe.''

The government estimated from $4.5 million to $6 million in assets may be unfrozen and placed in an escrow account that would be administered by Hoeveler. The assets are part of an estimated $20 million in Noriega assets frozen last year at the request of U.S. officials.

Lead defense attorney Frank Rubino said he and his colleagues were ''satisfied with the agreement.''

''We feel now that we will have the ability to give Manuel Noriega the defense he deserves.''

Hoeveler last week ordered prosecutors to either prove Noriega's assets were obtained through drug trafficking or relinquish their demand that the funds remain impounded.

Defense attorney Jon May said the government had not demonstrated the seized assets were the profits of illegal drug activities.

''I think we are in the driver's seat,'' May said. ''That doesn't mean we'll get the money, but as they say, we have the momentum and we're charging to the goal.''

Defense attorneys have maintained that Noriega received $11 million from U.S. intelligence agencies and the Drug Enforcement Administration over the years and $7 million from foreign sources that could be used to pay for his defense.

Prosecutors have said those figures are inflated.

Noriega was ousted from power and arrested on federal drug trafficking charges during the December invasion of Panama by U.S. troops. If convicted, he would face a maximum penalty of 145 years in prison and $1.1 million in fines.

Noriega was indicted on drug-trafficking charges along with 15 others in a February 1988 indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Miami. He was indicted the same day on drug charges by a federal grand jury in Tampa.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Chase Manhattan Corp. Chairman Willard C. Butcher announced Wednesday that he will retire at the end of October, to be succeeded by the president of the bank holding company, Thomas G.

Labrecque.

Labrecque, long considered Butcher's obvious successor at the second-largest U.S. bank, is to take over as chairman and chief executive officer Oct. 31.

Arthur F. Ryan, present head of Chase's consumer banking business, will succeed Lebrecque as president. Ryan also will become chief operating officer of the holding company and its main subsidiary, Chase Manhattan Bank.

Labrecque's designation came as no surprise to the banking community, said an analyst with one New York investment firm who asked not to be identified. ''It was clear all along that he would be heir apparent,'' the analyst said.

Butcher said Labrecque's appointment was ''a natural step in implementing an orderly management succession which has been underway since early 1988.''

He said his retirement was moved up because ''a series of business challenges requiring organizational changes ... could not be implemented until the issue of management succession was resolved.''

Butcher, 63, began his career with the institution in 1947 when it was called the Chase National Bank and became its chairman in 1981, shepherding it through a particularly trying decade for the banking industry.

Butcher said that on his retirement from the chairman's post he will become chairman of the board's executive committee.

Labrecque, 51, joined Chase in 1964 and held posts including treasurer of the corporation in the mid-1970s. He was made vice chairman of the board and chief operating officer in June 1980, and president in 1981.

Before being named president he was responsible for the commercial banking retail banking and trust departments, Chase said.

The analyst said Labrecque is ''much less the sort of very, very outgoing type of man that Willard Butcher is.'' She described the new Chase CEO as ''much more cool, calm collected - they're very different styles.''

The analyst said Labrecque attained some prominence for his role in working out New York City's financial crisis in the 1970s.

Ryan, 47, joined Chase in 1972 in its data processing department and was named head of operations in 1978. In November 1984 he became vice chairman for individual banking, responsible for consumer business worldwide.

In 1989, Chase said, businesses reporting to Ryan included credit cards, deposit accounts, auto and home financing and full-service banks in Arizona, Maryland and Ohio, and accounted for 40 percent of profits.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 20) UPI - The Senate Agriculture Committee rejected higher farm subsidy rates and expensive new grain loan programs Wednesday before a tentative agreement on the farm bill collapsed in acrimony.

Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., adjourned the meeting with Sen. David Boren D-Okla., asking for a vote that could wipe out all the progress the committee had made on crop support programs.

Prairie Democrats accused Republicans of nitpicking a compromise to death while Republicans said Democrats were trying to change the terms of the deal. The committee has been stalemated for a month by party-line disagreements over the direction of the new five-year farm policy law.

''I think there were some honest misunderstandings,'' Leahy said after deciding to give senators time to cool off before meeting Thursday.

Leahy described the session as a series of ''preliminary skirmishes'' over the direction of the farm bill. ''Now we have a far better idea of how members feel,'' he said.

Midwestern Democrats have pressed for higher crop target prices and loan rates as a way to protect farmer income. Republicans say the increases would be self-defeating because they would price U.S. grain out of the world market.

The sticking point Wednesday was an attempt to solve the issue of loan rates by giving the Agriculture Department its choice of two options: a marketing loan for wheat and feed grains or continuing the current system for crop loans. However, it would have been required to increase the size of advance subsidy payments whenever it took advantage of its authority to unilaterally lower the loan rate.

Democrats and Republicans disagreed over the size of the increase. Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., insisted it had to be a penny for penny increase. The GOP said it agreed to language that would mean a maximum of a 20 percent increase.

''I find arguments being thrown back in my face as a consequence of an effort at accommodation,'' Kerrey said hotly.

''We voted for what we agreed to,'' answered Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn. ''We should not now be accused.''

The disputed agreement was discussed during a series of private meetings before the committee met in the afternoon. At mid-day, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said the ''outlines of an agreement are coming into view.''

Before the committee splintered, it defeated a proposal to partially link grain, cotton, rice and dairy support prices to the inflation rate, to abolish the department's authority to unilaterally reduce loan rates by up to 20 percent, to institute marketing loans for wheat and feed grains, and to adjust the size of the advance subsidy payments. Cost of the marketing loans was estimated as high as $1 billion over five years.

In each case, a bloc of Midwestern Democrats voted for the proposals while Republicans unanimously voted against them, usually aided by the votes of Leahy, Boren and Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said the votes showed Republicans were unwilling to compromise. Lugar, the GOP leader on the panel, said no true compromise had been offered on loan rates. The proposal on advance subsidy payments, he said, was so distasteful it amounted to an attempt to outlaw any adjustment in loan rates.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 20) UPI - A bitterly divided federal appeals court ruled Wednesday that immigration officials may jail indefinitely children facing deportation, even though alien adults are routinely freed on bail.

Children accused of illegal entry into the U.S. have no constitutional right to be released on bail to a relative or guardian other than a parent the three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service may detain children under age 18 if the INS has a reasonable basis to hold them pending deportation hearings, the appeals ruled in a split 2-1 decision in a class-action suit filed by the National Center for Immigrants' Rights in 1985 against the INS practice.

The court also ruled that U.S. District Court Judge Robert J. Kelleher in Los Angeles was too lenient in his interpretation of an undocumented child's right to a speedy hearing before an impartial judge.

Appeal Judge J. Clifford Wallace said the constitution's due process protection is not violated if the INS refuses to release a child to an unrelated adult pending the child's deportation hearing.

Judge Betty Fletcher vigorously dissented in the case, which she called among the most disturbing that she has confronted since joining the appeals court 11 years ago. ''The majority goes to great lengths to deny liberty to children whose only possible offense is their alienage,'' she wrote.

Immigrants' and children's rights groups have denounced the 5-year-old INS policy of detaining children, calling it a ploy to use children as ''bait'' to capture their parents who are suspected illegal aliens.

''The decision will allow children to languish in prison conditions for months or longer,'' said James Morales, a lawyer for the National Center for Youth Law. He said the decision falls hardest on children with no parents available to step forward.

In arguments before the appeals court, the INS maintained that its policy was implemented to protect the children and ensure their appearance for deportation hearings. But lawyers who filed the 1985 class action suit accused the INS of arrested parents on suspicion of illegal entry into the U.S. as soon as they showed up to claim their children.

The lawsuit also challenged the conditions under which children were held.

Carlos Holguin, a lawyer for the National Center for Immigrants' Rights, said, ''The freedom of the children now is dependent on the willingness of their parents to come forward and face deportation.''

Holguin said he will ask all 27 judges on the appeals court to reconsider Wednesday's ruling, and failing that he will appeal the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

''These are not murderers or robbers, yet they are treated the same as if they were,'' Holbuin said.

Kelleher, the U.S. district judge whose ruling was overturned, had ordered the INS in 1987 to end its practice of permitting the release of alien children only to their parents. He said these children must be released to a wider circle of appropriate adults, including uncles, aunts, grandparents and guardians.

About 200 children nationwide are in INS detention at any given time, with an estimated 8,000 held each year.

In her dissent, Fletcher noted that before the suit was filed in 1985, children were kept in jails mixed with adults of both sexes, subjected to strip searches, denied visitation rights, recreation and schooling while held.

In March 1988 Kelleher ordered the strip searches halted unless the INS had particular suspicion of criminal activity.

The INS ended the practice of housing children with adult prisoners. It now detains the children in juvenile hall facilities in El Centro, Los Angeles and Yuma, Ariz., Holguin said.

The opinion states that four INS interests are served by the detentions: ensuring the child's furture appearance in the deportation case, fostering the safety of the child, insulating the INS from liability and administrative economy.

(JUNE 20) UPI - Defense Secretary Cheney is urging Congress to approve severance pay for soldiers thrown out of work because of military cutbacks.

In a letter to Democratic House Speaker Thomas Foley, the Pentagon chief says providing severance pay is ''the right thing to do.''

Cheney backed his plea up with a military guide called ''The Enlisted Military Personnel Separation Equity Act'' that offers to provide assistance for those asked to leave the service.

Earlier on Capitol Hill, four senior enlisted men told a Senate Armed Forces Services personnel committee that some sort of payment is the top priority for members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines who may lose their jobs.

There are more than two-Million men and women in uniform.

Cheney says he estimates that two percent annual cuts in defense spending during the next five years will force some 450-thousand G-Is into early retirement.

Congressional investigators lashed the Environmental Protection Agency today for allegedly NOT doing its job.

Congress ordered the E-P-A to check out some 66-thousand chemicals for potential danger 14 years ago, but investigators say since then, the agency has reviewed less than one percent of the substances.

Of the 386 chemicals studied, the E-P-A reportedly compiled complete toxicity data on only six chemicals.

Richard Hembra, leader of the General Accounting Office research team, says even more disturbing is the fact the E-P-A has NOT finished assessing any of those six chemicals to determine whether they should be regulated.

He says the E-P-A has failed to exercise its authority, leaving tens of thousands of industrial workers and other Americans exposed to chemicals long suspected of causing cancer, nerve damage or birth defects.

Assistant E-P-A administrator Linda Fisher acknowledged delays, but says the agency is trying to step up progress by focusing on the most heavily used chemicals of greatest concern.

SHERMAN OAKS, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Hemacare Corp. (NASDAQ:HEMA), a Sherman Oaks-based blood products company, announced Thursday that it has been approved by the State of California, Department of Health Services, Food and Drug Branch, to begin clinical trials on Passive Hyperimmune Therapy (PHT) in 225 AIDS and ARC patients.

Developed by Dr. Abraham Karpas, a noted virologist and assistant director of research at the University of Cambridge, PHT treatment has been clinically tested in England with encouraging results.

In the treatment, AIDS and ARC patients receive monthly infusions of plasma containing high levels of antibodies against the AIDS virus harvested from the blood plasma of donors who have been infected with the AIDS virus but show no symptoms.

A patent to use the therapy was awarded in 1989 to a Montreal-based biotechnology company, MediCorp Inc., which has given HemaCare an exclusive license to test and commercialize PHT in California.

Joshua Levy, MD., Hemacare's medical director, will be the principal investigator for the trials. 19 co-investigators at 6 different hospitals in Los Angeles and San Francisco will participate in the clinical trials.

''The initial results of the double-blind, placebo controlled study will be analyzed in six months,'' said Dr. Levy. ''If the patient responses are favorable, HemaCare would then seek approval for a treatment IND which would permit treatment in an open (i.e., no placebo) study of large numbers of AIDS and ARC patients.''

HemaCare provides mobile therapeutic hemapheresis services to hospitals as well as autologous blood services and hemapheresis-derived blood components designed to reduce patient risk of contracting hepatitis, AIDS and other diseases potentially transmitted by blood transfusions.

Its subsidiary, MD Laboratories Inc., operates three specialized plasma centers which provide rare antibodies to vaccine, diagnostic reagents and other biological manufacturers. The company recently expanded its clinical laboratory division to provide reference laboratory services to hospitals, clinics and physicians.

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - TeamOne Systems Inc. has announced its latest product offering TeamNet 2.0, the most flexible Concurrent Product Development Environment on the market today.

TeamNet 2.0, which was engineered by a group led by TeamOne's chief executive officer, David Hoffman, co-founder of CAE Systems, was designed with openness and scalability in mind. "Over the years, we have seen projects get into trouble because the tools initially chosen for data management and concurrent engineering became overloaded as the project matured, resulting in unforeseen problems," said Hoffman.

"TeamNet 2.0 was designed so that our customers could introduce data management and other features required in a Concurrent Product Development Environment with no change to their existing tools."

TeamNet's transparency is achieved via TOFS, TeamOne's Transparent File System. TOFS is an extension of the Unix file system, which enables TeamNet to monitor all Unix file activity without the need for encapsulation software.

"We feel that encapsulation is an unnecessary limiting factor for design environments," said Hoffman. "It is fundamental to the design of TeamNet that it be able to interface with all tools on any workstation which runs NFS."

TeamNet 2.0 is implemented via a client-server model with the server software running on a Sun Microsystems host. TeamNet 2.0 is comprised of an Object Oriented Database Management System and five interacting systems integrated for maximum performance and ease of use: a Project Repository, a Configuration Management System (CM), an Engineering Change Order System (ECO), a Query System and a Network License Manager.

TeamNet 2.0 provides product development organizations a powerful, yet easy-to-use, solution to manage engineering changes in heterogeneous environments. Because the system is both intelligent and transparent, organizations can quickly benefit from the following features:

o Transparent Integration without Encapsulation
o Project Tracking in Real Time
o Automatic Workflow Audit Trail
o Network Data Management

o X Windows Motif Based User Interface
o Heterogeneous Data, Tools, Platforms... o Automated Administration

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - TeamOne Systems Inc. Thursday announced that it has joined the CAD Framework Initiative Inc. (CFI), the standards association of the CAD Framework Industry.

As a member of CFI, TeamOne has the opportunity to participate with CFI in the process of developing and implementing guidelines for the interoperability of design automation tools.

The CFI's goal is to develop guidelines for a common operating environment supporting computer-aided design tools. The guidelines will enable users to launch and manage data, graphically view the entire design process and perform design management tasks such as configuration management and version management.

"We welcome TeamOne as a CFI member," said Andy Graham, president of CFI, "The fusion of ideas from our members will give birth to an infrastructure which will benefit both users and vendors of CAD tools."

TeamOne Systems Inc. recently announced TeamNet 2.0, which was engineered by a group led by David Hoffman, co-founder of CAE systems. TeamNet 2.0 was designed with openness and scalability in mind.

"Over the years we have seen projects get into trouble beacuse the tools initially chosen for data management and concurrent engineering became overloaded as the project matured and unforeseen problems arose," said Hoffman.

"TeamNet 2.0 was designed so that our customers could introduce data management and other features required in a Concurrent Product Development Environment with no change to their existing tools."

The high degree of TeamNet's transparency is achieved via a combination of NFS and TOFS, TeamOne's File System. TOFS is an extension of the UNIX file system, which enables TeamNet to monitor all UNIX file activity without the need for encapsulation software.

"We feel that encapsulation is an unnecessary limiting factor for software environments," said Hoffman. "It is fundamental to the design of TeamNet that it be able to interface with all tools on any workstation which runs NFS."

SANTA CLARA, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - TeamOne Systems Inc. and Sun Microsystems Inc. have announced that SunNet License has been integrated into TeamNet's newly introduced Concurrent Product Development Environment TeamNet 2.0.

TeamNet 2.0 is the first product to integrate SunNet License.

SunNet License is a combination of two products, a developers toolkit and an OPENLOOK license administration tool, which are specifically designed to support concurrent usage licenses.

SunNet License enables software vendors to easily incorporate this sophisticated licensing mechanism/policy into their products.

Concurrent usage licensing is superior to existing licensing arrangements, under which companies must buy an individual license for every user who requires access to software.

Currently software licenses are frequently associated with a specific system, prohibiting the user from running the package from any other system. In addition, the cost of the license is fixed per user, with no price break for infrequent users.

A concurrent usage licensing model, by contrast, allows software licenses to ''float'' among many users. As a result, more employees of a company - including occasional users - are able to gain access to the software, without additional cost.

It took less than a day for TeamOne engineering to integrate SunNet License into TeamNet 2.0. ''The addition of SunNet License keeps TeamNet on the cutting edge of network technology,'' said Annie Brooking, vice president of marketing.

SunNet License integrated with TeamNet is being demonstrated at the Design Automation Conference in Orlando, Fla., June 24-28 in both the TeamOne booth and the Sun Microsystems booth.

TeamOne Systems Inc., headquartered in Santa Clara, is a leading supplier of Concurrent Product Development Tools and Services, which were developed to simplify and automate the management of data and the entire product life cycle.

Sun Microsystems Inc., headquartered in Mountain View, Calif., is the leading worldwide supplier of network-based distributed computing systems, including professional workstations, servers and UNIX operating system and productivity software.

TUSTIN, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Quality Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:QSII) Thursday reported revenues of $9,623,400 and a net loss of $849,600, or 20 cents per share, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990.

These results compare with revenues of $8,805,500 and a net loss of $313,500, or 7 cents per share, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1989.

The year ended March 31, 1990, was a year of transition for the company. The continued introduction of the company's family of IBM UNIX-based medical and dental systems entailed an expansion of marketing and sales operations as well as increased research and development efforts.

As a result of the company's new product offerings, revenues from sales of computer systems, upgrades and supplies increased by $738,000, or about 17 percent, from $4,427,200 in the prior year to $5,165,200 in the current year. Revenues from maintenance and other services remained substantially unchanged, increasing by 2 percent from fiscal 1989 levels.

Accompanying this period of transition, costs and expenses increased overall in 1990, more than offsetting the increase in revenues. Large system sales, for which the IBM UNIX-based systems are well-suited, typically have a long sales cycle.

This resulted in a higher proportion of lower margin, smaller systems sales for the year ended March 31, 1990, with a corresponding increase in cost of products and services from 65 percent of revenues to 71 percent of revenues.

Selling, general and administrative expenses, as a percentage of revenues, increased from 32 percent to 36 percent, primarily due to a significant expansion of the company's marketing and promotional activities associated with the company's IBM UNIX-based systems introduction.

Research and development expenditures also increased from $809,600 to $895,200 as the company successfully enhanced the functionality and expanded the flexibility of its systems. A broad range of advanced functions were developed, including sophisticated ''window'' applications.

The company remains financially strong, with $4,108,000 of cash and cash equivalents, no long-term debt and no other borrowings at March 31, 1990.

Quality Systems is engaged in the sale of computerized information-processing systems to medical and dental-group practices.

SAUSALITO, CALIF (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Autodesk Thursday announced it has obtained a judgment in the United States District Court for the District of New Mexico against the owner of a producer and marketer of illegal software operated under the name ''Computer Corner.''

Computer Corner, owned by Joe Petranovich of Albuquerque, was engaged in the mail order sale of illegal copies of Autodesk's flagship product, AutoCAD. Illegal copies of AutoCAD were included in a catalog offering many popular programs for ''rental.'' When customers rented a program, an illegal copy was received and no effort was made by Petranovich to reclaim it.

Under the terms of the judgment, Petranovich is permanently enjoined from renting, selling or duplicating any of Autodesk's proprietary software products and will be required to pay $10,000 in damages to Autodesk.

Petranovich also faces criminal charges resulting from a concurrent investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Albuquerque. The United States Attorney in Albuquerque is considering the filing of two counts of federal copyright infringement. If convicted on both counts, Petranovich could face up to two years in prison and a substantial fine.

The judgment and prospective criminal prosecution are the result of a year-long investigation by the Autodesk special projects department, its counsel, the law firm of Donahue, Gallagher, Thomas & Woods, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

According to Eric Doney of Donahue, Gallagher, Thomas & Woods, ''Computer Corner offered more than 200 software applications for sale thinly disguised as ''rentals'' and appears to have been a large illegal duplicator in New Mexico.''

Autodesk operates one of the largest and most successful anti-piracy programs in the world. Over 650 reports of product piracy have been investigated to date resulting in recoveries exceeding $1.7 million. Lawsuits have been filed against illegal duplicators in Texas Colorado, California and New Mexico.

''Autodesk vigorously protects its intellectual property rights and will not hesitate to prosecute violators,'' said Sandra Boulton, director of the Autodesk Special Projects Department.

''The once commonplace practice of copying software cannot be tolerated by software producers if we are to continue to develop and support quality products.''

COVINA, CALIF (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Thomas A. Bishop, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of California State Bank (NASDAQ:CSTB), and Richard J. Jett, president and chief executive officer of Empire Bancorp and its subsidiary, Empire Bank, a national banking association, announced Thursday that their respective boards of directors have unanimously approved a definitive merger agreement that sets forth the terms by which California State Bank will acquire Empire Bancorp and Empire Bank through a merger of the respective institutions.

The surviving entity will be known as California State Bank.

Upon the merger of the two institutions, each outstanding share of Empire common stock will convert into a fraction of a share of California State Bank common stock obtained by dividing the product of 1.55 times Empire's adjusted book value per share at March 31, 1990, by California State Bank's book value per share as of the same date.

The adjusted book value of Empire will be equal to the total consolidated stockholders' equity as of March 31, 1990, plus cash paid upon the exercise of stock options from that date to the closing of the transaction divided by the number of shares of Empire common stock outstanding at the time of consummation.

At March 31, 1990, the conversion ratio would have been .959, based upon Empire's book value per share of $8.35 and California State Bank's book value per share of $13.49. It is anticipated that some outstanding Empire stock options will be exercised prior to the consummation of the transaction and that the conversion ratio will be reduced. However, it is impossible to predict exactly what the conversion ratio will be.

''We are pleased that the boards of directors unanimously support this merger, and pending regulatory and shareholder approval, we anticipate completing the acquisition in the fourth quarter of this year,'' stated Thomas A. Bishop.

California State Bank, with headquarters in Covina, had assets of $263 million at March 31, 1990, and has additional branches in Alhambra, Arcadia, Beaumont, City of Industry and West Covina. Empire Bancorp, with assets of $89.4 million at March 31, 1990, is based in Ontario and has offices in Covina and Rancho Cucamonga.

SUNNYVALE, CA (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (LMSC) will reopen Buildings 195A and 195B on Friday, June 22, one week after they were temporarily closed when Legionella bacteria were found in the humidifier system.

LMSC disinfected the system late last week and again this week.

There are 250 engineers, scientists and technicians employed in the two buildings, and all were effectively reassigned to tasks in other buildings this week.

The company had encouraged any of them with concerns or with suspected Legionella-like flu symptoms to contact LMSC's medical or occupational safety and health departments.

About 20 did so, but no evidence of Legionella-related illness was detected. And the only possible case reported by an outside physician wasn't Legionella-related.

At Lockheed's request, Santa Clara County Public Health Department has monitored all actions and has concurred in them.

Buildings 195A and B house metrology and material processing laboratories which require constant levels of humidity to insure great accuracy for equipment calibration and testing.

Suty praised his operations personnel for quick action and dedication in getting rid of the bacteria, particularly in temperatures above 100 degrees Fahrenheit as they worked on the rooftop system this week.

''They really did a special job in purging the system of Legionella,'' he added.

Legionella bacteria were identified in 1976 as causing sickness and some deaths among American Legion conventioneers in Philadelphia, hence the names Legionella and Legionnaires' disease.

However, Dr. Martin Fenstersheib, deputy health officer for Santa Clara County, was quoted by the media this week as saying that the Legionella organism is found everywhere all the time -- in the air, in standing pools of water, in backyard dirt.

OAKLAND, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - The Clorox Co. (NYSE/PSE:CLX) Wednesday announced that it will purchase American Cyanamid Co.'s household products business for $465 million.

With the purchase, Clorox will acquire prominent national brands including Pine-Sol cleaner, one of the country's strongest consumer franchises and the leader in the $900 million all-purpose cleaner category. The Pine-Sol line also includes Pine-Sol Spray Cleaner and Pine-Sol Spruce Up premoistened household wipes.

Clorox also will acquire the line of Combat brand insecticide products, the number two brand in the $450 million insecticide market.

Clorox's existing household products business includes leading brands such as Formula 409 all-purpose spray cleaner, Liquid-plumr drain opener, Soft Scrub mild abrasive liquid cleanser and Tilex mildew stain remover.

Pine-Sol will be marketed with the company's household cleaning brands and is expected to benefit significantly from cost savings programs in virtually all aspects of its manufacture, distribution and marketing.

Weaver also said that the Pine-Sol acquisition will broaden Clorox's international operations, in particular doubling its business in Canada.

A five-year agreement gives Clorox exclusive rights to manufacture, use and market new consumer household insecticide products utilizing insecticide compounds developed or acquired by American Cyanamid.

Combat's major products, ant and roach bait stations, are leaders in this growing segment of insecticide products. They incorporate a proprietary ingredient and offer consumers an alternative to aerosols that is highly effective and is safer, more convenient and environmentally friendlier.

The acquired brands will boost Clorox Company revenues by about $235 million annually.

The acquisition is expected to result in earnings dilution of 30 to 40 cents per share in the first year, 10 cents per share in the second year, and to increase profits thereafter. The acquisition is expected to generate positive cash flow after financing costs in the second year.

A combination of up to $400 million in short-term debt, with the balance of the purchase price in cash, will initially fund the acquisition.

CULVER CITY, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - With capacity crowds currently being reported in Japan, Korea and France, Showscan Film Corp. (NASDAQ:SHOW) said Thursday that its first U.S.-based Dynamic Motion Simulators (DMS) were an immediate success at the June 19 opening day of Circus Circus' Excalibur Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas.

According to the announcement made by Showscan President and Chief Executive Officer Roy Aaron, the DMSs, called the ''Magic Motion Machines '' played an average of 15 shows-per-hour during the opening day and attracted approximately 11,000 thrill-riders.

Aaron commented: ''We couldn't have asked for a better American debut. Excalibur is an outstanding resort and the Magic Motion Machines are attracting capacity crowds of young and old alike. We are extremely pleased to be part of the most important resort opening in recent U.S. history.''

The DMS is a product of three technologies: the ultra-real Showscan film process, sophisticated computers and seats that accentuate the sense of motion appropriate to a series of individual experiences.

These include Olympic bobsleds, white-water river rafts, a downhill ski run at St. Moritz, runaway trains, a no-brakes car race down the Alps, a high-speed police chase in Germany and other adrenalin-intensive experiences.

Excalibur General Manager Bill Paulos said: ''The Magic Motion machines are a premier attraction for our Fantasy Faire and are extremely popular. Word-of-mouth has already done its magic, and thrill-riders are patiently waiting for their second, third and fourth Magic Motion experiences. It is an unqualified success.''

The Excalibur Hotel and Casino, on The Strip in Las Vegas, is the world's largest hotel, with 4,032 guest rooms, 100,000 square feet of gaming and 500,000 square feet of public areas. The resort opened on June 19, 1990.

RENO, NV (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Syntech International Inc. (NASDAQ:SYNE) (Preferred, NASDAQ:SYNEP) (''Syntech'') Wednesday announced that the board of directors of the company decided to omit the regular quarterly cash dividend of 68.75 cents a share on its convertible preferred stock for the third quarter of its fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1990. Such quarter is the sixth consecutive quarter for which the board has not declared the preferred dividend. The aggregate amount of accrued but unpaid dividends on the convertible preferred stock through the end of the current quarter is $1,647,096.

Under Syntech's certificate of incorporation, the failure of Syntech to declare and pay dividends on its convertible preferred stock for a period of six quarters entitles the holders of the convertible preferred stock, voting separately as a class, to select two members of Syntech's board of directors. Syntech's present board of directors consists of Edward B. Cloues II, Thomas A. McChristy, Robert List and Charles Stobart.

In commenting on the company's failure to declare and pay the convertible preferred stock dividend for the sixth consecutive quarter, Thomas A. McChristy, the company's chief executive officer, stated that Syntech's ability to continue as a going concern and remain in existence is dependent upon a restructuring of its two existing lottery contracts. The company has been seeking to negotiate certain changes to these contracts, but no new arrangements have yet been reached and there can be no assurance that any such arrangements will be reached in the future. If such new arrangements cannot be worked out promptly, McChristy said that the company will have no alternative but to consider seeking relief under the Federal Bankruptcy Code.

LAS VEGAS (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Electronic Data Technologies (NASD:EDAT), (''EDT'' or the ''Company''), said Thursday that the decline in its stock price on Wednesday, June 20 apparently occurred because analysts who follow the company have lowered their estimates on current year operating results.

The reductions were apparently made because of delays experienced in obtaining regulatory approval for Company products in the area of Route Management and Pick Games. The Company's ability to grow the number of machines on its route has been hampered by the backlog of applications in for GCB approval. The acquisition process, typically 90 days from contract signing to installation has in some cases grown to over six months.

The Company has also experienced a delay in the approval for a new route product which would link the route locations to one progressive jackpot. Due to this delay the Company has incurred startup costs for the computerized link without the anticipated immediate increase in route revenues.

The Company has also experienced delays in the development of a distributor network for Pick Games in the charity marketplace where individual state regulation has impacted our ability to penetrate the market.

The Company remains optimistic that approvals in the Nevada and charity markets will be forthcoming and thereby allow the company to market its new products. The company's Gaming Management Systems continue their market acceptance with the installation of the largest Keno System in Nevada at the Excalibur in Las Vegas.

EDT is a world leader in the design and manufacture of computerized management systems for the gaming industry. The company also manages, through its wholly owned subsidiary, more than 1,700 gaming machines placed in various non-casino locations in Nevada.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Technologies for Information & Publishing L.P., (TIP) has completed its final closing on a $28 million specialized venture capital fund.

During the past year, TIP, managed by Applied Technology, has invested in four companies developing significant technologies for the 1990s: Bridge Systems; Information Storage Devices; Magnascreen; and Open Books.

TIP focuses on participating in the early stages of significant enabling technologies in information industries including: multi-media; telecommunications; electronic imaging; electronic printing; electronic data interchange; information management, access and distribution; and executive information systems.

The fund is unique in its strategy of industry teamwork combining proven venture management with industry-based management consultants, academic researchers and major corporations for increased access to important technologies and management teams at very early stages.

Bridge Systems, Concord, Mass., is developing a high performance, universal operating environment for next generation personal workstations. Bridge's operating environment is object-oriented, meaning that it is organized around independently executing software components that communicate with messages. Software products will be immediately binary compatible across hardware platforms. The ultimate possibility is a new software market consisting of various sized, flexible and asynchronous software components.

Information Storage Devices, Santa Clara, Calif., is producing an integrated circuit chip (IC) capable of capturing, storing and replaying speech. The initial chip stores 16 seconds of speech. The next generation will hold up to 2 minutes of speech on a single chip. The chip is self contained; it interfaces directly to a microphone for input and speakers for output.

Easily added to ordinary telephones, it provides answering machine functions.

Magnascreen, Pittsburgh, Pa., is developing technology for the production of large (35'') high resolution flat panel color displays. This technology is currently used for pocket television receivers: Magnascreen has developed proprietary methods for extending it.

Magnascreen has recently been awarded a contract by Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency's (DARPA) High Definition Display Technology program to construct large format flat, full color high resolution display screens for military applications.

Open books, Cambridge, Mass., is developing personal computer/workstation software for data analysis and integration. Running initially on OS/2 Presentation Manager operating systems, Open Books' information navigator is software that provides an intelligent layer between the raw data stored in a database manager system (DBMS) and its presentation to a user.

Open Books' products integrate data by operating as a universal front-end to all major data storage systems and enable efficient analysis through the use of a model of the business. The company's products may lead to an entirely new category of software.

Applied Technology, Managing General Partner of TIP, is managed by Frederick Bamber and Thomas Grant, seasoned venture capitalists. Woodrow Vandever Vandever, general partner, has 25 years of industry experience in software engineering, management, and market research. Nicholas Negroponte special general partner, founded and directs MIT's Media Laboratory, a world class research facility on future computer, communications and media technologies.

#90172b0672 06/21/1990 ~Business Wire
LAGUNA HILLS, CA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Long-term follow-up of a clinical trial conducted in Scandinavia appears to confirm the efficacy and safety of the immunomodulating drug Isoprinosine(R) in delaying the progression to AIDS in HIV-infected individuals.

The results of the initial, double-blind study period of the clinical trial were published Thursday in The New England Journal of Medicine. The supporting results of the long term follow-up were presented this week in an official satellite meeting of the International AIDS Conference in San Francisco by the Scandinavian investigators.

Court Pedersen M.D., was the principal investigator in the multicenter trials which took place in Denmark and Sweden and were sponsored by Newport's licensee, Leo Pharmaceutical Products of Denmark. Isoprinosine is a proprietary drug of Newport Pharmaceuticals International Inc., which manufactures, markets and licenses the drug worldwide (except in the United States).

A press conference presenting additional information about Isoprinosine as well as addressing the trial results is being held Thursday, June 21 at 10:00 a.m., PDT, at the Parc Fifty-Five Hotel (Parc Ballroom 2), 55 Cyril Magnin Street, San Francisco. Your coverage is invited.

Not only do the long-term results seem to confirm the results from the initial study period but they also appear to suggest that Isoprinosine is effective in delaying the progression to AIDS for up to a year.

J. Roberts Fosberg, president and chief executive officer of Newport Pharmaceuticals, said, ''We are very hopeful that this additional data as well as the publication of the initial results by such a prestigious medical journal will help Newport obtain the endorsement of the AIDS research community as well as the funding necessary for additional clinical studies on this promising drug.'' Initial Study Period (Double Blind Phase)

During 1987 and 1988, 866 patients--representing over 25 percent of the HIV population in Denmark and Sweden--took part in a multicenter, placebo-controlled trial of Isoprinosine. The patients, who had been exposed to the AIDS virus but for the most part did not exhibit any symptoms of AIDS, were given either placebo or one gram of Isoprinosine three times daily for six months.

Of the 19 patients who progressed to AIDS, 89 percent (17 patients) were receiving placebo whole only 11 percent (2 patients) were receiving Isoprinosine.

At the end of the double-blind phase--which is the subject of the article published Thursday in The New England Journal of Medicine--all persons who had not developed AIDS were given the opportunity to enroll in the open label study period and take three grams of Isoprinosine daily for another six months. Long-Term Follow-Up (Open Label Phase)

By the end of 12 months, 37 patients had progressed to AIDS; of these, 73 percent (27 patients) were in the original placebo group and 27 percent (10 patients) were on drug. This follow-up reaffirms the efficacy of Isoprinosine as reported in the initial study period and appears to support the drug's continued effectiveness in delaying the progression to AIDS for up to a year.

Isoprinosine was notably safe in both study periods, showing few or no side effects. U.S./U.K.Trials

A companion multicenter study of Isoprinosine in asymptomatic persons with CD4 counts between 200 and 400 mm(3) was conducted in the United States and the United Kingdom. The results of this double-blind, placebo-controlled trial conducted by qualified investigators was originally interpreted as showing no difference between drug and placebo.

An independent retrospective review of the study has suggested that contrary to the original interpretation, the actual results cannot be determined at this time. Additional data collection from the study centers will be necessary before a more accurate interpretation can occur.

Isoprinosine is licensed worldwide for several viral infections but is not yet approved for any indication in the United States. Based on the results of the Scandinavian study, Isoprinosine is available on a ''named patient basis'' for individuals with HIV in Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

Newport's licensee, Leo Pharmaceutical Products of Denmark, is sponsoring the approval of Isoprinosine for HIV infection in the European Common Market.

Newport is traded over-the-counter and is listed on the NASDAQ National Market System under the trading symbols ''NWPH'' (Common Stock) and ''NWPHG'' (10 percent Senior Secured Convertible Notes).

THE HAGUE, NETHERLANDS (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Aegon and Nationale-Nederlanden, the two leading Dutch insurers, Thursday announced plans to undertake a joint study into the possibility of cooperation in the area of health insurance in The Netherlands.

The two insurers stated that a review of the role and position of the health insurance industry has become necessary, in view of the increased importance of controlling costs and managing the claims burden, and recent developments regarding the structure of the Dutch health care system. In this context, an increase in scale might provide a good starting point.

Aegon and Nationale-Nederlanden believe that cooperation in the health insurance area would be in the interest of the insured, employees, and intermediaries.

In looking into the feasibility of the cooperation, the two parties will also investigate whether other health insurers would like to participate. Attention will be given to the financial, commercial, social, organizational, and legal aspects involved. Aegon and Nationale-Nederlanden intend to conclude their study by the end of this summer.

Aegon is Holland's second largest insurer and one of the top thirty worldwide. Its extensive U.S. interests are represented by Aegon USA, whose twelve operating divisions now conduct the nationwide activities formerly vested in Life Investors Inc. (Cedar Rapids, IA), Monumental Corp. (Baltimore, MD), and National Old Line (Little Rock, AR).

Besides its NASDAQ listing in the US, where it trades under the symbol AEGNY, Aegon shares trade on the Amsterdam, Tokyo, London, and Zurich Basel and Geneva stock exchanges. DALLAS (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Commercial Metals Co. (NYSE: CMC) Thursday reported net earnings of $6.3 million, or 55 cents per share on sales of $283 million for the third quarter ended May 31, 1990.

This compares with earnings of $6.2 million or 53 cents per share, on sales of $335 million for the same period last year.

Net earnings for the third quarter were $1.3 million (11 cents per share) higher because of the LIFO effect on inventory valuation. Profits were reduced by start-up costs associated with several steel fabrication and secondary metals processing plants.

Net earnings for the nine months ended May 31, 1990 were $18.8 million or $1.63 per share on sales of $834 million. For the same period last year earnings were $21.4 million or $1.85 per share on sales of $977 million. Cash flow provided from operations for the nine month period was $35 million compared to $37 million last year.

CMC President and Chief Executive Officer Stanley A. Rabin said, ''It was a record third quarter in steel manufacturing and fabrication despite a flat construction market and sluggish sales activity for manufacturers and distributors in the U.S.A. Strong production and excellent shipments at our mills compensated for lower average selling prices. Copper tube manufacturing results were down because of weak residential construction markets and a resultant margin squeeze.''

According to Rabin, ''Earnings from recycling were lower than the same quarter last year, but above the second quarter of this year. Sales and gross margins were down significantly from last year. Ferrous scrap shipments were up but prices were lower than last year. Nonferrous shipments and prices, especially aluminum, were down from a year ago although above this year's second quarter levels.''

Net income for the Marketing & Trading segment was higher than last year's third quarter. Rabin said, ''Improved results in primary aluminum marketing accounted for most of the difference while global demand for steel, nonferrous semis, minerals, refractories and chemicals was steady.

Commercial Metals Co. and subsidiaries manufacture, recycle and market metal products, related materials and services through a network of over forty locations including steel minimills, steel fabrication plants, a copper tube mill, recycling facilities and trading offices in the United States plus over 10 trading and representative offices in strategic overseas markets.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Leisure Concepts Inc., (NASDAQ/NMS:LCIC) Thursday announced that an agreement in principle had been reached between Leisure Concepts (''LCI'') and International Consumer Technologies Corp. and its affiliated entities (''ICT Group'') whereby the ICT Group would be merged into a newly formed subsidiary of LCI.

Stanley A. Weston, chairman of the board of LCI, said the proposal calls for the issuance of approximately 3,975,677 shares of LCI common stock in exchange for all of the shares and outstanding notes of the ICT Group.

There are currently approximately 3,123,746 shares of LCI common stock outstanding. The exchange ratio was based upon a valuation of the ICT Group established by Sutro and Company, an independent firm retained by LCI and using a value of $5.50 per share for LCI.

Weston noted that the ICT Group was currently the holder of 232,490 shares or 7.4 percent of the outstanding shares of LCI, having acquired such stock in April 1990. Weston said that subsequent discussions with the ICT Group had led to the agreement in principle described above.

LCI is a major licensor of properties whose common stock is traded on NASDAQ/NMS. The ICT Group is engaged in the marketing and merchandising of personal computer software programs and related interactive media, and is privately held. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, LCI had gross revenues of $5,888,379 and net income of $983,131 and for the same period the ICT Group had on a combined basis gross sales of $5,849,394 and net income of $1,468,881.

Weston noted that the terms of the proposed merger were still under discussion, that no definitive merger agreement had been executed, and that the transaction will be subject to the approval of the stockholders of LCI and the ICT Group.

He indicated that the parties were meeting to resolve all of the terms of the proposed transaction and that a registration statement was expected to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission with respect to the transaction.

Weston noted that he believed the proposed merger would broaden the economic and management base of LCI and diversify its products and services and would combine two energetic groups of people in similar areas.

MIAMI (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - FDP Corp. Thursday announced the financial results for its second quarter, which ended May 31.

Total revenue for the quarter increased $9,982 to $3,726,637, compared with $3,716,655 for the comparable period in 1989. The company reported a net earnings of $65,582 (two cents per share) for the quarter vs. a net loss of $11,023 (zero cents per share) for the comparable period in fiscal 1989.

The increase in net earnings while total revenues remained virtually unchanged is attributable to an increase in software related sales with a higher margin and a decrease in the sale of equipment with a lower margin. Total revenue for the first six months ended May 31 increased $1,930,174 (29 percent) to $8,502,983, compared with $6,572,809 for the comparable period in 1989.

The company reported a net earnings of $146,557 (four cents per share) for the six months vs. a net loss of $307,401 (nine cents per share) for the comparable period in fiscal 1989.

Michael C. Goldberg, chairman, reported that results were positively affected in the second quarter by a strong increase in software related sales - up $681,954 (37 percent) to a total of $2,520,835 and for the first six months by two factors: 1) a strong increase in software related sales - up $1,594,262 (47 percent) to a total of $4,991,978; and 2) a large increase in the sale of equipment - up $639,649 to a total of $1,420,866.

Goldberg also noted, as he had for the first quarter, that work for the Prudential Insurance Co. of America under a long-term development contract in the Advanced Underwriting area, the expansion into the European market via a major life insurance client in the FDP/MAAS area, the addition of an annual renewable contract with Mass Mutual in the FDP/CLAS area and the continued success of our new PDQ document preparation system in the Pension area were significant items positively effecting second quarter and first six months results.

FDP's financial condition remains extraordinarily strong with cash and marketable securities of $13,590,226, a current ratio of 8.8 to 1, no debt and shareholder's equity of $16,823,329.

AKRON, OH (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - The Rubber Manufacturers Association's (RMA) board of directors Thursday ratified plans forming a new council specifically aimed at scrap tire disposal during a meeting here at Firestone Country Club.

RMA said the new group, known as the Scrap Tire Management Council, will conduct a broad-based program to generate markets for using scrap tires. It will be based in Washington.

''The council's mission will be to assist in developing and promoting the use of scrap tires as a valuable resource in an environmentally and economically sound manner,'' said RMA President Thomas E. Cole.

The council's goals include development of enough markets over the next fibe years to utilize more tha 50 percent of the scrap tires generated annually, reducing the number of scrap tires going to stockpiles and landfills across the United States.

Today's board action follows months of planning and an intensive two-day retreat held in May in which representatives from the tire industry developed the council's structure, objectives and scope of activities.

The council's business plan sets a five-year timetable for a wide range of activity involving market development, education, information, and encouragement of new technologies.

The council intends to develop markets for scrap tires by matching suppliers, distributors, intermediate processors and end-users in potentially high-use areas. Among those possible high volume markets cited were scrap tire use as a fuel supplement in cement kilns, utility and industrial boilers, as well as in asphalt paving.

Plans also call for the council to establish a global database containing information on new disposal technology, scrap tire supplies, and specifications for scrap tire products such as tire-derived fuel.

Other council activities include providing technical assistance to federal state, and local legislative bodies establishing scrap tire disposal regulatory or incentive programs.

''The scrap tire issue is one of the most important issues facing the tire industry today,'' Cole said. ''We envision the council serving as a focal point for innovative solutions to this complex problem.''

The council will be headed by an executive director, who will be selected later this year, and will operate as part of the association's tire division.

The RMA is the national trade association of the tire and rubber industry. Headquartered in Washington, the association has approximately 200 member and affiliate member companies which manufacture 40,000 rubber or rubber-related products.

The following were elected: Robert Betagole, president of Mike Albert Leasing Inc., Cincinnati; David T. Chase, president and chief executive officer of D.T. Chase Enterprises, Hartford, Conn.; Raymond H. Deck, president of Chase Insurance Enterprises Inc., Hartford, Conn.; Thomas H. Friedberg, chairman of the board and president of Ranger Insurance Co., Houston; Kermit G. Hicks, president of Hicks Chevrolet Inc., and chairman of the board of First National Bank, Greencastle, Penn.; Brian L. Howell, retiring chairman of the board, ACCEL International Corp., Dublin; Stephen M. Qua, chairman of the board of Qua Imports Inc., and president of Qua Buick Inc., Cleveland; R. Max Williamson, president and chief executive officer of ACCEL International Corp., Dublin; and Eli I. Zborowski, president of Latin American Export Inc., and vice chairman of UMB Bank and Trust, New York.

R. Max Williamson, president and chief executive officer, in his annual address to stockholders, said that the company was pleased to report record operating income in its twentieth year of business. He commented that there was only one other year in ACCEL's history when full year net income was higher than 1989's income of $5.3 million.

He pointed out that first quarter 1990 income of $1.7 million represented the highest first quarter net income in ACCEL's history. He also announced that ACCEL's life insurance subsidiary, Acceleration Life Insurance Co., had recently received an A- (Excellent) rating from A.M. Best Co., a nationally recognized independent analyst of the insurance industry.

A.M. Best's rating of insurance companies reflect relative financial strength and performance in comparison with other insurance companies. Williamson stated that this was an important milestone for the life company, which was previously rated B+ (Very Good), and now both Acceleration Life and Acceleration National Insurance companies are rated ''Excellent!''

At the ACCEL board of directors meeting following the annual stockholders meeting, the board approved the payment of a 5 cents cash dividend to be paid on Aug. 1, 1990, to shareholders of record on July 9, 1990. The board felt this action was warranted in light of the company's consistent growth in earnings over the last several years. This dividend represents the first cash dividend the company has paid since a special cash dividend was paid in 1983.

Furthermore, the board established a policy of intent that the company pay cash dividends of at least 20 cents per share annually, payable on a quarterly basis.

The board of directors also elected R. Max Williamson, president and chief executive officer, to the additional post of chairman of the board of directors, succeeding Brian L. Howell, who will retire as chairman and chief financial officer of the company on July 31, 1990.

NASHUA, NH (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Ferrofluidics Corp. (OTC:FERO) Thursday announced that the company will restructure its worldwide manufacturing operations and eliminate a number of items which have adversely affected the company's profitability.

The restructuring plan, which has been approved by the executive committee of Ferrofluidics' board of directors, is designed to significantly increase future earnings growth. The restructuring plan, tax items and other nonrecurring charges will result in a one-time charge in the current fiscal year which could be as much as $15 million dollars.

As part of the plan, Ferrofluidics will realize a loss from sale of AF Technologies Ltd., a United Kingdom based manufacturing subsidiary; write down certain assets related to the company's ferrofluid film bearing program and write off certain technology acquired from a limited research and development partnership that funded the start-up of the ferrofluid film bearing development program. The company also proposes to transfer the manufacturing of certain exclusion seals, ferrofluid film bearings and rotary feedthrough seals to the company's licensees. The restructuring plan will also result in the write-down of certain related inventories, fixed assets and patents.

Ferrofluidics Corp. expects to adopt, earlier than required, a new accounting pronouncement from the Financial Accounting Standards Board requiring a change in the method of accounting for income taxes (FASB 96). This treatment, which will become mandatory for all companies in 1991, will result in the elimination of a deferred tax asset and is included, along with other tax provisions, in the anticipated charge against earnings.

According to Dr. Ronald Moskowitz, chief executive officer, ''Our decision to restructure the company and incur the associated write-offs is in the long-term best interests of the company and its shareholders and will result in a more profitable company.''

Moskowitz also stated, ''I believe that we have identified and addressed the issues which will result in a leaner, high energy entrepreneurial company focused on profitable growth.''

Ferrofluidics Corp. is the pioneer and world leader in ferrofluid (magnetic fluid) technology. The company manufactures proprietary products for high growth market applications including rotary seals for semiconductor manufacturing and a variety of controlled environment processes; exclusion seals for computer memory disk drives; ferrofluid film bearing spindles for high performance rotational applications; fully automated crystal growing furnaces; and ferrofluids for audio loudspeakers.

SHREVEPORT, LA. (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Arkla Inc. (NYSE:ALG) announced

Thursday that it has received all required environmental permits and clearances from state and federal agencies and has awarded three contracts for construction of the final segment of its Line AC.

Construction began the week of June 4th on the combination 42 inch and 36 inch pipeline originating near Wilburton in Southeastern Oklahoma. The 162 miles of new construction will link up with an existing 63 miles of pipeline that has already been constructed, which terminates at Glendale, Ark.

The pipeline, the largest ever built in the State of Oklahoma, when completed will carry 1 billion cubic feet per day (1 Bcf/d) of natural gas from the Arkoma Basin to growing markets in the Northeast and Midwest.

Jimmy L. Terrill, president of the Arkla Pipeline Group, said today that the 225-mile long, $240 million project had cleared all permitting hurdles and predicted it would now move quickly to completion.

''Line AC will offer abundant supplies to growing U.S. markets, but more importantly it will give Oklahoma producers a tremendous new outlet for their gas. I am especially happy to announce that, as a result of recent agreements with various parties, Line AC will also enable us to offer a significant reduction in our system-wide rates for transportation,'' Terrill said.

BLUE BELL, PA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Unisys Corp. said Thursday that it has introduced CTOS/Open, a product development strategy that enhances the position of Unisys CTOS' networked business workstation systems in the open systems market.

CTOS/Open encompasses a range of products and strategic initiatives, including common user and programming interfaces, products for interoperability with industry-standard environments like MS-DOS and UNIX, and stepped-up efforts in third-party software development.

Based on Unisys CTOS operating systems, the multiuser, multitasking CTOS workstations account for 740,000 installations worldwide. They provide sophisticated built-in networking capabilities and require no additional LAN operating system.

CTOS systems target business automation applications, and are optimized for satellite office networks running mission critical applications in operations ranging from banks to airlines and government agencies. The CTOS line ranges in price from $1,995 for client workstations to $141,420 for multiprocessor servers.

The cornerstone of CTOS/Open is the first common published application programming interface (API) for all currently installed and future CTOS workstations sold by Unisys and 10 leading systems vendors, including Bull MDS/REI, and Telenorma. The single API allows developers to create a single version of software applications that will be portable across all vendors' CTOS platforms. The API is available immediately.

Unisys also announced POSIX.1 for CTOS, the first non-UNIX system service conforming to the POSIX standard. The program enables applications written in the C language that adhere to the IEEE POSIX 1003.1 standard to be ported unmodified to the CTOS environment. POSIX compliance also lets CTOS users port applications written for POSIX-compliant UNIX environments. POSIX.1 for CTOS, available in third quarter 1990, costs $750 for a cluster license.

To provide a consistent graphical user interface (GUI) across all CTOS workstations, Unisys has licensed Microsoft Presentation Manager GUI and XVT Software's Extensible Virtual Toolkit (XVT). Presentation Manager provides the GUI for graphical CTOS workstations. Through XVT, Unisys will provide a consistent Presentation Manager-like user interface for character-based CTOS workstations.

Unisys has also licensed Microsoft C Professional Development Systems Version 6.0 and Microsoft Pascal Version 4.0 to to provide complementary development environments for CTOS Presentation Manager applications.

Early copies of the CTOS-based Presentation Manager, Microsoft development environments, and XVT will ship in third and fourth quarters 1990, with customer shipments in mid-1991. Presentation Manager will vary in price with the CTOS cluster configuration. The Microsoft C and Pascal development environments range in price from $2,000 to $5,000 each.

Also, Unisys announced the extension of its CTOS Developer Relations Program to the international market. The program includes an annual Developer's Conference, Portation Center Facilities, a worldwide on-line database, expanded technical training services and development software starter kits.

NEW YORK/SIOUX FALLS, SD (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - ACTV Inc. (NASDAQ:IATV) and the Satellite Movie Co. have signed a letter to provide ACTV's unique interactive television technology to the lodging industry.

Both companies expect that ACTV's technology will provide the lodging industry with a major upgrade in their in-room entertainment, information and guest services increasing revenue and profitability.

The ACTV technology allows viewers to personalize the programs they watch by responding to questions or making choices posed by the television programs. The programs allow the on-screen actor to respond to a viewer's input instantly and seamlessly.

ACTV shows include blackjack, where the host dealer solicits hit or stand decisions from the viewer and deals cards accordingly; game shows, where viewers participate in the show for possible prizes; children's programs, where muppet type characters can respond to a child's input; exercise programs where viewers can tailor the instructor's routine to their own individual needs; and sporting events, where viewers can change camera angles at will.

''We are offering hotels and their guests the opportunity to watch and use the TV of tomorrow, today. We believe the ACTV system is a major enhancement to the present package of entertainment and guest services currently available to the lodging industry,'' said Tim C. Flynn, president of the Satellite Movie Co. (SMC).

Under the terms of the agreement, ACTV plans to integrate its technology with the Satellite Movie Co.'s LodgeNet System 2000. In addition, the technology will be phased into the Zenith television set itself, eliminating the need for a set top converter unit. SMC, which has among its clients the Atlantic City Taj Mahal resort hotel, will start installing the ACTV technology in SMC's existing hotels with the aim of expanding into other hotel rooms when the system is received favorably.

''We are excited about introducing the ACTV technology in the potentially lucrative hotel market. We are looking forward to working with SMC because of their advanced technology which is capable of delivering enhanced services to the hotel guest,'' stated William C. Samuels, president of ACTV Inc.

Under the terms of the agreement, ACTV and SMC will share revenue based on the incremental value ACTV brings to SMC's existing package of services.

The Satellite Movie Co. provides pay-per-view movies, guest services, free-to-the-guest programming and integrated televisions to the lodging industry.

WILMINGTON, MASS. (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - UniFirst Corp. (NYSE:UNF) Thursday reported revenue and net income continued at record levels for the 13 and 39 week periods which ended May 26, 1990.

Revenues for the third quarter of the company's 1990 fiscal year were $58.0 million, an increase of 7 percent above the $54.0 million from the previous year. Net income for the period was $4.0 million, 31 percent above the $3.1 million recorded in same period of 1989.

For the nine months of fiscal 1990, UniFirst had sales of $169.2 million, an increase of 6 percent above the $160.3 million in the previous period. Net income for the nine month period was $1.05 per share on a primary basis, 24 percent above the $0.85 per share a year earlier.

''Our earnings continue to be bolstered by a strong performance by our laundry operations,'' said Ronald D. Croatti, chief operating officer. He also reported that UniFirst finalized two acquisitions during the quarter. The first acquisition will provide incremental volume to our existing facility in El Paso, Texas and provide an entry to the Albuquerque, New Mexico market.

The second is a uniform rental company in Los Angeles which will represent our first entry into the California market. These acquisitions will add approximately $5 million per year to our revenues on an annual basis. The California acquisition, which was significantly larger, was completed at the end of our third fiscal quarter. Accordingly there is minimal impact on our third quarter numbers from these acquisitions.

Looking forward, we are optimistic regarding the balance of fiscal year 1990. Although our revenue growth has been less than we would like, we continue to actively review potential acquisitions. We are also pleased that our core laundry business is continuing to turn in strong operating results.

UniFirst a pioneer in the American garment service industry, serves more than a half a million people at 100,000 customer locations spread across 32 states and Canada. It operates two garment manufacturing facilities and employs more than 4,500 people.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Senior Executives from Rowland Worldwide, oen of the largest global PR firms, addressed a symposium on ''The Era of Public Relations'' Thursday at the Great Hall of the People in Beijing.

The symposium was organized by the Beijing Foreign Investment Centre and Interasia Communications Ltd. with the cooperation of the Government of the People's Republic of China.

More than 250 people including Chinese government officials, academics from the universities and representatives from state enterprises attended the day-long event.

John Cameron, Asia/Pacific Regional Chairman for Rowland Worldwide, spoke on an ''Asia Regional Perspective on PR for the '90s.'' Cameron told those gathered that rising national incomes in the region, combined with strong intra-regional trade, would result in Asia's gross domestic product surpassing that of Europe and even the United States by the year 2000.

Cameron urged that care be taken to ensure that PR programs are tailored to meet the cultural needs of the individual countries in the region.

Citing the acute shortage of experienced practitioners, he warned that multinational companies must be introduced correctly into the Asian marketplace.

Martin Spurrier, chief executive of Rowland's Hong Kong office, addressed the symposium on the importance of corporate and brand identity. Among other case studies, Spurrier detailed the work his office had done in introducing the well-known British retailer, Marks & Spencer, into the Hong Kong market and the launch of Christian Dior's Fahrenheit fragrance for men.

Rowland Worldwide, headquartered in New York, is an autonomous PR unit of Saatchi & Saatchi Plc, and the world's fifth largest PR firm.

Other speakers at the Beijing symposium included David Meredith of Backer Spielvogel Bates Worldwide, one of the world's largest advertising networks, on the relationship of PR and advertising; Tian Xiling, Deputy Director of the Beijing Foreign Investment Service Centre; and Zhang Ming, government minister from the Committee of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade.

CONCORD, MA (JUNE 21) BUSINESS WIRE - GenRad Inc. this week begins its year-long observance of the 75th anniversary of its incorporation as a company on June 14, 1915.

Having passed its three-quarter century mark, GenRad has operated continuously longer than any other American test and measurement company and is numbered among the oldest, most respected electronics companies in the worldwide high technology marketplace.

Established as the General Radio Co. in Cambridge by founder Melville Eastham, the company was for many years the world leader in the exacting field of precision laboratory instrumentation. In 1976 the company's present name was adopted, as product offerings had long since expanded beyond those of a manufacturer of measurement instruments for the radio industry.

Today, GenRad has evolved to become a leading supplier of automatic test equipment (ATE) and integrated software systems to manufacturers and users of electronic and mechanical products. Headquartered in Concord, GenRad is an international company with sales and service offices and representatives across the United States and in more than a score of countries in North and South America, Europe, Africa, Australia and througout the Far East.

Over the years GenRad developed a broad range of products, many of which were industry ''firsts'' in the electronics industry. Some of these premier products include: the first audio oscillator; the first commercial vacuum-tube voltmeter; the first standard signal generator; the first primary frequency standard; the first sound-level meter; the first automatic capacitance bridge; and the first commercial computer-based printed circuit board test system, and CAPS, the first computer aided program software used for functional test program generation.

In 1969, more than 50 years after its founding, GenRad pioneered the commercial printed circuit board test ATE industry with the introduction of the 1790 Logic Circuit Analyzer, a breakthrough for electronics manufacturers. That system was a response to rapidly changing technology when manually operated test instruments could no longer keep pace with newer, more complex integrated circuits that were being designed and assembled on circuit boards.

Since that time, GenRad has held the leading market share position for the printed circuit board test segment of the automatic test equipment industry, holding approximately 25 percent of the world market in 1989.

During the seventies and eighties, the company developed strategies that met the growing needs for computer aided test and electronic design automation tools. Its test systems and software product offering grew in the areas of incoming inspection, production and field service test and manufacturing process quality management.

GenRad's arrival in the strategically important EDA market came with the acquisition of Cirrus Computers Ltd., the developer of System HILO, the universal logic simulation tool kit -- the leading independent logic design simulation system for verifying complex circuit designs for devices and pc boards.

Commenting on the Diamond Anniversary observance, Robert E. Anderson, GenRad's president and chief executive officer, said, ''When Melville Eastham formed General Radio in 1915, he had a very clear vision of the new company's mission: to develop precision measuring instruments for the emerging electronics industry.

That was before the days when the term ''radio'' meant ''radio receiver'' as it does today; radio then meant wireless communications, or almost anything that we now describe as electronics. No one at that time could have envisioned the remarkable developments in electronics that were destined to take place in the next 75 years.

''GenRad has periodically transformed itself to adapt to changing market conditions,'' he said. ''It transitioned from its pioneering days of instrumentation, to its pc board test advances in the seventies, to its present strategy of offering electronics manufacturers an array of high performance design, test and quality management tools.''

Anderson stated that ''at a time when American competitiveness in the world marketplace is challenged, GenRad's test and measurement products add value as they are applied to improve quality yields, decrease manufacturing costs, enable the use of state of the art technologies and accelerate product time to market.''

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) COMTEX - The president of a major retail group said today there is a significant reduction in commercial real estate development throughout the U.S. and warned this could have grave implications for the domestic economy.

Irv Maizlish, president of the International Council of Shopping Centers, a trade association representing the shopping center industry worldwide, said this morning at a Capitol Hill press conference this drop in lending constitutes a credit crunch for shopping center development.

"Shopping center starts are down 25 percent in the first quarter of 1990," Maizlish said. "If we don't turn this around, this could lead to a major recession."

Maizlish conceded a limited portion of this reduction is justified in certain markets but said the decline cannot be explained by normal economic factors affecting the demand for shopping center construction.

"If real estate sales are up and interest rates are normal, why should we have a crisis?" he asked. "We can't understand why loans that were good for so many years are no longer good."

Maizlish is in Washington to testify later this afternoon before the Senate Banking Committee, which is examining the credit crunch issue. The panel is hearing testimony this morning from Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, Comptroller of the Currency Robert Clarke, Timothy Ryan, director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, and Paul Fritts of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

In written testimony to be submitted to the Senate panel, Maizlish states a credit crunch does exist and that it is getting worse.

"On existing loans to creditworthy borrowers, credit restrictions and restructurings are resulting in projects being stopped in mid-stream, construction workers being laid off, and entire enterprises being put in jeopardy," the statement says. "This does not result from failure to meet loan terms currently but because of apparent belief that at some time in the future, the borrower may not be able to meet its obligations."

By testifying today, Maizlish says his goal is to urge bankers to continue to make loans to proven, creditworthy borrowers on the same or similar terms and conditions as they have in the past.

"If the senators and government regulators look at our analysis of shopping center loans, they will find out shopping centers are not a problem," Maizlish said. "I want the senators to find out why we're being challenged and why we're being turned down."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) - U.S. legislators voted Thursday to halt military aid to Zaire to protest what they described as human rights abuses, corruption, and a failure by President Mobutu Sese Seko to carry out promised reforms.

The House of Representatives Appropriations Committee voted to cut off military aid to the government of the central African country -- a decision observers expected to be upheld next week by the full house.

The committee said it "seriously questions the administration's insistence on providing U.S. taxpayers' dollars to a government whose head of state has reportedly amassed a personal fortune of as much as six million (dollars) while Zaire remains a very poor country."

The United States is providing four million dollars in military aid to Zaire this year and almost 50 million dollars in food and development assistance.

NEW YORK (JUNE 22) - A woman Thursday told a judge she shot and wounded a would-be assailant because she had already been mugged three times in crime-plagued New York and was scared.

The case of 20-year-old Yvesnande Bureau has been likened to that of celebrated subway vigilante Bernard Goetz, who in 1984 shot four teenagers he said were trying to rob him on the New York underground.

"Lady Goetz," as she has been dubbed, was arrested in March after an armed man tried to force his way into her car and she shot him with an unregistered .22-caliber pistol, grazing him in the head.

She pleaded guilty Thursday to a reduced weapons charge, and said New York was getting out of hand.

"I was mugged in this city three times ... When I finally used my own gun, it was only because I was frightened. I had to protect myself," she said. "If this scenario keeps repeating itself, the city will be out of control."

The judge sentenced her to four consecutive weekends in jail and 100 hours of community service.

PARIS (JUNE 22) - Music-lovers and musicians braved persistent rain here on Thursday to celebrate the ninth annual "festival of music" -- a free midsummer happening that has become a French institution and has been emulated in several other capitals.

All over the country, classical, jazz and folk-music groups played on improvised stages in squares, on street corners and in public buildings, although some events had to be cancelled in areas where the rain was too heavy.

Culture Minister Jack Lang, who brought the annual event into being back in 1981, took advantage of this year's "fete" to hold a reception, at which Rolling Stones singer Mick Jagger was a much-noticed guest.

On Wednesday Mr. Lang had been in Moscow, which was holding its first attempt at a festival of music.

And during Thursday's festivities President Francois Mitterrand held a long-distance TV debate with his Czechoslovak opposite number Vaclav Havel, who in Prague was celebrating a local version of the festival.

Prime Minister Michel Rocard meanwhile took advantage of the festival to decorate the American opera-singer Jessye Norman -- star of last year's celebrations of the Bicentennial of the French Revolution -- with the order of Knight of the Legion of Honor.

ACCRA (JUNE 21) - The creation of a single European market in 1992 will offer new opportunities for trade which developing countries must seize, European Economic Community (EEC) official Enzo Barattini said here Wednesday.

He said, however, that the advantages these countries will expect will in practice vary not only according to their economic structures and degree of development, but also their initiative, will and capacity to profit from these new opportunities.

Mr. Barattini was presenting a paper on the last day of an international conference on the world cocoa economy held in the Ghanaian capital.

He noted that developing countries fear that a big single market might throw their traditional trading relations with community member states into turmoil without offering compensation.

But Mr. Barattini said the new market will rather make Europe a "reliable partner and not a fortress."

The increse in the community demand for raw material will benefit mainly developing countries which can provide a competitive and flexible supply, he said, adding that the increase in demand for consumer goods will also benefit developing countries which have become relatively more industrialized.

He said the best opportunities will fall to the most developed of the developing countries, Mr. Barattini said.

On cocoa, Mr. Barattini said the community has already offered to lift or gradually reduce taxes on consumption for the commodity together with coffee and tea.

"Good cocoa will produce good chocolate which will be able to move freely and unhindered by bureaucratic barriers in a market of 320 million consumers," he said.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 21) - South African paper and forestry giant Sappi has bought five British paper mills for 500 million financial rands (128 million dollars), with the help of an international investment consortium, Business Day reported here Thursday.

Three of the mills were sold by the DRG group's parent holding company Pembridge Investments, and the other two by Star Paper.

Sappi Chief Executive Eugene van As told Business Day the mills were held by a Luxemburg-based company in which Sappi has a 49 percent stake.

He said the British mills would use a significant amount of South African pulp, while the finished product would be distributed through Europe, the United States and the Far East.

"The deal gives us a meaningful international foothold and a strong manufacturing presence in a market where we will produce high value-added products from our own pulp," he said.

PORT HARCOURT, NIGERIA (JUNE 21) - Five more bodies were recovered from the rubble of a collapsed college, bringing the death toll to 111, according to hospital sources Thursday.

The official toll stands at 53 and the government has decided to abandon the search for other victims.

Relatives with missing children have been told to keep in touch with police and local hospitals.

The collapse of Sargue Comprehensive College in Nigeria's Rivers State occurred last Friday when work was underway on a third story to the two-story privately run school which has 600 students and teachers.

President Ibrahim Babangida described the tragedy as a "national catastrophe" and sent messages of sympathy to relatives of the dead. The government has already promised financial aid to relatives, said Colonel Anthony Ukpo, a presidential office spokesman.

Hundreds of relatives still without news of their children have kept up a mournful vigil at the school since the collapse.

The five bodies recovered Wednesday were already in a state of advanced decomposition and probably impossible to identify.

Rescue workers, including police and soldiers, sifted through the rubble under appalling conditions. Millions of flies swarmed over the site drawn by the stench of death and decay.

Grieving mothers told AFP that they had visited nearly every hospital in the city in a desperate search for their children. Townspeople said one mother who lost four children in the accident committed suicide Sunday.

A 22-year-old University of Port Harcourt student, Amadi, said "I personally counted 61 bodies last Friday and I heard that nine others died at nearby hospitals and private clinics."

Local police are still holding the owner of the college who voluntarily surrended to police last week.

Reliable sources said Mr. Ikwe had been warned of structural weaknesses in the building. An architect said the foundations were meant for a bungalow but two additional stories had been added.

Tokyo (JUNE 21) - Nissan Motor Co. will begin sales on Friday in East Germany of its subcompact passenger cars and commercial vehicles to become the first Japanese carmaker to begin full-fledged operations there, the Yomiuri Shimbun newspaper said here Thursday.

Nissan, the second biggest carmaker in Japan, has concluded marketing agreements with 36 East German car dealers to sell six different models, including the 1.8-litre subcompact ''Micra'', ''Sunny'', and ''Bluebird'', the newspaper said.

The company estimates that East German demand for new cars in 1990 will reach 350,000, with Nissan expecting to sell 2,000 cars. Nissan also has plans to double its dealership network to around 70 by the end of this year, the paper reported.

At the same time, Nissan's auto loan service finance company and a car leasing concern, both based in West Germany, are to open business offices in East Berlin, the newspaper added.

Auto industry sources said Nissan's move follows those of such competitors as Volkswagen of West Germany and General Motors Corp. of the United States to start full-scale operations in East Germany.

Nissan's decision was apparently based on the expectation of high new car demand in East Germany after the East German-West German economic and currency union goes into effect on July 1.

HONG KONG (JUNE 21) - Nearly half of Hong Kong manufacturers have shifted or plan to move their production bases to China, with an acute labour scarcity here largely to blame, according to a survey published here Thursday.

Some 48 of 100 local manufacturers polled recently by the Hong Kong Federation of Industries said they had moved or were planning to.

"Thirty-six industrialists confirmed that the problem of labour shortage in Hong Kong is one of the crucial factors" that induced them to relocate, primarily to neighbouring southeastern China, the survey said.

But it said the lack of an estimated 112,000 workers in the manufacturing sector had not been caused by a continuing exodus of local people ahead of 1997, when China resumes sovereignty over the British colony.

The labour problem was caused rather by more women choosing to stay home, old workers retiring and young people preferring white-collar jobs, the survey said.

Government figures showed Hong Kong's unemployment rate was currently running at 1.8 percent of the total workforce of 2.8 million.

The colonial government has decided to import shortly some 15,000 foreign workers to help ease the shortage, but the plan has drawn strong protests from labour unions here.

SINGAPORE (JUNE 21) - The Singapore International Monetary Exchange (SIMEX) launched the world's first sour crude oil futures contract here Thursday.

About 300 contracts were traded between 14.09 and 14.03 U.S. dollars within hours of launching of the contract.

SIMEX president Ang Swee Tian said he was quite happy and satisfied with the initial volume as the physical oil market was generally quiet in the morning, and he expected volume to pick up later, after the European markets opened.

He said he hoped daily volume would grow to 3,000-4,000 contracts in the next six months.

Based on Dubai Crude, the new contract is Simex's second energy contract. The first was a high sulphur fuel oil contract, launched in February 1989.

Sour oil is crude with a very high sulphur content.

HARARE (JUNE 21) - The Zimbabwe Tobacco Association, ZTA, is expecting more than 130 million kilogrammes (286 million pounds) of flue-cured tobacco at the auction floor this season which will earn the country 800 million Zimbabwe dollars (320 million U.S. dollars), ZTA President, Alan Ravenscroft said on Thursday.

Addressing the association's 30th annual congress here, he said the ZTA had set a tobacco production target of 140 million kilos for the forthcoming season.

The higher target was to meet a big demand for good quality, flavourful tobacco, a Zimbabwe speciality but "difficult" to obtain elsewhere, said Mr. Ravenscroft.

Zimbabwe is the world's third largest exporter of flue-cured tobacco after the United States and Brazil.

Tobacco is Zimbabwe's chief foreign currency earner providing over 12 per cent of the country's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) and supporting almost six per cent of the population of 10 million. There are about 1,500 registered flue-cured tobacco farmers in the country and about 138 small scale tobacco farmers.

Mr. Ravenscroft said the country's tobacco production base was threatened by shortages of capital equipment and spares for the industry's ageing fleet of tractors and trucks.

Addressing the same congress, Confederation of European Community Cigarette Manufacturers chairman, John Lepere, said the tobacco industry would triumph despite the "growing anti-smoking movement orchestrated by the World Health Organisation, WHO.

Mr. Lepere accused the WHO of "exaggeration" and a "propaganda campaign" against smoking. While not denying the existence of any health-related side effects of smoking, Mr. Lepere said the WHO drew its conclusions from "unfounded allegations".

BONN (JUNE 21) - West Germany said Thursday it will prosecute East Germany's former leader Erich Honecker who is accused of providing sanctuary to terrorists of the Red Army Faction (RAF).

The decision, announced by the federal prosecutor in Karlsruhe, follows the arrests in East Germany since June 6 of eight of the "most wanted" RAF terrorist suspects sought by West German police.

Mr. Honecker is alleged to have "obstructed" West German justice by failing to comply with international warrants for the arrest of terrorist suspects known to be living in East Germany, prosecutor Gerhard Klasse said.

Mr. Klasse said "many other people are concerned by the charges".

In East Berlin, a spokesman for the public prosecutor said East Germany was itself considering prosecuting Mr. Honecker and the former head of the State security police (STASI) Erich Mielke on similar charges.

The suspects arrested this month in East Germany were living under assumed names and as East German citizens. East German law prohibits extradition of its nationals.

Several of the suspects admitted receiving help from the STASI, the communist regime's notorious secret police, East German investigators said.

In Karlsruhe, West German federal prosecutor Alexander von Stahl said up till now there was not sufficient evidence to bring charges of "aiding and abetting a terrorist organisation" against either Mr. Honecker or Mr. Mielke.

The former East German head of state, who is 77 and in poor health, on Wednesday denied through his lawyer that he had supported terrorism. Mr. Honecker said he had only learned from newspapers that RAF terrorists were in East Germany.

However East German Interior minister Peter-Michael Diestel said that arranging sanctuary for former terrorists was "a private hobby" of Mr. Honecker. The STASI was asked to provide the fugitives with new identities, housing and jobs, he said.

For the first time Thursday, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl accused the former East German communist regime of aiding terrorists.

In a speech to the Bundestag (lower house of parliament) Mr. Kohl said the arrests "demonstrate just how unworthy the (former East German) regime really was. It worked hand in hand with terrorists who murdered people here in the Federal Republic."

WINDHOEK (JUNE 21) - Allegations that Angolan government troops were using an air base in northern Namibia to launch attacks on the rebel National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) brought an official denial Thursday.

A Namibian defence ministry spokesman said Namibia would not make military bases available to Luanda's army, specifically denying a charge by South African parliamentarian Koos van der Merwe, of the far right Conservative Party, that it was using the Rundu base on Namibia's border with Angola.

"The bases at Rundu are at the moment occupied by members of the Namibian Defence Force and members of the Namibian police, who are responsible for border patrols," the spokesman said.

South Africa's Department of Foreign Affairs said in Pretoria on Wednesday it had found no evidence to corroborate Mr. Van Der Merwe's claims.

Similar rumours had done the rounds in the past, but had proved unfounded, the DFA said.

Newspaper reports that Anglola needed Rundu to launch MiG-23 raids on UNITA positions in southern Angola and its headquarters at Jamba were dismissed by observers who said this could be done from Cuito Cuanavale air base in southeastern Angola.

BONN (JUNE 21) - West Germany was set Thursday to try to settle a 45-year-old row over Poland's post-World War II border by formally recognizing it at last, but passion still runs high among Germans expelled from what used to be eastern parts of the Third Reich.

Members of parliament in both East and West Germany had an identical declaration before them Thursday guaranteeing the "inviolability" of Poland's western border drawn along the Oder river and its tributary, the Neisse, by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union in August 1945.

In East Germany, the resolution, rapidly adopted by an overwhelming majority, was nothing new, since the former communist regime recognized the frontier under the 1950 Treaty of Goerlitz with Warsaw.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, however, has never before said what he told the Bundestag, or lower house of parliament, here Thursday: "The frontier between Poland and Germany in its current form is definitive."

For Mr. Kohl's Christian Democrat Union (CDU) and its Bavarian Christian Socialist (CSU) allies, that statement was no easy matter, since it represents acknowledgement that about a quarter of pre-1945 German territory has gone: Pomerania and Silesia to Poland, and eastern Prussia to the Soviet Union.

Ever conscious of electoral feeling, Mr. Kohl had hitherto resisted pressure from his neighbours and allies, especially in France and the United States, to say what his most conservative backers would still consider a betrayal.

In Paris last January, the chancellor said that West Germany "can only act in its own name and not as a sovereign German state" and consequently could not guarantee the definitive nature of the border.

Mr. Kohl's friends have referred to rulings by the West German constitutional court, which declared in 1975 that neither the government nor parliament had the constitutional right to renounce the political goal of "restoring German unity", meaning reunification within pre-1937 borders.

PARIS (JUNE 21) - The national carrier Air France said Thursday it was to cut back flights on some international routes because they were not profitable enough.

The number of passengers carried by the airline increased 1.8 percent in the first five months of this year over the same period last year, while seats available increased 4.3 percent and average seat occupancy was down from 69.9 percent to 68.2, the airline said in a statement.

As a result, the airline is to cut services to Algeria and the West Indies, and on some European routes served from French cities outside Paris.

The airline had already announced cuts on its North American routes earlier this month because of doubling up by Air France, UTA and Air Inter which are now linked.

Air France president Bernard Attali said in an interview published in the Tribune de l'Expansion newspaper Thursday that there were "warning signs of a possible turnaround in the world air transport economy, hitherto flourishing, which is already stagnating on the U.S. domestic market."

Thursday's Air France statement gave no profit predictions for this year. Last year the airline had a net profit of 685 million francs (115 million dollars) on turnover of almost 35 billion (six billion dollars).

DAR ES SALAAM (JUNE 21) - Tanzania is to rehabilitate three sugar factories with the assistance of the Dutch government, at a cost of 103.1 million dollars, Agriculture and Livestock Development Minister Steven Wassira said here Thursday.

Mr. Wassira said the Dutch government would contribute 37.6 million dollars to the programme aimed at making the country self-sufficient in sugar.

The dilapidated sugar factories at Moshi, Kilombero and Mtibwa, originally owned by Dutch investors before they were nationalized in 1967 would be revamped, Mr. Wassira said as he put his ministry's 1990-91 budget proposals before parliament.

Mr. Wassira also revealed efforts to secure finance from other donors to rehabilitate the Indian-built Kagera Sugar Factory that was devastated after soldiers of the deposed Ugandan dictator Idi Amin invaded Tanzania in 1978.

Tanzania's national sugar consumption is currently estimated at 500,000 tons, while local production is still below the 100,000-ton mark, leaving a deficit of 400,000 tons, which the government has been unable to meet due to foreign exchange constraints.

Mr. Wassira said measures were under way to encourage private investment in the sugar industry, particularly in the establishment of mini sugar plants to meet the demand of district and village populations.

PARIS (JUNE 21) - European Commission president Jacques Delors said Thursday he was willing to study British Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major's new proposals for Europe's monetary future.

Mr. Delors told a seminar here on European economic and monetary union that the realisation of this project would require the support of all for its final objective.

In the meanwhile, it was possible to have interesting discussions on Mr. Major's new ideas as a way of boosting the chances of economic and monetary union being achieved, he said.

He saw Mr. Major's proposals as covering the transition period between the first and final stages of European economic and monetary union, and said that the British chancellor "is not against the final stage" of the process, which under the Delors plan would involve a single European currency and a European central bank.

"He is cautious, but he is not rejecting it," Mr. Delors said.

Mr. Majors on Wednesday proposed the setting up of a European Monetary Fund to promote the use of the European Currency Unit (ECU) as a European currency.

He said he was proposing an "evolutionary" approach to monetary union as an alternative to Mr. Delors' proposals since Britain had strong reservations about the latter's plan to introduce rapidly a single European currency and central bank.

The chancellor suggested that ECU bank notes should be issued against deposits in European national currencies, to avoid inflationary pressure, with the ECU gradually becoming a hard currency.

The ECU would exist alongside national currencies, instead of replacing them as would be the case in the final stage of the Delors plan.

A European Monetary Fund (EMF) should be set up to promote use of the ECU within the EEC and print ECU banknotes, Mr. Major said.

It could fix interest rates for the ECU by intervening on the money markets and coordinate central bank intervention to defend European currencies.

But Mr. Major again stressed Britain's position that a European central bank as proposed by Mr. Delors would entail an unacceptable loss of national sovereignty.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) - North Korean President Kim Il-Sung has greeted the new leadership in Bucharest, but he faces a challenge from an architect of Romania's revolt that toppled his old hard-line ally Nicolae Ceaucescu.

Mr. Kim, 78, re-elected last month to the presidency created for him in 1972, sent greetings to Ion Iliescu on Wednesday when he was sworn in as president of Romania, the Korean Central News Agency said Thursday.

"The message expressed the belief that the friendly and cooperative relations between the Korean and Romanian peoples will continue developing in the future," the official news agency monitored here said.

But Silviu Brucan, formerly number two in Romania's National Salvation

Front that assumed power after a popular uprising last December, said he would visit Moscow next week with "an open letter" demanding that Mr. Kim reform his totalitarian society or face the same fate as Ceaucescu.

A professor at Bucharest University, he surprised the world by issuing the letter a week ago in the South Korean capital of Seoul, saying "anti-government figures" would soon start a pro-democracy movement in the north.

"It's a very risky business," Mr. Brucan told reporters in Tokyo Wednesday between his meetings with Japanese leaders. "But my hope is that now (the) eyes of the world are focused on North Korea and that it would be difficult for them to take repressive measures now."

Invited by Romania's ambassador to Tokyo, he said he is visiting here to ask the Japanese government to help democratize North Korea. Although no longer formerly in the government, he said he remains in contact with Mr. Iliescu.

Six people in North Korea's Workers Party central committee and mass media will spread the message of the open letter in North Korea, said Mr. Brucan who served as Romania's ambassador to the United States and the United Nations from 1955 to 1962.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 21) - Romanian students launched a three-day strike on Thursday in protest at the arrest of colleagues when anti-communist demonstrations were broken up.

The daily Romania Libera said the strike by maths, physics and arts students would be "a minimal form of protest", quoting a letter from the league of students.

Marian Munteanu, the student leader seriously injured when police and miners intervened in an anti-government demonstration on June 14, was arrested in hospital on June 16.

He and two others were charged with "inciting and organising several groups of people who attacked several public institutions: the ministry of the interior, the police headquarters and the Romanian information service and the television", the state prosecutors office said Tuesday.

The Romanian Association for Human Rights also protested the arrest of Mr. Munteanu who it said had played "a decisive role" in keeping the demonstration peaceful.

Anti-communist protestors had occupied University Square for more than 50 days. Six people were killed and 502 injured when police and miners evicted demonstrators and hunger strikers on June 13, 14 and 15. Police made 1,021 arrests.

BEIRUT (JUNE 21) - French envoy Francois Scheer returned here Thursday from Damascus and was to meet Moslem leaders as part of efforts by Paris to resolve Lebanon's lingering political crisis.

The French initiative coincided with mediation by the Vatican aimed at healing a rift between the Syrian-backed Lebanese president, Elias Hrawi, and Christian leader General Michel Aoun, who rejects Mr. Hrawi's authority.

Pope John Paul II on Thursday received the foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and Algeria, Prince Saud al-Faysal and Ahmad Ghozali, who last year helped draft an Arab League peace plan for Lebanon that was endorsed by the Lebanese parliament but rejected by Gen. Aoun.

Mr. Scheer, general secretary at the French Foreign Ministry, was in Beirut Tuesday and Wednesday for talks with President Hrawi, Prime Minister Selim al-Hoss and Gen. Aoun.

He travelled Wednesday to Damascus and met for three hours with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Shara.

Syria is a strong supporter of the Arab League plan, which was endorsed by Lebanese MPs last October in the Saudi resort city of Taif.

The plan transferred significant political power from the Christian minority to the Moslem majority, arranged for the election of a new president and called for the redeployment of some 35,000 Syrian troops in Lebanon.

But Gen. Aoun and Lebanese regular troops loyal to him rejected the Taif agreement for its failure to stipulate an actual withdrawal of Syrian forces.

The Vatican, according to authoritative sources here, has proposed that Gen. Aoun be invited to take part in an expanded national reconciliation government that would re-assess the Taif agreement.

President Hrawi has reportedly backed the idea of including Gen. Aoun in the government -- but on condition that he accept the Taif plan.

Amid reports of moves to modify the accord, Presidents Hrawi and Hafez al-Assad of Syria held an unexpected meeting in Damascus on Wednesday and stressed that all clauses of the plan should be implemented in full.

Arab sources in Rome said Prince Saud and Mr. Ghozali had also told the pope it was essential for Gen. Aoun to adhere to the Taif agreement.

Mr. Scheer's current involvement in reconciliation efforts, reliable sources explained, is aimed at persuading Gen. Aoun "to rally without preconditions to the authority" of Mr. Hrawi.

The French envoy was Thursday to meet Sheikh Mohammad Mehdi Shamseddin, vice-president of the higher Shiite council, Sheikh Mohammad Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual guide to pro-Iranian Moslem fundamentalists in Lebanon, and the spiritual leader of Lebanese Sunni Moslems, Mohammad Kabbani.

SYDNEY (JUNE 21) - In the latest attempt to fight a pest which has caused untold damage to crops for the past 120 years, the government of South Australia plans to import Spanish fleas to infect rabbits with the killer disease myxomatosis.

John Burley, a senior advisor to the Animal and Plant Control Commission in Adelaide, said Thursday that "myxomatosis is the only answer" to counter "our major environmental threat".

Tens of millions of rabbits destroyed 100 million dollars (80 million U.S.) worth of crops, trees and seedlings a year, he said, and their natural enemies -- feral cats, wild dogs and foxes -- had "no significant impact" on their numbers.

David Butler, executive director of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (RSPCA) in Sydney, said that while myxomatosis was "not the nicest disease in the world", it was more humane than poisons and steel-jaw traps.

Discovered in Uruguay in 1896 and deliberately introduced to Australia in 1950, myxomatosis attacks the mucuous membranes, leaving rabbits blind and gasping for breath. But, Dr. Butcher said, death usually followed quickly.

Since wiping out about 90 per cent of the rabbits in Australia 40 years ago, myxomatosis has lingered, spread by mosquitoes and fleas imported from England. The rabbits, however, have made a spectacular comeback and acquired an immunity to the original form of the illness.

Mr. Burley explained that the Spanish flea, xenopsylla cunicularis, had been selected to spread a new strain of myxomatosis because it could survive in the arid regions of northeast South Australia, where rabbits do most damage.

Tests conducted over three years in Spain had shown that the flea was no threat to other species native to Australia, and the federal authorities in Canberra had given quarantine approval to import it, he said.

If successful, "they'll be released all round Australia", Mr. Burley said, and he predicted a significant fall in rabbit numbers within five years.

Mr. Burley dismissed suggestions that the Spanish flea might get out of control, like the giant cane toad, imported to Queensland in 1935 to control a sugarcane-eating beetle but now a widespread pest.

"Our quarantine protocols are much more stringent now," he said.

Dr. Butcher, a respected veterinarian, agreed that parasites usually stuck to one host, and that there seemed to be no risk of xenopsylla cunicularis infesting animals other than rabbits.

But he also concurred that Australia's history of imported animals was a dark one.

Rabbits, brought in as hunting stock by Thomas Austin in 1859 proved "the most disastrous ecological move that European man has made here," he said. Foxes, "imported for men in red coats to run around after", were another pest and had not even helped to control the rabbits.

ROME (JUNE 21) - The de Benedetti group won the latest round in the battle for control of Italian publishing giant Mondadori on Thursday when a court ruled that a pact with other shareholders was binding.

The court upheld the validity of a shareholders' agreement allying the de Benedetti group and the Formenton-Mondadori family within the AMEF company, which holds a 50.2 percent stake in Mondadori.

A bitter battle for control of Mondadori broke out when the Formenton family abandoned Carlo de Benedetti in December to link up with Italian television magnate Silvio Berlusconi.

Mr. Berlusconi then ousted Mr. de Benedetti and his allies from positions of power within Mondadori.

But Mr. de Benedetti went to court, accusing the Formenton-Mondadori family of breaking a pledge to sell him their shares once their alliance agreement expired this year, which led to the sequestration of their holding pending a decision.

The arbitration court ruled Thursday that the de Benedetti-Formenton pact was valid.

LA BAULE, France (JUNE 21) - Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said Thursday that France remained "firmly committed to the virtues of dialogue" between Israelis and Palestinians.

Commenting through a spokesman on U.S. President George Bush's decision announced Wednesday to suspend talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization, Mr. Dumas said he had been warned of it by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

He stressed, however, that France wanted an international Middle East peace conference and said dialogue could "usefully contribute to peace" and serve all parties.

Mr. Dumas, here for a Franco-African summit, was speaking a day after Mr. Bush broke off the 18-month dialogue on the grounds that Yasser Arafat's PLO had failed explicitly to condemn a foiled raid by one of its factions on an Israeli beach last month.

PARIS (JUNE 19) - Genevieve Dalle, the wife of the former president of French cosmetics concern L'Oreal, was charged Thursday with insider trading in connection with deals in major French bank Societe Generale in 1988.

The move brought to five the number of people charged in the affair, in which the alleged offenders are said to have reaped millions of dollars.

The charges relate to dealings in Societe Generale shares during an abortive bid to build up a major stake in the bank in 1988 by businessman Georges Pebereau, apparently with the support of the socialist government.

Mr. Pebereau's Marcel Investissements was trying to break a pro-conservative core shareholding in the bank established when it was privatised by the conservative government of Jacques Chirac in 1987.

The other four charged include a former senior aide to Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy, Jean Charles Naouri, who allegedly made 1.95 million francs (340,000 dollars) in the affair and 76-year-old billionaire Jean-Pierre Peyraud, who allegedly made 35 million francs (6.1 million dollars).

Financiers Jean Foureau and his son Jean-Claude have also been charged.

All five have been given a month to produce bail equivalent to the amount of illicit profit allegedly made.

The Paris stock exchange authorities had opened an enquiry into the Societe Generale affair in February 1989, and in July handed its dossier over to the judicial authorities, saying that insider trading could have been committed.

The public prosecutor's office last month recommended that five people be charged.

MILAN, Italy (JUNE 21) - The Milan stock market tumbled 1.27 percent on Thursday after the employers' association unilaterally ended a 44-year-old agreement index-linking Italians' wages to the inflation rate.

The MIB index ended the day down 14 points on Wednesday's close at 1,092.

Banks were among the heavy losers, with Mediobanca shedding 2.37 percent, COMIT down 2.37 percent and Ambroveneto falling 4.64 percent.

Blue chip stocks such as Montedison, down 1.14 percent and Olivetti, off 1.05, did not fare quite so badly, but the only top rank issue to gain ground was CIR, up 0.19 percent.

Market analysts said the poor showing was the result of the announcement late Wednesday that the employers' association Cofindustria was dissociating itself from the index-linking agreement unilaterally.

This led unions to announce a general strike in the first half of next month, although observers did not expect it to begin until after the end of the World Cup in Italy on July 8.

The moves came after several days of stormy annual wage negotiations between the two sides.

NAIROBI (JUNE 21) - Prominent Kenyan newspaper editor George Mbugguss was arrested Thursday, hours after police broke up a news conference called by a lawyer acting for politicians seeking a multi-party system, a spokesman at his newspaper said.

Mr. Mbugguss, editor of The Nation, was detained by plainclothes police who cited "security reasons" as they arrested him in his office, the spokesman said.

Associates of Mr. Mbugguss linked the arrest to the aborted news conference called by Paul Muite, the lawyer of two former cabinet ministers, Kenneth Matiba and Charles Rubia, who have been under fire from the government over their repeated calls for multi-party democracy in Kenya.

Police stormed in to the building where the news conference was being held, told journalists to disperse and confiscated note books, films and cassettes.

On Wednesday, police made an unsuccessful attempt to arrest Mr. Matiba and Mr. Rubia at Mr. Muite's office.

President Daniel arap Moi, in a Saturday at a rally in Nakuru, 160 kilometres (100 miles) west of here, declared the sole ruling Kenya African National Union (KANU) as the only legal party and put an end to debates on the multi-party system.

Lawyer-cum-journalist Gitobu Imanyara, who edits the Law Magazine said before Mr. Mbugguss' arrest: "the threat of harassments and intimidation is as great for local journalists. Unlike lawyers who have an association to represent them, journalists are sacked for reporting the truth and nobody speaks for them."

CARACAS (JUNE 21) - The Anglo-Dutch oil company Shell, America's Exxon and Japan's Mitsubishi will team up with Venezuela's state-run Lagoven Company in a three-billion-dollar plan to extract offshore natural gas, officials reported.

The project, subjet to approval by the Venezuelan Congress, would signal the return of multinational oil companies to this country, 16 years after the oil industry was nationalized.

Dubbed Christopher Columbus, the plan entails drilling for natural gas off the northeastern Paria peninsula, an official release said Wednesday.

Lagoven, a subsidiary of Petroleos de Venezuela S.A. (PDVSA), estimates the offshore gas fields will yield 4.4 million tonnes of liquid gas a year, worth some 500 million dollars. The gas would be destined mainly to the United States.

Offshore drilling platforms and a gas liquefaction plant would start going up 1992 and production would begin late 1996 if the project is approved.

Shortly after he was sworn in last February, Social Democrat President Andres Perez, who nationalized the oil industry in 1976 during his first five-year term in office, announced that Venezuela would once again open its oil, gas and coal fields to Western companies.

The government plans to spend 16 billion dollars over the next eight years to update its entire energy sector. Four billion dollars will be plowed into existing oil fields to increase daily production, from the current 2.6 million barrels to 3.5 million barrels by 1998.

According to PDVSA President Arturo Sosa Pietri, the state-run company and its foreign partners will contribute 40 percent towards financing the long-term project, with the remaining 60 percent coming from international lending institutions.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (JUNE 21) - The Bonn government is considering guaranteeing a five-billion Deutsche mark (3.1-billion dollar) loan to the Soviet Union from a group of West German banks, a government spokesman said here Thursday.

The proposal - an unprecedented move, according to economists - is to go before a special meeting of the parliamentary budget committee Friday, he added.

Experts here said the committee was unlikely to turn down the proposal to guarantee the loan from several West German banks led by Deutsche Bank and Dresdner Bank, which press reports said was to be used to aid Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reforms.

No bank would comment on Thursday.

The loan is without risk for the banks as the government would jump in to guarantee repayment should the Soviet Union be insolvent.

Bank sources said no West German government had ever guaranteed a loan of the size now projected. The latest record was a 1.5-billion Deutsche mark (one-billion dollar) loan to Hungary.

Financial experts here said the project was "totally political" and intended as a sweetener offered to Moscow ahead of German reunification.

"One thing is clear, if Bonn had not given the guarantee no bank would have loaned money to the Soviet Union now", Peter Pietsch, economist at the Commerzbank, West Germany's third bank, said.

"There has been much talk about its inability to pay", Mr. Pietsch continued.

But so far insolvency has been more of a problem for Soviet companies than for the central government.

Bayer, one of West Germany's chemical giants, recently said Soviet companies had outstanding bills totalling 100 million Deutsche marks (64 million dollars).

"We are not particularly worried but so far Soviet payments were made very much on time", a spokesman for the group said.

TURNHOUT, BELGIUM (JUNE 21) - Three kilos (6.6 pounds) of explosives left in a Belgian forest last weekend by alleged Irish Republican Army (IRA) militants have been identified as Semtex, the powerful Czechoslovak substance widely used in terrorist attacks in Europe, police here said Thursday.

Alerted by local farmers who heard gunfire in a wood, Belgian gendarmes Saturday arrested a leading IRA suspect, Donna Maguire, and Dutch police later arrested two alleged colleagues who managed to flee across the border.

Police said they found an arms cache in the wood comprising a Kalashnikov assault rifle, two heavy-calibre handguns and a case containing suspected explosives.

Ms. Maguire, 23, was charged on Sunday with use of a fake passport, illegal weapons possession and membership of a criminal organisation.

Belgium has filed an extradition request for the other two, one of whom has been identified as Gerard Harte, 27. The other was allegedly carrying a false passport in the name of Andrew Thornton.

A fourth man, a 26-year-old resident of Northern Ireland, was arrested in the Netherlands on Monday after having tried to drive through a police blockade, apparently in an effort to rescue one of the escapees.

A Turnhout police spokesman said Thursday that the fourth man was suspected of having taken part in terrorist operations in the Netherlands. He refused to elaborate.

Dutch, British, Belgium and West German detectives met here Thursday to discuss the arrests. The spokesman declined to comment on their talks.

The IRA has carried out a string of bomb and gun attacks on British soldiers in continental Europe since March 1987, leaving a toll of 11 dead and more than 54 injured. Many of the casualties were civilians.

Semtex is a mouldable and stable plastic explosive that police say is virtually impossible to detect by sniffer dogs. According to press reports the IRA received shipments of the explosive via Libya.

Czechoslovakia's new democratic government has agreed to add a compound to the explosive that will make it more easily detectable. But it warns that enough of the old-formula Semtex is in circulation to supply terrorist operations for dozens of years ahead.

MOSCOW (JUNE 21) - Candidates for the post of Russian communist party chief on Thursday addressed a congress of Russian communists who were expected to vote for their favourite on Friday.

More candidates for the post of first secretary of the new Russian party were expected to be heard Friday.

Four candidates, seen as conservatives, all of them members of the party bureaucracy, addressed the congress before recess Thursday evening.

They included Ivan Polozkov, a party chief from the Krasnodar region of southern Russia, who stood unsuccessfully last month against Boris Yeltsin to the post of Russian president.

Other candidates were Valentin Kuptsov, a former Vologda party chief who now heads a central committee department, Alexander Melnikov, first secretary of the Kemerovo region in Siberia and Alexi Shenin, who has served as first secretary in a number of regions.

Other leading figures, who were said to have withdrawn from the race, included Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov.

VERONA (JUNE 21) - Spain avenged their 1986 World Cup defeat by beating Belgium 2-1 here on Thursday to win the right to stay in Verona for their second round match next Tuesday against Yugoslavia.

Enzo Scifo missed a second half penalty - a record fifth missed attempt in this tournament -- which would have given Belgium a draw and allowed them to finish Group E winners.

Michel, from the penalty spot, and Alberto Gorriz scored for Spain while Patrick Vervoort replied for the Belgians who knocked Spain out in the second round four years ago.

The Belgians now play the winners of Group F, which will be decided tonight when England play Egypt and Holland face Ireland in Bologna.

Michel's 26th minute penalty made him the tournament's highest scorer with four goals but four minutes later Vervoort hammered a free-kick through the Spanish wall for the equaliser.

Centre-back Gorriz headed Spain's second from a Michel free-kick in the 38th minute.

Julio Salinas, a constant thorn in the Belgian side, was brought down on both occasions and he could well have scored in the second half after a magnificent 40 metre run.

Belgian goalkeeper Michel Preud'homme tripped him for the penalty after Emilio Butragueno had put him through.

Enzo Scfifo, who had so nearly set up the first goal for Franky Van der Elst just a minute before Spain opened the score, was bundled over by Roberto and Vervoort hit the equaliser.

Zubizarreta could not even move for the free-kick but got down well at the feet of Philippe Albert to stop a second.

VERSAILLES, FRANCE (JUNE 21) - An appeal court here on Thursday put an end to a washing powder war over phosphates between Rhone-Poulenc of France and Henkel of West Germany by ordering both to stop contentious advertising.

The West German company was ordered to halt an advertising campaign for its Le Chat brand marketed in France claiming that the phosphate-free detergent contributed to a better environment, on pain of a 50,000 franc (8,770 dollar) fine.

The appeal court ruled that both companies must cease adverts based on the relative merits of detergents based on the absence or presence of phosphates.

Rhone-Poulenc has already withdrawn its adverts promoting phosphates in detergent, but was ordered to pay Henkel France three million francs (526,000 dollars) in damages and interest, although it had put in a claim of 16 million francs (2.8 million dollars) against Henkel.

The court said that Henkel's "excessive" claims were no excuse for "the exasperated response of Rhone-Poulenc," citing an advertising campaign which portrayed dead fish, apparently the victims of phosphate-free detergent.

Despite the payment the ruling was a blow for Henkel, which was appealing against a lower court decision that its environment-friendly ad campaign was "tendentious, if not dishonest."

Rhone-Poulenc said it welcomed Thursday's "condemnation of the abuse of ecology-marketing," and said the decision set a legal precedent which might even be valid outside France.

The court decision left open the question of whether it was better to have detergent with or without phosphates.

Illegal immigration was also responsible for the upward trend, Mr. Roussely said, partly because of improved detection.

Terrorism was at its lowest for 10 years, and down by half on 1987.

CAPE TOWN (JUNE 21) - The liberal Democratic Party (DP) is to opt for a single leader at its national congress later this year after suffering splits in the party since it was launched with three co-leaders early last year.

A DP statement said that the three, Zach de Beer, Denis Worrall and Wynand Malan were unanimous that it would be in the party's best interests to elect a single leader.

Many supporters have been disgruntled with the troika, claiming it has caused a directionless party wracked with pettiness and confusion.

The DP also announced Thursday that it would launch an economic policy at its congress, to be held "at the earliest opportunity".

"The DP believes that, while the negotiated constitutional settlement is the priority of the day, an appropriate economic system will be vital for a peaceful, stable post-apartheid South Africa."

Support for the DP has dwindled since President Frederik de Klerk announced sweeping reforms in February, with many saying its policies have been swallowed up by the ruling National Party (NP).

Leading DP parliamentarian, Peter Soal, told Agence France-Presse last week that the party should revert to its traditional watchdog role and give up all notions of power.

The final blow for the troika came earlier this month when the DP suffered a crushing defeat in a crucial whites-only by-election in the blue collar Natal Province town of Umlazi.

NAIROBI (JUNE 21) - The editor of Kenya's largest newspaper was arrested Thursday and a colleague threatened with detention, hours after police broke up a pro-democracy press conference, newspaper spokesmen said.

George Mbugguss, editor of The Nation, was detained by plainclothes police who cited "security reasons" as they arrested him in his office, a spokesman said.

Officials at The Standard newspaper said that Mitch Odero, the paper's deputy editor had been threatened with arrest.

Associates of Mr. Mbugguss linked the arrest to an aborted news conference called by Paul Muite, the lawyer of two former cabinet ministers, Kenneth Matiba and Charles Rubia, who have been under fire from the government over their repeated calls for multi-party democracy in Kenya.

Police stormed in to the building where the news conference was being held, told journalists to disperse and confiscated note books, films and cassettes.

On Wednesday, police made an unsuccessful attempt to arrest Mr. Matiba and Mr. Rubia at Mr. Muite's office.

President Daniel arap Moi, during a rally Saturday at Nakuru, 160 kilometres (100 miles) west of here, reaffirmed that the ruling Kenya African National Union (KANU) was the only legal party and said debate on the multi-party system, which would lead to tribalism, was closed.

Lawyer-cum-journalist Gitobu Imanyara, who edits the Law Magazine said before Mr. Mbugguss' arrest, "the threat of harassments and intimidation is as great for local journalists. Unlike lawyers who have an association to represent them, journalists are sacked for reporting the truth and nobody speaks for them."

The Nation, the country's largest daily with a circulation of 200,000, is financed by the Aga Khan, while The Standard is owned by the British Lonrho group.

The Nation has frequently been attacked in editorials, on tribal grounds, by the ruling party organ, The Kenya Times.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 21) - Leaders of the European Economic Community next week will be asked to set a date for an EEC conference on political union, to run in parallel with a forum this December for forging economic and monetary union.

In a letter setting the agenda at Dublin Castle next Monday and Tuesday, Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey said the summit should also discuss environment, the situation in the Soviet Union and South Africa, and open a new front in the fight against drugs.

The summiteers will lunch on Monday with Prime Minister Lothar De Maiziere and Foreign Minister Markus Meckel of East Germany, the first politicians from a third country ever to be invited to an EEC summit.

They will also be briefed on the progress toward German unification by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

EEC foreign ministers have already agreed the outlines of debate on political union, although diplomats caution that the Community is still divided as to how much sovereignty should be transferred to the central institutions from national capitals.

The first stage of economic and monetary union is scheduled to begin on July 1, when the Community begins to dismantle its remaining curbs on capital movements.

Under it, sterling, the escudo and the drachma are scheduled to become full members of the European Monetary System (EMS), which irons out fluctuations between EEC currencies.

The latter stages of the process, with such goals as a central EEC bank and the creation of a single currency, will be discussed at an intergovernmental conference that Italy, the next president of the Community, says is likely to be launched on December 13.

The summit is unlikely to have any detailed discussion of Britain's own proposals, outlined late Wednesday by British Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major, a British diplomat said.

LA BAULE, FRANCE (JUNE 21) - France stands by hard-hit Africa, but wants to see more democracy and will consider aid "bonuses" for it, was the main message to come out of the Franco-African summit drawing to a close here Thursday.

The 35 African leaders present all told French President Francois Mitterrand that they were "very alarmed" at the risk of being abandoned, but equally "recognized the need for progress in developing democracy", a spokesman for Mr. Mitterrand said.

Senegalese President Abdou Diouf earlier proposed that African countries on the road to a multi-party system should get bonuses for their efforts.

Concretely, Mr. Mitterrand has pledged a grants-only policy for the least developed African nations while promising to reduce the interest rate to five percent on public debt owed by four intermediate-income countries.

The latter move on behalf of Cameroon, Congo, Gabon and Ivory Coast will ease their debt burden by some 250 million francs (45 million dollars) this year, French presidential staff have said.

Cooperation and Development Minister Jacques Pelletier said Thursday that this "gesture ... could have a knock-on effect" for other countries.

Mr. Mitterrand also promised to launch an initiative for the middle-income countries, which fall through holes in key current international debt relief arrangements because they are still too rich, at the summit of the seven leading industrialised democracies early next month in Houston, Texas.

On Mr. Diouf's bonus proposal, Mr. Pelletier agreed that it was important to "arrange things" so that countries on the democratic path should "get a plus" compared with others, "a democracy bonus".

Senegal, one of the West African countries to become independent from France in 1960, was the first and still one of the few to accept an opposition party, though others have followed suit in recent months, swept up in the gale blowing out of East Europe.

ISLAMABAD (JUNE 21) - Pakistan on Thursday returned millions of dollars worth of Iranian jewellery it seized from smugglers six years ago, official sources said.

The gold and silver ornaments, which once belonged to Iran's royal dynasty, were stolen and smuggled into Pakistan.

Iran requested the return of the treasures, which it called "part of its national heritage," officials said.

Some of the items were several hundred years old, while others belonged to the period of the late Shah, deposed in the 1979 Islamic revolution.

The items were handed over to an Iranian delegation that flew here to collect them, the officials said.

Returning the precious items was a "gesture of brotherhood and friendship" between the two countries, which enjoy "excellent bilateral relations," the foreign office said.

SAN FRANCISCO, CA (JUNE 21) - Scientists and researchers got down to work at the sixth international AIDS conference here Thursday as homosexual groups planned new demonstrations against what they perceive as foot-dragging in AIDS research by the U.S. Government.

Some of the 12,000 experts from 100 countries attending the week-long conference reported that the spread of AIDS is slowing among some male homosexuals but growing at an alarming rate among women, teenagers and especially crack-cocaine smokers and heavy drinkers.

A report by the National Research Council and the National Academy of Sciences indicated that AIDS was spreading out from large cities to populations not previously thought to be at special risk.

A rowdy sit-in Wednesday outside the convention center by 300 members of the gay-rights group ACT UP ended with some 100 handcuffed demonstrators, including eight acknowledged AIDS sufferers, being herded into police vans.

Protests were also directed against a U.S. immigration policy banning entry to people infected with the HIV virus, which can lead to Acquired Inmune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

Besides other protest movements, the close of the AIDS conference Sunday will coincide with Gay Pride Day, when an expected 100,000 people will take part in a march here.

"In this city since the epidemic began, more San Franciscans have died of AIDS than all San Franciscans who died in World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam," mayor Art Agnos said when he inaugurated the AIDS conference late Wednesday.

Since the fatal disease was first detected in the early 80's, San Francisco's 750,000 inhabitants have suffered a disproportionate share of grief: 5,962 people have died, some 25,000 people are HIV carriers and every day six new cases and three more deaths are reported.

MONROVIA (JUNE 21) - An Organization of African Unity (OAU) delegation met Liberian President Samuel Doe at the Executive Mansion Thursday in a bid for peace in the war-torn West African country, an official statement said.

The statement from Mr. Doe's office said the delegation was headed by Hamen Haggart, assistant secretary to OAU Secretary-General Salem A. Salem.

Mr. Doe told the delegation his government was "exerting every effort to bring about peace" in Liberia, where National Patriotic Front (NPFL) rebels led by fugitive former civil servant Charles Taylor have been fighting since December 24 to unseat Mr. Doe.

He said his peace initiatives have included the current conference under the auspices of the Liberia Council of Churches between the government and the rebels last week in Freetown, Sierra Leone.

The two sides intend to resume talks in Sierra Leone on Monday.

He urged members of the OAU delegation to meet with religious leaders on the peace initiatives.

It was the first OAU delegation to visit Liberia since fighting between rebels and government troops erupted in northeastern Nimba County.

Rebels have since pushed their way to within 30 miles (50 kilometers) of the capital Monrovia.

JAMMU, INDIA (JUNE 21) - India's army chief met the home minister Thursday to discuss the situation in Kashmir after violence linked to Moslem militancy in the northern region left at least 24 people dead in as many hours.

Home Minister Mufti Mohammed Sayeed and General V.N. Sharma met in Srinagar, the summer capital of the state of Jammu and Kashmir, which has seen increasing attacks on security forces in recent days.

They gave no details of their discussion.

Militants there killed a member of the paramilitary Central Reserve Police Force and a non-paramilitary Kashmir police constable in a grenade attack Thursday, they said.

In the same city, the militants shot and injured a boy and threw a grenade at a security forces post, wounding one.

In the town of Anantnag, militants gunned down two paramilitary men who were bathing in a stream Thursday, officials here in Jammu and Kashmir's winter capital said.

Unofficial reports said five were killed.

Elsewhere in the Moslem-majority Kashmir valley, militants fighting to end Indian rule over Kashmir shot dead two unidentified civilians in public markets, the officials said.

The Indian army shot dead two armed militants and injured 27 more when the separatists allegedly entered from Pakistan at Kashmir's Kupwara border area, officials said.

The intruders were shot when they disregarded an order to halt, they said, adding that 10 such men were captured at Kashmir's Titwal border area.

Earlier, state government officials said 16 people were killed and 40 injured in gunfights between militants and security forces overnight in Srinagar and Kashmir's two frontier towns of Uri and Kupwara (Eds: correct).

FREETOWN (JUNE 21) - Sierra Leone's 19,000 striking teachers Thursday threatened to quit if education authorities failed to dissolve the national teachers' union executive, official sources said.

The ultimatum follows two days of abortive talks with officials including Education Minister Moses Dumbuya and Police Inspector General James Bambay Kamara.

The strikers want payment of at least three months of overdue salaries and allowances.

Authorities agreed Wednesday to set elections for the new national executive for July 21, but teachers continue to demand that the union officials be sacked immediately.

The West African country's 2,455 schools remained closed Thursday.

Observers say if a meeting Friday with Labor Minister Yembeh Mansaray fails to defuse the four-week strike there will be no tuition for the term which is to end July 13.

In a related development, education authorities have ordered the closure of Bunumbu Teachers' College 223 miles (372 kilometers) from here.

Press reports say the school's 1,000 students went on a hunger strike after college rector Sandy Bockarie refused to recognize the college's new student union.

The message was delivered by Lieutenant-General Arnold Quainoo, member of Ghana's ruling Provisional National Defence Council (PNDC) and Deputy Foreign Affairs Secretary Mohammed Chambers.

The two officials arrived here Wednesday and are expected to return to Accra later Thursday.

Contents of the message were not disclosed, but foreign ministry sources said after the state house meeting that the Ghanaian government was "converned about the situation in Liberia."

The sources said Ghana sent the officials "to be briefed on the progress of last week's peace talks held in Freetown" between the Liberian government and the National Patriotic Front (NPFL) rebels.

They said that the question of "an African observer force in Liberia was mentioned," without elaborating.

The delegation was originally scheduled to arrive here Sunday, and no reason has been given for bringing forward the visit.

CAGLIARI (JUNE 21) - England and Egypt failed to show any ideas in an inept first half which ended goalless in their last Group F World Cup match here on Thursday.

The first real shot came after half an hour when Steve Bull pulled his effort wide after Egyptian defender Hany Ramzy lost the ball in the penalty area and hurt himself trying to retrieve the situation.

Ramzy was off the field for 10 minutes receiving treatment.

Egypt grew in confidence as England struggled to find any rhythm and Mark Wright's sliding tackle robbed Rabie Yassine after a long run down the left.

Swiss referee Kurt Rothlisberger, who booked nine men and sent one off in his previous World Cup match between Austria and the United States, booked Egypt's Magdy Abdelghani for time-wasting after 36 minutes.

Chris Waddle, John Barnes and Paul Gascoigne were doing nothing in mdifield and Gascoigne's trickery took him nowhere.

England had Steve McMahon in for injured captain Bryan Robson and long-serving defender Terry Butcher was dropped.

Wright and Des Walker made up the central defence.

England's best attacker was left-back Stuart Pearce but when Waddle did at last reach the goal-line his cross was well cut out by goalkeeper Ahmed Shobeir.

England: Shilton, Parker, Walker, Wright, Pearce, Waddle, McMahon, Gascoigne, Barnes, Lineker, Bull

Egypt: Shobeir, Ibrahim Hassan, Hany Ramzy, Hesham Yakan, Ahmed Ramzy, Rabie Yassine, Magdy Abdelghani, Ahmed Abdel Aziz, Ismail Youssef, Hossam Hassan, Gamal Abdelhamid

UNITED NATIONS, NEW YORK (JUNE 21) - South Africa Thursday pledged 10 million dollars to its former colony, Namibia, during a U.N. conference of donor countries for the Windhoek government which came to power in March.

Namibian President Sam Nujoma is hoping the conference will result in pledges of 810 million dollars to finance his planned three-year development plan, covering 1990-92.

Among Thursday's pledges, West Germany pledged 59 million dollars, Norway 11 million dollars, Finland 10 million dollars for 1990 plus 42 million dollars for the following three years, and the United States offered 10 million dollars.

More pledges are expected Friday, the final day of the U.N. conference.

Windhoek's three-year plan was formulated by the Namibian government with the aid of experts from the U.N. Development Program, the World Bank and the U.N. Economic Commission for Africa.

Mr. Nujoma recalled that Namibia had inherited a debt of 260 million dollars from its former ruler, South Africa.

He said more than 90 per cent of Namibia's 1.3 million people lived in rural areas were there was "virtually nothing that could be described as 20th century infrastructure."

He said these people suffered from "poverty, malnutrition, disease, illiteracy and unemployment."

MEDELLIN, COLOMBIA (JUNE 21) - Army troops swept through the streets of this drug trafficking provincial capital and arrested 27 people suspected of killing police -- often on orders from drug barons, officials said Thursday.

The arrests were part of a government plan to stem a wave of violence that has intensified in the last few months in this northwestern city of 1.5 million people where drug-related violence has become a daily affair.

Army General Harold Bedoya said military forces would be stationed indefinitely to keep order in Medellin, the headquarters of this South American country's principal drug cartel.

Colombia's drug cartels and the government have been locked in a near year-long war that has left hundreds dead and areas of Bogota and Medellin devastated.

After the government struck hard at the drug barons by arresting suspected traffickers and extraditing others to the United States to stand trial, the drug mafia offered a 4,500-dollar bounty for each policeman killed.

So far this year, 138 policemen have been killed in Medellin.

Gen. Bedoya said the surprise raids turned up suspected members of four of the main criminal groups, including "Los Calvos," (The Bald Ones) one of the most deadly gangs operating in Medellin under the orders of drug traffickers.

Also captured were members of Los Encapuchados (The Hooded Ones), a gang which has terrorized sections of Medellin.

CAGLIARI (JUNE 21) - Mark Wright scored a 59th minute winner against Egypt here Thursday to put England into the World Cup second round and send Egypt back to Cairo.

He just got his head to a Paul Gascoigne free-kick to deflect the ball out of the reach of goalkeeper Ahmed Shobeir for an unconvincing 1-0 win.

But Peter Shilton, playing his 121st international, saved England with a point-blank save in the 75th minute.

Gary Lineker should have wrapped things up five minutes earlier but he chipped over from five metres on the left.

Ibrahim Hassan gave away the crucial free-kick when he clipped Des Walker's leg as the defender ran clear on the left wing after a one-two with John Barnes.

England finished top of the group with four points followed by the Dutch and Irish who drew 1-1 in Sicily.

England now play Belgium in Bologna on Tuesday.

OAXTEPEC, MEXICO (JUNE 21) EFE - El Salvador's rightist government and Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) rebels were set to open a third day of peace talks Thursday to discuss a reduction in the Armed Forces and the demobilization of the FMLN.

United Nations mediator Alvaro de Soto and rebel and government representatives have said that while tensions have been high at the talks, they were still optimistic that a ceasefire agreement to end the country's decade-long war could be reached.

Salvadoran writer David Escobar Galindo, a presidential adviser and member of the government's delegation, said Thursday that "you can perceive the enormous will on both sides to put down arms and get on with a normal life."

Both sides have recognized the need to reach an agreement over the reduction of Army troops, which currently number 56,000, and the demobilization of the leftist FMLN guerrillas.

But the rebels are insisting that the Army take responsibility for crimes committed against civilians during the war, a condition which the government is reportedly reluctant to accept.

The head of the guerrilla delegation, Shafik Handal, said the government must "at least" clarify the assassinations of the Archbishop of San Salvador, Oscar Arnulfo Romero, the ten leaders of the National Workers' Federation, leftist politician Hector Oqueli and six Jesuits, their housekeeper and her daughter at the Central American University.

Handal added that without resolving these issues, the closed-door meetings "will not advance."

Justice Minister Oscar Santamaria, who heads the government delegation, said Thursday that "the Army can not disappear because of political negotiations, but rather its transformation requires constitutional reforms."

He also insisted upon a "reciprocal" demobilization on the part of guerrillas.

The Armed Forces Wednesday issued a statement agreeing to support the government and "reduce the number of troops, once the FMLN adopts a similar attitude."

If negotiators surmount the Armed Forces obstacle, they will go on to deal with human rights issues, judicial and constitutional reforms, socio-economic projects and the international verification of peace treaties.

A ceasefire would put an end to the 10-year civil war which has claimed 75,000 lives and caused dlrs four billion in damage.

Rebels and human rights groups claim Army-backed death squads targetting civilians are responsible for half of the war's deaths.

Talks between the government and rebels in September 1989 broke off after the rebels launched a large-scale offensive on San Salvador in November. Previous talks in June 1989, 1987 and 1984 produced no lasting results.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 21) EFE - As the East Berlin parliament voted overwhelmingly Thursday in favor of economic union between the two Germanys, U.S. Secretary of State James Baker met his East German counterpart to discuss the external aspects of unification.

On the eve of the latest round of +Two Plus Four+ talks in East Berlin, the two diplomats discussed issues to be included in the final document to be presented this autumn.

These included the role of the military in Germany, the external borders of a united Germany, and the status of Berlin, a U.S. statement announced.

At the top of the agenda in Friday's talks, however, is likely to be the issue of a united Germany's membership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

Speaking after his meeting with Meckel, Baker reiterated the U.S. position that a sovereign united Germany must decide NATO membership for itself. If it opted for inclusion, the United States would respect the decision, he said.

The Soviet Union, a party to the +Two Plus Four+ talks, has consistently rejected a full military role in NATO for a united Germany.

Meckel repeated his proposal to Baker that the NATO and Warsaw Pact countries meet for a summit on German unification to build confidence between the two alliances.

West Germany currently belongs to NATO and East Germany to the Warsaw Pact.

Baker Thursday also found time to squeeze meetings with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Schevardnadze into his schedule.

Friday's +Two Plus Four+ talks will bring together the foreign ministers of East and West Germany and their counterparts from the four victorious World War II allies - Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union.

MOSCOW, (JUNE 21) EFE - A huge fire was raging through a major oil depot in western Siberia after a storage tank was struck by lightning, the Soviet news agency TASS said Thursday.

Hundreds of firemen were rushed to the Tyumen oilfields, 20 km from the city of Nefteyugansk in the Tieuman region of Siberia.

Ten thousand tonnes of oil were spilled since the lightning strike Wednesday night sparked a huge fire, which quickly spread to three other tanks.

Fires in two of the tanks had been controlled, TASS said.

But strong winds were still threatening to spread the flames to other parts of the complex, where 14 tanks with a 20,000-tonne capacity and ten others holding 10,000 tonnes each are located.

SANTIAGO (JUNE 21) - A deadly smog enveloping the Chilean capital has killed three children and is threatening the lives of 200,000 other people hospital officials said Thursday.

In the last 10 days, three small children have died in Santiago's Paula Jaraquemada hospital after being admitted with smog-related bronchial illness, emergency services chief Patricio Vera told the daily La Tercera.

The high level of contamination has also seriously endangered 200,000 other people suffering from chronic breathing problems with children and old people particularly at risk, according to officials at the Miguel de Servet Center for respiratory disease.

Strict government anti-smog emergency measures include the closing of 80 of the most polluting factories, the banning of 40 per cent of vehicles from the city's streets and the recommendation that schools open one hour and a half earlier and suspend sports classes.

Santiago's inhabitants are living inside a dense cloud of smog caused as much by the city's geographical location as by its contaminating industries.

A high level of particles in the atmosphere is common in the city at this time of year but conditions have been worsened by a lack of rainfall.

The Chilean capital is located in a narrow valley between two mountain ranges, and is surrounded by hills that prevent the wind dispersing particles suspended in the atmosphere above the city.

Levels of contamination reach such a peak during the southern hemisphere's autumn that Santiago, with its five million inhabitants, vies with Mexico City and Sao Paulo for the dishonor of being the world's most polluted city.

OPENING THE CONFERENCE, SPONSORED BY THE U.N. DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM (UNDP), U.N. SECRETARY-GENERAL JAVIER PEREZ DE CUELLAR URGED THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY TO EXTEND "GENEROUS FINANCIAL, MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL SUPPORT TO THE NAMIBIA PEOPLE," WHO GAINED THEIR NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE FROM DECADES OF SOUTH AFRICAN RULE IN MARCH THIS YEAR.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL TOLD THE PARTICIPANTS FROM U.N. MEMBER STATES, SPECIALIZED AGENCIES AND OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS THAT THE NEW STATE OF NAMIBIA "FACES NUMEROUS PROBLEMS AND CHALLENGES CAUSED BY A HISTORY OF EXTREMELY UNEVEN DEVELOPMENT AND THE LEGACY OF COLONIAL OCCUPATION."

HE SAID INDEPENDENCE HAS RAISED THE EXPECTATIONS OF PREVIOUSLY NEGLECTED SECTIONS OF THE POPULATION SUCH AS THE UNEMPLOYED AND UNDER-EMPLOYED. IN ADDITION, THERE IS ALSO THE PRESSURE CAUSED BY SOME 44,000 REPATRIATED NAMIBIANS, SOME OF THEM WOUNDED AND HANDICAPPED, WHO NEEDED TO BE REINTEGRATED INTO THE SYSTEM.

"TO MEET THESE AND OTHER NEEDS," HE SAID, "THE GOVERNMENT AND THE PEOPLE OF NAMIBIA WOULD REQUIRE GENEROUS ASSISTANCE FROM A BROAD SECTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY."

HIS OPENING REMARKS WERE ECHOED BY NAMIBIAN PRESIDENT SAM NUJOMA, WHO IS NOW ON A SPECIAL TRIP TO THE UNITED NATIONS FOR THE CONFERENCE.

NUJOMA TOLD THE AUDIENCE THAT AFTER YEARS OF POLITICAL EXILE, HE RETURNED TO HIS HOME COUNTRY ONLY TO FIND THAT VERY LITTLE HAD CHANGED MATERIALLY FOR THE BLACK AND BROWN COMMUNITIES, DESPITE THE SOPHISTICATED MODERN PHYSICAL INFRASTRUCTURE IN CENTRAL WINDHOEK, THE COUNTRY'S CAPITAL.

IN THE RURAL AREAS, HE SAID, MORE THAN 90 PERCENT OF THE PEOPLE LIVE IN POVERTY AND THERE IS VIRTUALLY NOTHING THAT COULD BE DESCRIBED AS 20TH CENTURY INFRASTRUCTURE.

THERE IS POVERTY, MALNUTRITION, DISEASE, ILLITERACY AND UNEMPLOYMENT AND THE PEOPLE ARE OF THE POOREST ON EARTH, TRULY AMONG THE LEAST DEVELOPED COUNTRIES, HE ADDED.

HE APPEALED TO THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY FOR "AN ADEQUATE LEVEL OF ASSISTANCE" TO ENABLE THE NEWLY INDEPENDENT COUNTRY TO CONDUCT A SUCCESSFUL RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM SO AS TO HELP LAY THE FOUNDATIONS FOR THE COUNTRY'S LONG-TERM, SELF- SUSTAINING DEVELOPMENT.

IN ANSWER TO THE APPEALS BOTH FROM THE U.N. SECRETARY-GENERAL AND THE NAMIBIAN PRESIDENT, A NUMBER OF COUNTRIES PLEDGED A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR THE COUNTRY.

FINNISH REPRESENTATIVE DAVID JOHANNSON SAID HIS COUNTRY HAS DECIDED TO MAKE AVAILABLE THE EQUIVALENT OF 10 MILLION DOLLARS IN 1990 AND, SUBJECT TO ANNUAL PARLIAMENTARY APPROVAL, A TOTAL OF ABOUT 42 MILLION DOLLARS FOR

THE PERIOD OF 1991 TO 1993, ALL ON A GRANT BASIS.

HE SAID THE MONEY WILL BE USED FOR COOPERATION PROGRAMS IN EDUCATION, TRAINING, PRIMARY HEALTH CARE, FORESTRY AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION.

MARTIN HUSLID, REPRESENTATIVE OF NORWAY SAID THAT FOR 1990, THE NORWEGIAN PARLIAMENT HAS APPROPRIATED 50 MILLION KRONER (ABOUT 8 MILLION DOLLARS) TO A COOPERATION PROGRAM IN THE FIELDS OF EDUCATION AND HEALTH.

IN ADDITION, HE SAID, THE GOVERNMENT ALSO DECIDED TO PROVIDE 3 MILLION DOLLARS AND PLEDGED 10 MILLION KRONER (ABOUT 1.5 MILLION DOLLARS) TO THE UNITED NATIONS TRUST FUND FOR NAMIBIA.

HANS OTTO BRAUTIGAM OF WEST GERMANY ALSO SAID HIS COUNTRY WOULD CONTINUE ITS COOPERATION PROGRAMS AT THE SAME LEVEL AS IN THE PAST, WHICH STOOD AT A TOTAL OF 78.5 MILLION GERMAN MARKS BETWEEN 1976 AND 1989.

NIGERIAN PLEDGED 1 MILLION DOLLARS FOR NAMIBIA'S RECONSTRUCTION, REHABILITATION AND DEVELOPMENT WHILE THE UNITED STATES PLEDGED A GRANT OF 10 MILLION DOLLARS TO MEET THE COUNTRY'S HIGH-PRIORITY, BUDGET-SUPPORT NEEDS.

LONDON (JUNE 21) XINHUA - BRITISH MINISTER OF STATE OF THE FOREIGN OFFICE FRANCIS MAUDE WILL VISIT CHINA FOR TALKS ON HONG KONG, A SPOKESMAN SAID TODAY.

MAUDE'S VISIT TO CHINA "WAS BEING DISCUSSED," THE FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID, ADDING THAT FURTHER DELAILS WOULD BE ANNOUNCED LATER.

THE VISIT IS EXPECTED TO TAKE PLACE IN JULY.

ASKED BY XINHUA, THE SPOKESMAN CONFIRMED THAT MAUDE, RESPONSIBLE FOR HONG KONG, WILL DISCUSS THE BRITISH NATIONALITY BILL FOR HONG KONG AND ISSUES CONCERNING SINO-BRITISH RELATIONS.

CHINA HAS CRITICIZED THE BILL, WHICH PASSED A THIRD READING IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ON JUNE 14, FOR VOILATING THE 1984 SINO-BRITISH JOINT DECLARATION ON HONG KONG, UNDER WHICH CHINA WILL RESUME ITS EXERCISE OF RIGHT OF SOVEREIGNTY OVER HONG KONG IN 1997.

MAUDE WILL ALSO DISCUSS WITH CHINESE OFFICIALS ON A MULTI-MILLION POUND PORT AND AIRPORT PROJECT UNDERWAY IN HONG KONG.

BRITAIN, AS A MEMBER OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY (EC), HAS CONSULTED WITH THE EC AND OBTAINED SPECIAL PROVISION WITHIN THE COMMUNITY FOR THIS VISIT BECAUSE OF ITS SPECIAL INTERESTS IN HONG KONG, ACCORDING TO THE SPOKESMAN.

IN RESPONSE TO A QUESTION, THE SPOKESMAN SAID, "THE LIFTING OF THE BAN ON ARMS SALES TO CHINA WAS NOT AT ISSUE."

BAGHDAD (JUNE 21) XINHUA - IRAQ TODAY STRESSED THAT A REPORT ISSUED BY THE AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL EARLIER TODAY CLAIMING THAT HUNDREDS OF KURDISH PEOPLE HAD DISAPPEARED IN IRAQ AFTER RETURNING TO THEIR HOMELAND SHOWED "EVIL INTENTION" OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS ORGANIZATION.

IN A STATEMENT, THE IRAQI CULTURAL AND INFORMATION MINISTRY SAID THESE FALSIFICATIONS COULD NOT DECEIVE ANYONE AND FIND NO RESPONSE FROM GOOD PEOPLE IN THE WORLD WHO UTTERLY REJECT THEM.

IN THE REPORT, THE AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL ALLEGED THAT HUNDREDS OF KURDS HAD DISAPPEARED IN IRAQ AND A NUMBER OF THEM WERE EXECUTED AFTER RETURNING HOME.

IT WAS REPORTED THAT THOUSANDS OF KURDISH PEOPLE WHO HAD LEFT THEIR COUNTRY TO LIVE ABROAD HAVE RETURNED TO THEIR HOMELAND AND HAVE RESUMED NORMAL LIFE AT HOME FOLLOWING AN AMNESTY DECLARED BY THE IRAQI GOVERNMENT.

THE MINISTRY SAID THAT THE KURDS WHO HAVE RETURNED ARE RECEIVING THE REQUIRED HUMAN TREATMENT AND ENJOY HAPPINESS AND A GLORY LIFE.

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF THE ESTIMATED 3.5 MILLION KURDS LIVING IN THE MOUNTAINS OF NORTHEASTERN IRAQ HAVE REPORTEDLY FLED THE REGION TO SEEK REFUGE IN NEIGHBORING IRAN AND TURKEY SINCE AUGUST 1988 FOLLOWING CLASHES BETWEEN IRAQI GOVERNMENT TROOPS AND KURDISH REBELS SEEKING AUTONOMY.

THE KURDS ARE AN ETHNIC MINORITY OF SOME 20 MILLION LIVING IN A WIDE MOUNTAIN ARC IN TURKEY, IRAN AND IRAQ. THEY HAVE BEEN ENGAGED IN INTERMITTENT AUTONOMY-SEEKING REBELLIONS IN THOSE COUNTRIES FOR LONG YEARS.

ISTANBUL (JUNE 21) XINHUA - WHEN AMERICAN DIRECTOR DAVID ZUCKER DIRECTED "THE NAKED GUN", A U.S. MOVIE, HE NEVER THOUGHT THAT THE FILM COULD CAUSE PROBLEMS IN THE RELATIONS BETWEEN TURKEY AND IRAN.

THE MOVIE IS A COMEDY WHICH MOCKS LEADERS SUCH AS SOVIET LEADER MIKHAIL GORBACHEV, THE LATE IRANIAN SUPREME LEADER AYATOLLAH KHOMEINI, LIBYAN LEADER MUAMMAR GADDAFI, PLO CHAIRMAN YASSER ARAFAT AND FORMER UGANDAN PRESIDENT IDI AMIN.

LAST FRIDAY, FIVE MOVIE THEATERS IN ISTANBUL AND ONE IN ANKARA BEGAN SHOWING THE MOVIE.

EARLY THIS WEEK, IRAN ASKED TURKEY THROUGH DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS IN TEHRAN AND ANKARA TO HALT SCREENING OF THE FILM, SAYING IT WAS AN INSULT TO IRAN.

THE TURKISH CHARGE D'AFFAIRES IN TEHRAN WAS SUMMONED TO THE IRANIAN FOREIGN MINISTRY TUESDAY AND INFORMED OF IRAN'S DISCONTENT WITH THE FILM, SAID A SOURCE CLOSE TO THE IRANIAN GENERAL-CONSULATE IN ISTANBUL.

IRAN'S AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY MOHAMMED REZA BAGHERI LODGED A STRONG PROTEST WITH THE TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTRY MONDAY AGAINST THE SCREENING OF THE FILM.

TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTRY SPOKESMAN MURAT SUNGAR SAID WEDNESDAY AT A PRESS CONFERENCE THAT THE MOVIE HAD GONE THROUGH CENSORSHIP, AND THERE IS NOTHING THE FOREIGN MINISTRY CAN DO ABOUT IT.

HOWEVER, AN TURKISH OFFICIAL, WHO REQUESTED ANONYMITY, SAID THAT IRAN'S REQUEST WAS BEING EXAMINED AND THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT WOULD SEE WHETHER IT WAS POSSIBLE TO DELETE THE PARTS LAMPOONING KHOMEINI.

TURKEY DID NOT WANT THE ISSUE TO HARM ITS TIES WITH IRAN, ESPECIALLY AT A TIME WHEN TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER ALI BOZER WILL VISIT IRAN ON JUNE 25, SAID WESTERN DIPLOMATS HERE.

MEANWHILE, MOVIE THEATERS IN ISTANBUL HAVE REPORTEDLY RECEIVED ANONYMOUS PHONE CALLS THREATENING ATTACKS AGAINST THEM IF THEY DID NOT STOP SCREENING THE FILM.

WORKERS AT THE THEATERS SAID THEY EDITED OUT THE PARTS ABOUT KHOMEINI AFTER RECEIVING BOMB THREATS.

TURKEY IS A PREDOMINANTLY MOSLEM COUNTRY, BUT IT HAS SECULAR LAWS. DIFFERENT INTERPRETATIONS OF ISLAM'S ROLE IN PUBLIC LIFE HAVE CAUSED STRAINS BETWEEN NEIGHBORING TURKEY AND IRAN IN THE PAST.

EARLY LAST YEAR, A BAN ON WEARING ISLAMIC-STYLE HEADCARVES AT UNIVERSITIES FORCED BY THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT TOUCHED OFF TENSION IN THE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES.

HOWEVER, BILATERAL RELATIONS BECAME NORMAL WHEN TURKEY LIFTED THE BAN IN DECEMBER LAST YEAR.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) KYODO- PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU TOLD A LEADER OF PERU'S PARLIAMENT ON THURSDAY THAT JAPAN IS PREPARED TO HELP IN ITS ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION IN COOPERATION WITH OTHER MAJOR WESTERN AID DONORS A FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIAL SAID.

"JAPAN IS PREPARED TO OFFER AS MUCH ASSISTANCE AS POSSIBLE WITHIN THE FRAMEWORK OF INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION," KAIFU WAS QUOTED AS TELLING LUIS ALVARADO, SPEAKER OF THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES, THE LOWER HOUSE OF THE PERUVIAN PARLIAMENT.

KAIFU INDICATED IN THEIR 10-MINUTE MEETING THAT THE ASSISTANCE WOULD BE MADE AVAILABLE IN CONJUNCTION WITH PERU'S OWN EFFORTS, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

PERU HAD AN INFLATION RATE OF 2,775 PERCENT LAST YEAR, WHEN ITS GROSS DOMESTIC PRODUCT FELL BY OVER 12 PERCENT.

KAIFU ASKED ALVARDO TO TELL PRESIDENT-ELECT ALBERTO FUJIMORI THAT A WARM WELCOME AWAITS HIM ON HIS EXPECTED VISIT TO JAPAN IN EARLY JULY.

ALVARDO, ON A 10-DAY VISIT UNTIL JUNE 24 AT THE INVITATION OF THE FOREIGN MINISTRY, TOLD KAIFU THAT THE PERUVIAN LOWER HOUSE INTENDS TO BESTOW ON HIM ITS HIGHEST DECORATION FOR HIS SERVICES AS HEAD OF THE JAPAN-PERU PARLIAMENTARIAN FRIENDSHIP ASSOCIATION BEFORE HE BECAME PRIME MINISTER.

ALVARDO, WHO HEADS THE PERUVIAN SIDE OF THE ASSOCIATION, TOLD KAIFU THAT THE PARLIAMENT IS ALSO HOPING TO ESTABLISH A JAPAN-PERU FRIENDSHIP DAY ON APRIL 3, THE DAY WHEN THE FIRST SHIP CARRYING JAPANESE IMMIGRANTS ARRIVED IN 1899.

FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID ALVARDO'S VISIT AND THE PLAN TO DECORATE KAIFU WITH THE HONOR ARE NOT RELATED TO THE JUNE 10 ELECTION OF PERU'S FIRST PRESIDENT OF JAPANESE DESCENT. HIS PARENTS WERE BORN IN JAPAN.

"THE PARLIAMENT IS INDEPENDENT FROM THE PRESIDENCY, AND THE VISIT HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH FUJIMORI'S ELECTION," A FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIAL SAID.

FUJIMORI, WHOSE INAUGURATION IS SCHEDULED FOR JULY 28, IS EXPECTED TO LEAVE PERU ON MONDAY FOR A 12-DAY TOUR OF THE UNITED STATES, JAPAN, AND SOUTH KOREA.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) KYODO - JAPAN'S HOUSEHOLD SPENDING IN APRIL ROSE AN INFLATION-ADJUSTED 3.7 PERCENT FROM A YEAR BEFORE, THE BIGGEST INCREASE SINCE A 4.3 PERCENT RISE IN SEPTEMBER 1988, THE MANAGEMENT AND COORDINATION AGENCY SAID THURSDAY.

THE INCREASE, WHICH BROUGHT AVERAGE SPENDING TO 318,552 YEN PER HOUSEHOLD, CAME AFTER A DECREASE OF 2.4 PERCENT IN MARCH AND A RISE OF 2.4 PERCENT IN FEBRUARY.

AN AGENCY ECONOMIST ATTRIBUTED THE RISE IN APRIL SPENDING TO A 6.7 PERCENT JUMP IN REAL INCOME.

"THE 5.8 PERCENT RISE IN THE WAGES OF THE WIVES OF WAGE EARNING HUSBANDS AND THE INCREASE IN THE PAYMENT INSTALLMENTS OF WELFARE ANNUITIES FROM ONCE EVERY THREE MONTHS TO ONCE EVERY TWO MONTHS MAY HAVE HAD AN EFFECT ON THE SHARP JUMP IN HOUSEHOLD SPENDING," SAID THE ECONOMIST. "ALTHOUGH I CAN'T SAY FOR SURE, THE RISE IN WAGES MAY BE A RESULT OF THE VERY TIGHT LABOR MARKET," SHE SAID.

THE RISE IN SPENDING FROM A YEAR AGO WAS ALSO DUE IN PART TO THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE 3 PERCENT CONSUMPTION TAX IN APRIL LAST YEAR, SHE ADDED.

SPENDING BY WAGE-EARNING FAMILIES IN APRIL, WHICH ROSE 5.6 PERCENT IN REAL TERMS TO 335,490 YEN, WAS THE HIGHEST RISE SINCE A 6.0 PERCENT JUMP IN FEBRUARY OF 1984.

THE INFLATION-ADJUSTED INCOME OF NONSALARIED HOUSEHOLDS -- MAINLY THE SELF-EMPLOYED AND FARMERS -- ROSE 1.0 PERCENT FROM A YEAR EARLIER TO 289,099 YEN.

THE ECONOMIST CITED BRISK SPENDING IN SUCH AREAS AS FURNITURE AND HOUSEHOLD GOODS, CLOTHING, MEDICAL CARE, AND FOOD AS MAJOR FACTORS IN THE SHARP INCREASE IN HOUSEHOLD SPENDING.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) KYODO - JAPAN'S WHOLESALE PRICES IN THE FIRST 10 DAYS OF JUNE WERE UP 0.1 PERCENT FROM MAY 21-31 AND UP 0.8 PERCENT FROM THE SAME PERIOD A YEAR BEFORE, THE BANK OF JAPAN SAID THURSDAY.

THE RISE WAS DUE CHIEFLY TO HIGHER FOOD PRICES, PUSHED UP BY THE JUMP IN LABOR COSTS, CENTRAL BANK OFFICIALS SAID.

THE OFFICIALS WERE QUICK TO POINT OUT, HOWEVER, THAT THE SLOW RISE IN WHOLESALE PRICES FROM MAY 21-31 MIRRORS THE CONTINUING STABILITY IN PRICES.

THE COMPOSITE WHOLESALE PRICE INDEX, WHICH MEASURES DOMESTIC, IMPORT AND EXPORT PRICES, STOOD AT 90.4 AGAINST THE 1985 BASE FIGURE OF 100.

HIGH DISTRIBUTION AND LABOR COSTS PUSHED UP THE PRICES OF PROCESSED FOOD, INCLUDING JAPANESE CONFECTIONERY AND EASY-TO-PREPARE NOODLES, BY 0.6 PERCENT FROM THE MAY 21-31 PERIOD, THEY SAID.

THE PRICES OF LUMBER, WOOD PRODUCTS, AND CHEMICAL GOODS WERE ALSO BOOSTED BY HIGHER COSTS.

PRICES FOR AGRICULTURAL AND FISHERY PRODUCTS, MAINLY EGGS, AND TEXTILES WERE DOWN.

IMPORT PRICES LEVELED OFF FROM THE MAY 21-31 TERM DUE TO THE FACT THAT THE YEN-DOLLAR EXCHANGE RATE, WHICH AVERAGED 152.43 YEN, REMAINED VIRTUALLY UNCHANGED FROM MAY 21-31.

SEOUL (JUNE 21) KYODO - SOUTH KOREA'S GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP) IS NOW EXPECTED TO GROW BY 9 PERCENT IN 1990, THE BANK OF KOREA SAID THURSDAY, RAISING THE FIGURE FROM A PROJECTION OF 7 PERCENT MADE LAST NOVEMBER.

IT ALSO PREDICTED A 10.7 RISE IN CONSUMER PRICES, WHICH WOULD BE THE FIRST DOUBLE-DIGIT INCREASE IN NINE YEARS. THE PROJECTION IS UP SHARPLY FROM THE 6 PERCENT RISE FORECAST IN NOVEMBER.

THE CENTRAL BANK SAID IT REVISED THE GNP FIGURE UPWARDS DUE TO AN EXPECTED RISE IN EXPORTS IN THE SECOND HALF WHICH SHOULD PRODUCE A TRADE SURPLUS FOR THE YEAR OF 400 MILLION DOLLARS.

IT SAID EXPORTS CENTERING ON SHOES, ELECTRONIC GOODS, AND MACHINERY WILL BE BRISK DURING THE REMAINING HALF OF THE YEAR AND THAT IMPORTS OF RAW MATERIALS WILL BE LOWER DUE TO PRICE FALLS.

THE CURRENT ACCOUNT IS NOW FORECAST TO BE IN BALANCE, COMPARED WITH NOVEMBER'S PROJECTION OF A 1.2 BILLION DOLLAR SURPLUS.

SOUTH KOREA IS EXPECTED TO HAVE A FIRST-HALF DEFICIT IN THE CURRENT ACCOUNT TOTALING 1.9 BILLION DOLLARS, CAUSED MAINLY BY A FALL IN EXPORTS AND AN INCREASE IN IMPORTS, AND AN OFFSETTING 1.9 BILLION DOLLAR SURPLUS IN THE SECOND HALF.

BANGI (MALAYSIA) JUNE 21 KYODO - THE MALAYSIAN LABOR MINISTRY THURSDAY ORDERED ABOUT 1,000 WORKERS OF HITACHI CONSUMER PRODUCTS (MALAYSIA) CO., ON STRIKE FOR FOUR DAYS, TO GO BACK TO WORK OR RISK LOSING THEIR JOBS.

BUT THE WORKERS' SPOKESWOMAN, ROZILAWATI RABAII, SAID THEY WILL CONTINUE THE STRIKE. "WE ARE WILLING TO GET SACKED."

THE WORKERS, MOST OF THEM FEMALE, STOPPED WORK IN PROTEST AGAINST THE MANAGEMENT'S REFUSAL TO ALLOW THEM TO JOIN A NATIONAL TRADE UNION. BUT COMPANY OFFICIALS SAID THEY ARE UNABLE TO ALLOW THE WORKERS TO JOIN A NATIONAL UNION BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT HAS TURNED DOWN THE WORKERS' REQUEST.

A SENIOR LABOR OFFICER SPOKE TO THE WORKERS AT THEIR FACTORY IN AN INDUSTRIAL ZONE 20 KILOMETERS SOUTH OF KUALA LUMPUR AND EXPLAINED THAT THEIR STRIKE WAS ILLEGAL.

"GO BACK TO WORK IMMEDIATELY OR THE MANAGEMENT HAS EVERY RIGHT TO SACK YOU " SAID THE OFFICER, WHO DECLINED TO BE NAMED.

IN MALAYSIA, ONLY UNIONIZED WORKERS ARE ALLOWED TO STRIKE BUT THEY MUST GIVE THE GOVERNMENT AND THE MANAGEMENT PRIOR NOTICE.

HITACHI MANAGING DIRECTOR YOSHIKAZU WATANABE DECLINED TO COMMENT WHEN ASKED WHAT HE WILL DO IF THE WORKERS CONTINUE TO STRIKE, SAYING ONLY, "WE'LL WAIT AND SEE."

BY TUESDAY WATANABE HAD ALREADY SACKED EIGHT WORKERS, BELIEVED TO BE THE STRIKE LEADERS.

ALL MALAYSIAN WORKERS CAN FORM TRADE UNIONS AND JOIN NATIONAL FEDERATIONS EXCEPT THOSE IN THE ELECTRONICS INDUSTRY WHO ARE ALLOWED ONLY TO ORGANIZE IN-HOUSE UNIONS.

MALAYSIA IS THE WORLD'S LARGEST EXPORTER OF SEMICONDUCTORS. LAST YEAR, ELECTRONIC COMPONENTS EARNED THE COUNTRY 10.2 BILLION RINGGIT (3.8 BILLION DOLLARS), 15 PERCENT OF THE COUNTRY'S TOTAL EXPORTS. ELECTRONICS ARE AN ESSENTIAL PART OF PRIME MINISTER MAHATHIR MOHAMAD'S INDUSTRIALIZATION DRIVE.

THE HITACHI WORKERS APPLIED TO JOIN THE ELECTRICAL INDUSTRY WORKERS UNION (EIWU) LAST NOVEMBER SO THAT THEY COULD FIGHT FOR BETTER WORKING CONDITIONS.

BUT THE GOVERNMENT REJECTED THEIR APPLICATION, SAYING THEY WORK FOR A COMPANY WHICH PRODUCES ELECTRONIC ITEMS AND NOT ELECTRICAL PRODUCTS.

THE COMPANY, A MALAYSIAN JOINT VENTURE WITH HITACHI LTD. OF JAPAN, PRODUCES COMPONENTS FOR COLOR TELEVISIONS AND VIDEOCASSETTE RECORDERS.

A SENIOR TRADE UNION LEADER, RAJASEKARAN GOVINDASAMY, ALLEGED WEDNESDAY THAT HITACHI HAD TRIED SECRETLY TO INFLUENCE THE GOVERNMENT TO ENSURE THE EMPLOYEES WERE REFUSED PERMISSION TO JOIN A NATIONAL UNION. WATANABE HAS DENIED THE ALLEGATION.

THE STRIKE COMES AT A TIME WHEN MALAYSIA IS FACING THE THREAT OF HAVING ITS SPECIAL TRADE STATUS WITH THE UNITED STATE REVOKED BECAUSE U.S. LABOR GROUPS SAY MALAYSIA VIOLATES LABOR RIGHTS.

MEANWHILE, TERRY COLLINGSWORTH, COUNSEL FOR THE WASHINGTON-BASED INTERNATIONAL LABOR RIGHTS EDUCATION AND RESEARCH FUND, SAID THE FUND WILL REGARD HITACHI PRODUCTS MADE IN MALAYSIA AS A SPECIAL TARGET FOR LOSING THE GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES (GSP) STATUS. UNDER THE SYSTEM, AN INDUSTRIAL COUNTRY IMPOSES PREFERENTIAL TARIFFS ON IMPORTS FROM A DEVELOPING COUNTRY.

THE FUND, A PRIVATELY FINANCED ORGANIZATION, IS AMONG THE FOUR AMERICAN AND INTERNATIONAL LABOR GROUPS WHICH HAVE PETITIONED THE U.S. GOVERNMENT TO REVOKE MALAYSIA'S GSP STATUS OR, ALTERNATELY, REVOKE THE STATUS FOR ELECTRONICS PRODUCTS MADE IN MALAYSIA.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) KYODO - THE GOVERNMENT HAS WORKED OUT A SET OF MEASURES TO SPEED UP CUSTOMS-CLEARANCE PROCEDURES TO BE INCLUDED IN A REPORT FOR

THE FINAL ROUND OF STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) TALKS BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES, A GOVERNMENT SOURCE SAID THURSDAY.

THE NEW PLAN FOR CUSTOMS-CLEARANCE PROCEDURES IS AIMED AT SHORTENING THE TIME NEEDED FOR CUSTOMS SERVICES TO ONLY ONE DAY FROM THE CURRENT TWO TO THREE DAYS, THE SOURCE SAID.

JAPANESE CUSTOMS PROCEDURES HAVE BEEN UNDER ATTACK FROM THE U.S. AS CONSTITUTING A BARRIER TO TRADE.

THE PLANNED PROPOSALS HIGHLIGHT THE ESTABLISHMENT BY SEPTEMBER OF A COMPREHENSIVE MECHANISM FOR BETTER CUSTOMS-CLEARANCE SERVICES IN COLLABORATION WITH CUSTOMS HOUSES, MINISTRIES AND AGENCIES CONCERNED, THE SOURCE SAID.

ANOTHER MAIN FEATURE OF THE PLAN IS TO PROMOTE EFFECTIVE PROCEDURES BY ALLOWING IMPORTERS' APPLICATIONS FOR CUSTOMS CLEARANCE TO BE PROCESSED IN ADVANCE OF THE ACTUAL ARRIVAL OF GOODS.

AN INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF CUSTOMS OFFICERS TO CREATE A 24-HOUR CUSTOMS-CLEARANCE SYSTEM IS ALSO INCLUDED IN THE PROPOSALS.

UNDER THE NEW PROCEDURES, THE GOVERNMENT ALSO SEEKS EFFICIENT INFORMATION EXCHANGES BETWEEN CUSTOMS HOUSES AND MINISTRIES BY SETTING UP COMPUTERIZED LINKS, THE SOURCE SAID.

MANILA (JUNE 21) KYODO - THE PHILIPPINES HAS ASKED FOR A YEN LOAN PACKAGE WORTH 1.9 BILLION DOLLARS FROM JAPAN'S OVERSEAS ECONOMIC COOPERATION FUND (OECF) TO FINANCE 32 PRIORITY PROJECTS, A SENIOR ECONOMIC OFFICIAL SAID THURSDAY.

THE LOAN REQUEST, THE BIGGEST FOREIGN LOAN SOUGHT BY MANILA FROM A SINGLE SOURCE, WILL FINANCE PROJECTS INCLUDING FLOOD CONTROL, RURAL ELECTRIFICATION, IRRIGATION, AND TRANSPORTATION.

LAST YEAR, THE OECF EXTENDED A LOAN PACKAGE WORTH 1 BILLION DOLLARS TO THE COUNTRY WHICH WAS USED ON 12 PROJECTS.

DISCUSSIONS FOR THE NEXT YEN LOAN PACKAGE, THE 17TH TO BE EXTENDED BY THE OECF, WERE HELD EARLIER THIS MONTH.

THE OFFICIAL, WHO REQUESTED ANONYMITY, SAID THAT DURING FORMAL TALKS EXPECTED LATER THIS YEAR, THE PHILIPPINES WILL ASK FOR A LOWER INTEREST RATE THAN THE 2.7 PERCENT FOR THE LAST YEN LOAN PACKAGE.

BUT AN OECF SOURCE SAID THAT ALTHOUGH THE FUND GIVES AN INTEREST RATE AS LOW AS 1.75 PERCENT FOR A 30-YEAR LOAN, THIS IS USUALLY EXTENDED TO THE POOREST COUNTRIES LIKE BANGLADESH.

IN ADDITION TO THE ANNUAL YEN LOAN PACKAGE, THE OECF IS ALSO EXPECTED TO PROVIDE ABOUT 276 MILLION DOLLARS OF THE PHILIPPINES' 358 MILLION DOLLAR SHARE OF THE 2 BILLION DOLLAR ASEAN-JAPAN DEVELOPMENT FUND, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

IF REALIZED, THIS WILL BRING TO A TOTAL OF 2.1 BILLION DOLLARS THE OECF'S CONCESSIONARY LOANS TO THE PHILIPPINES.

IN 1989, JAPAN WAS THE BIGGEST SOURCE OF OFFICIAL DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE (ODA) FOR THE PHILIPPINES WITH 1.6 BILLION DOLLARS. A FURTHER 735 MILLION DOLLARS CAME FROM THE WORLD BANK, AND 402 MILLION DOLLARS FROM THE ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK.

THE 3 BILLION DOLLAR PROJECT IS INTENDED TO DEVELOP A GAS FIELD ABOUT 50 KILOMETERS OFF PARIA PENINSULA AND TO EXPORT ABOUT 4.4 MILLION TONS OF LIQUEFIED NATURAL GAS (LNG) ANNUALLY TO THE U.S., WHERE DEMAND FOR LNG HAS BEEN INCREASING AMID ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERNS.

ANNUAL SALES ARE TARGETED AT ABOUT 1 BILLION DOLLARS. THE PROJECT, THE FIRST OPEN TO FOREIGN COMPANIES SINCE VENEZUELA NATIONALIZED THE ENERGY INDUSTY IN 1976, IS EXPECTED TO BRING HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS TO THE COUNTRY AND HELP REDUCE ITS FOREIGN DEBT.

BEIJING (JUNE 21) KYODO - NEGOTIATIONS ARE CURRENTLY UNDER WAY BETWEEN

CHINA AND SOUTH KOREA ON THE OPENING OF TRADE OFFICES IN EACH OTHER'S COUNTRY, A CHINESE GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN SAID THURSDAY.

YUAN MU, SPOKESMAN FOR THE STATE COUNCIL (CABINET), HOWEVER, DID NOT SPECIFY A DATE FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF THE TRADE MISSIONS, SAYING MORE CONSULTATIONS ARE NEEDED FOR IT TO BE REALIZED.

THE CHINA COUNCIL FOR THE PROMOTION OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE IS CONSULTING WITH KOREAN AUTHORITIES ON THE SETTING UP OF TRADE MISSIONS IN BOTH COUNTRIES, YUAN SAID IN AN INTERVIEW WITH KYODO NEWS SERVICE.

HE SAID ESTABLISHMENT OF NONGOVERNMENT-LEVEL ORGANIZATIONS WOULD BE USEFUL IN DEVELOPING ECONOMIC RELATIONS BETWEEN CHINA AND SOUTH KOREA, WHICH HAVE NO DIPLOMATIC TIES.

COMMENTING ON ECONOMIC SANCTIONS IMPOSED ON CHINA BY WESTERN NATIONS FOLLOWING THE MILITARY CRACKDOWN ON THE PRO-DEMOCRACY MOVEMENT LAST YEAR, YUAN SAID THE CHANCES OF A COMPLETE LIFTING OF SANCTIONS AT NEXT MONTH'S SUMMIT OF SEVEN MAJOR INDUSTRIAL NATIONS IN HOUSTON ARE SLIM.

THE MILITARY SUPPRESSION OF FREEDOM-SEEKING DEMONSTRATORS IN TIANANMEN SQUARE ON JUNE 3-4, 1989 PROVOKED TRADE AND ECONOMIC AID SANCTIONS AGAINST CHINA BY WESTERN NATIONS, INCLUDING JAPAN.

ON RELATIONS WITH THE SOVIETS, YUAN SAID AGREEMENT WAS REACHED ON A REDUCTION IN BORDER FORCES, AS WELL AS POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC COOPERATION, DURING PREMIER LI PENG'S MOSCOW VISIT LAST APRIL.

ASKED ABOUT TALKS BETWEEN SOUTH KOREAN PRESIDENT ROH TAE WOO AND SOVIET PRESIDENT MIKHAIL GORBACHEV IN SAN FRANCISCO IN EARLY JUNE, YUAN SAID IT IS A MATTER FOR SOUTH KOREA AND THE SOVIET UNION.

CHINA WANTS TO SEE STABILITY AND A PEACEFUL REUNIFICATION OF THE KOREAN PENINSULA, BUT IS NOT CONSIDERING RAISING ITS TIES WITH SOUTH KOREA TO GOVERNMENT LEVEL AS CALLED FOR BY SEOUL, THE SPOKESMAN SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) KYODO - A GOVERNMENT-FUNDED CONSORTIUM SAID THURSDAY IT HAS DEVELOPED A MICROCHIP THAT CAN REDUCE A COLOR MOVIE VIDEOPHONE, NOW AS LARGE AS A RESTAURANT REFRIGERATOR, TO THE SIZE OF A PORTABLE TELEVISION SET.

THE ULTRA LARGE-SCALE INTEGRATION (LSI) CHIP, CLAIMED TO BE THE FIRST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD, WILL NOT ONLY ENABLE A SIZE CUT TO ABOUT ONE-50TH BUT ALSO ALLOW THE PRICE OF A VIDEOPHONE TO BE SLASHED FROM SEVERAL MILLION YEN TO AROUND HALF A MILLION YEN, SAID THE TOKYO-BASED CONSORTIUM, GRAPHICS COMMUNICATIONS TECHNOLOGIES (GCT).

GCT IS A CONSORTIUM OF 10 JAPANESE ELECTRONICS COMPANIES. ITS OFFICIALS SAID 15 OF THE NEW CHIPS HAVE THE SAME PERFORMANCE CAPABILITY AS ABOUT 800 CONVENTIONAL LSI CHIPS, PERMITTING THE SHARP REDUCTION IN SIZE AND PRICE.

THE NEW LSI TECHNOLOGY, BASED ON AN INTERNATIONALLY AGREED FORMAT, WILL BE LICENSED TO CONSUMER ELECTRONICS AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS EQUIPMENT FIRMS FROM NEXT APRIL FOR COMMERCIAL APPLICATION STARTING AROUND SUMMER, THE OFFICIALS SAID. MASS PRODUCTION WILL ALLOW A FURTHER PRICE CUT, THEY ADDED.

GCT WAS SET UP IN 1987 BY HITACHI LTD., KYOCERA CORP., AND EIGHT OTHER COMPANIES WITH THE FINANCIAL HELP OF A RESEARCH INSTITUTE AFFILIATED WITH THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

TOKYO (JUNE 21) KYODO - MONETARY UNION BETWEEN TWO GERMANYS COULD CAUSE UNREST IN EAST GERMANY BY CREATING LARGE NUMBERS OF JOBLESS, A REPORT PUBLISHED THURSDAY BY A LONG-TERM CREDIT BANK SAID.

THE REPORT BY THE INDUSTRIAL BANK OF JAPAN (IBJ) SAID THE OUTLOOK FOR GROWTH IN A UNIFIED GERMANY IS BRIGHT. BUT IT SAID THERE IS STILL A POSSIBILITY MORE THAN HALF OF ALL EAST GERMAN COMPANIES MAY GO BANKRUPT AFTER UNIFICATION.

POINTING TO LOWER PRODUCTIVITY IN EAST GERMAN CORPORATIONS COMPARED WITH WEST GERMANY, THE REPORT PREDICTED THE NUMBER OF UNEMPLOYED IN EAST GERMANY WOULD PEAK AT SOME 1.7 MILLION IN 1991 BEFORE FALLING TO SLIGHTLY LESS THAN ONE MILLION IN 1995.

THE REPORT ALSO NOTED THAT TAX INCREASES WOULD HAVE TO BE CONSIDERED BY WEST GERMANY TO HOLD DOWN AN ACCELERATION IN THE GROWTH OF A FISCAL DEFICIT CAUSED BY A POSSIBLE VARIETY OF FINANCIAL AID PACKAGES TO EAST GERMANY IN AN ATTEMPT TO BAIL OUT THE EXPECTED INCREASE IN JOBLESS PEOPLE.

THE REPORT ALSO CITED CONCERN THAT THE RATIO OF FISCAL DEFICIT TO THE WEST GERMAN GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP) COULD EXPAND TO NEAR 3 PERCENT FROM THE PRESENT 1.3 PERCENT UNLESS APPROPRIATE ACTION IS TAKEN, THOUGH IT WOULD MEAN A GREATER FISCAL BURDEN ON THE WEST GERMAN GOVERNMENT.

IBJ ECONOMISTS, MEANWHILE, PREDICTED A UNITED GERMAN ECONOMY WOULD GROW AT AN INFLATION-ADJUSTED ANNUAL RATE OF 3.9 PERCENT ON AVERAGE OVER THE NEXT FIVE YEARS THROUGH 1995, RISING BY 0.9 PERCENTAGE POINT FROM THE WEST GERMAN ECONOMIC GROWTH RATE ESTIMATED IN THE FIVE YEARS BETWEEN 1985 AND 1990.

THE ECONOMISTS ALSO FORECAST THE PLANNED UNIFICATION IS EXPECTED TO BOOST WEST GERMAN ECONOMIC GROWTH BY 0.8 POINT TO AN ANNUALIZED RATE OF 3.8 PERCENT IN REAL TERMS THIS YEAR.

The CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE released new estimates on the 1990 Federal budget deficit, which say the figure could be as high as $195 billion, up $36 billion from earlier estimates. The CBO explained that the increase was a result of lower-than-expected tax collections.

FROM THE BULLS:

"I think conditions are still favorable for a higher stock market," says MICHAEL METZ, chief market strategist at OPPENHEIMER, who sees the Dow moving well over 3000 early in summer. "Unfortunately ... that will be the goodies for the balance of the year. After that I think the market does very little." Metz says the market has a habit of doing what it's going to do in a very compressed period of time. 1 "If you're not there then, you're not going to make any money." Metz says the P/E's of cyclical stocks suggest the market has already discounted the possibility of a recession and he is largely unconcerned about the impact of lower corporate profits on stocks. "Believe it or not, the stock market usually goes up in years when corporate profits go down." (CNN "Business Morning" 6/21)

FROM THE BEARS:

MICHAEL MURPHY, editor of the "Overpriced Stock Survey" newsletter, says the stock market is just about the last place to be right now. "Look at the Dow Jones industrials' corporate profits. There already have been four straight quarters of down sequential earnings. There is almost no doubt the June quarter will be down, and almost certainly the September quarter will be worse. So the only way for the market to move up is on much lower interest rates. This is a very high risk time to own stocks." Mr. Murphy does not believe that interest rates will come down until something serious is done about the budget deficit and the budget talks aren't "making any progress." He says the fair value for the market "is 2566 based on historical price-earnings ratios, dividend yields and price-to-book value ratios." ("USA Today", 6/21)

STOCK MARKET:

"We really have a market that has no sustaining power up and no sustaining power down, as indicated by the lack of volume in either direction," says JACK SOLOMON, a technical analyst at BEAR, STEARNS. (WSJ, 6/21)

"In a market that is up over 300 points in [five weeks], you would have expected a lot of excitement," says GENE JAY SEAGLE, director of technical analysis at GRUNTAL & CO. "In fact, there is a lot of pessimism." ("Investor's Daily", 6/21)

JOHN McGINLEY, editor of "Technical Trends", sees an abrupt ending to this rally. "My guess is after the institutions have spent their money, hopefully to window dress, the market will probably have a pullback. It typically does during the summer." (CNBC "Business View", 6/20)

TUCKER ANTHONY market analyst HARRY LAUBSCHER says that Wednesday's stalemate is foreshadowing of short-term problems to come. "At the present time the market is still reacting to the overbought condition. It does look as if we might have a little more work to do on the down side." He sees support between 2800 and 2840, and thinks that the market will see a summer rally after two to three weeks of backing and filling. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/20)

"Basically the programs came in to cover short positions" on Wednesday, says TOM GALLAGHER of OPPENHEIMER & CO., referring to buying by investors who had sold stocks short thinking prices would go still lower. When they didn't fall further, those players then began to buy, thinking that prices were at their low point for the present. "Most people expected the market to get hit worse than it did. It went down, but didn't fail badly." Gallagher adds that the advance might extend into today's trading, taking the Dow up perhaps 5 or 10 points. "But the market is in a correction phase. I think the bigger move will be to the downside here." (UPI, 6/20)

MARION BASS SECURITIES' senior vice president and director of investment policy RICKY HARRINGTON says that in July and August, the market could go as high as 3100, but after that run, he sees some problems for stocks. "Technically, [this has been] a relatively narrowly based rally. That's not a good situation for the longer- term." ("Investor's Daily", 6/21)

"It looked like the Dow was going to languish until the last few minutes [yesterday]," says JOSEPHTHAL analyst TRUDE LATIMER. "But it was a rather dull session. There's still uncertainty over second- quarter earnings, and less buying interest than people expected." ("USA Today", 6/21)

"The market is getting sloppy and choppy," according to SALOMON BROTHERS analyst KENNETH SPENCE. "Volume is light and breadth weak." Spence believes the market is being driven by profit taking, and some buying in consumer non-cyclicals. He says the "intermediate trend is still up," and that a couple days of better breadth and volume would turn him bullish. ("Investor's Daily", 6/21)

MAX ANSBACHER, options head at BEAR, STEARNS, says his "Ansbacher index" measures sentiment among options traders. "What it's showing us now is that the options traders are basically neutral in sentiment are some economic developments that will turn the market one way or the other." Six weeks ago when the Dow was at 2700, Ansbacher says his index was giving him a very bullish reading. (FNN "World Business Update", 6/21)

STOCK TIPS:

The worst industry groups to be in right now are industries "where capacity is coming on line in the face of an economic slowdown," says MICHAEL MURPHY, editor of the "Overpriced Stock Survey" newsletter. "The movie, casino and airline industries all fit that story." The worst prospects in those groups are: "In movies, PARAMOUNT COMMUNICATIONS; in airlines, USAIR; and in casinos, GOLDEN NUGGET." ("USA Today", 6/21)

MARRIOTT CORP. has been hurt by the glut in hotel rooms across the country but many analysts say the company seems to be dealing with its problems. SARAH SCHECKLER of DUFF & PHELPS INC. says that one positive step Marriott is taking is to buy existing hotels and renovate them rather than building new ones. "It's cheaper to buy than to build," explains Scheckler, "and it doesn't add to the oversupply problem in the whole industry." Other analysts praise Marriott for its decision to scale back its restaurant operations. Forced to go against "first string" establishments such as McDonald's and Pizza Hut, Marriott's Howard Johnson's and Big Boy chains could not compete. As STEVEN A. ROCKWELL of ALEX. BROWN & SONS INC. puts it, "Marriott has never really maximized the potential in the restaurant area. Their heart isn't in it." ("Investor's Daily", 6/21)

"Sales have improved and profitability has improved as well," says MONROE GREENSTEIN, a retail analyst for BEAR STEARNS, regarding CAMPEAU's success after filing chapter 11. "Basically, the stores are doing better since bankruptcy." (CNBC "Business View", 6/20)

Some analysts say MOTOROLA's plan for a global communications system, to be unveiled next week, may cause the company some problems. Motorola "has some rather grandiose notions about what kind of communications company it will be in the 21st century," says RICHARD WHITTINGTON of KIDDER, PEABODY & CO. Whittington believes that one of the biggest problems to be faced is getting the requisite satellites launched. "There's a screaming shortage of vehicles now," he explains. However, RAJIV CHAUDRI of GOLDMAN SACHS & CO. praised the plan, saying, "It has significant potential down the road in terms of revenue and earnings." ("Investor's Daily", 6/21)

H&R BLOCK "is the kind of stock where the more you know about it, the more you like it," says JUDITH SCOTT of ROBERT W. BAIRD & CO. She says the stock shares are still underappreciated. The company had three good pieces of news on Wednesday. It posted better-than- expected fourth-quarter earnings, raised its quarterly dividend to 39 cents from 32 cents and announced plans to buy back up to 1.5 million shares. ("USA Today", 6/21)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (JUNE 21) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"The Fed's main concern ... is to defend the dollar," even at the expense of the U.S. economy, says HARRY LAUBSCHER, a market analyst for TUCKER ANTHONY. "Unless they do that, we're not going to get foreigners to buy our bonds." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/20)

The Fed's latest "beige book" says the economy is growing slowly with little change in underlying inflation. YAMAICHI's TOM CALLAHAN says, "Maybe this will dampen the enthusiasm for the Fed to move [the Fed funds rate down] to 8%." (Reuters, 6/20)

"Recent developments in the economy and real estate markets indicate that the credit demands from the private sector of the economy could decline sharply. This, along with attempts by the federal government to reduce the budget deficit through spending cuts and revenue increases, could drive short-term rates sharply lower, possibly even under 7%," says DR. ROBERT BARBERA, chief economist at SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON in a full page advertisement published in "The New York Times" today. (NYT, 6/21)

"Looking out 60 to 90 days there's every probability that the Fed will ease and that therefore rates will come down," says JAY GERKEN of SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. But he says that this likelihood will not translate into a boost for the market. "Until there is some sign one way or the other, I'd expect the Dow to be in some kind of a holding pattern. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/20)

"Credit conditions are deteriorating nationally, especially in the Northeast," warns FREDA JOHNSON, a consultant who previously headed the municipal-finance department at MOODY'S INVESTORS SERVICE INC. "I expect more municipal downgrades this year than upgrades from all the major rating agencies." (WSJ, 6/21)

"The [bond] market right now has a small indigestion problem," says CHARLES LIEBERMAN, director of financial markets research at MANUFACTURERS HANOVER SECURITIES. "Everyone was getting very excited about the fact that the Fed seemed like it was going to have to ease monetary policy, and the market was beginning to price that into securities." Now that the Fed has made it clear they do not intend to ease policy, says Lieberman, the market has turned soft. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/20)

"There's not enough retail participation in this [bond] market," says 1 JOEL KAZIS, a trading manager at SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM & CO. "I don't know where all this supply is going." (WSJ, 6/21)

THE ECONOMY:

"The tone of district reports suggests continued slow growth in the economy with little change in the underlying inflation rate," says a summary of the FEDERAL RESERVE's "beige" or "tan" book report on the economy in each of the twelve districts. (NYT, 6/21)

Commenting on the release of the beige book by the FEDERAL RESERVE, SUNG WON SOHN, chief economist of the NORWEST CORPORATION in Minneapolis, says, "What they're saying is that economic conditions are weakening and the beige book is confirming that. The upshot is that economic weakness is accumulating and inflation is becoming less of a concern." (NYT, 6/21)

"I think the economy is at risk of being a lot weaker than we were hoping " says CHARLES LIEBERMAN, director of financial markets research at MANUFACTURERS HANOVER SECURITIES. Were he a member of the Fed board, Lieberman says, "I would be in favor of a small amount of ease," of about a quarter of a point. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/20)

JAMES FRALICK of MORGAN STANLEY believes "the economy is certainly doing better than the Street expected a couple of weeks ago." While the consumer sector was weak, the overall strength means that the Fed will not ease "at this particular point in time," according to Fralick. He says that the Fed is achieving their goal of slow growth, and therefore will not adjust policy. (FNN "Marketwrap", 6/20)

IN WASHINGTON:

House Democrats unveiled a proposal yesterday that would take $100 million out of the defense budget and use the funds to provide retraining and other assistance to the hundreds of thousands of workers expected to be displaced by major defense budget cuts. REP. NICHOLAS MAVROULES (D. - Mass.), one of the bill's sponsors, declares that putting in place a program to help the nation convert to a peacetime economy "is probably the most important post-Cold War legislation we will pass this year." ("The Washington Post", 6/21)

"Today we succeeded in starting serious negotiations," with the $51 billion dollar reduction package offered by White House budget director

RICHARD DARMAN, says REP. RICHARD GEPHARDT (D. - Mo.), but he readily admits that "there are concerns by Democrats and maybe even Republicans about this." Gephardt may have been understating the opposition, for SEN. JAMES SASSER (D. - Tenn.) responded to the plan by saying, "It stinks," and SEN. LLOYD BENTSEN (D. - Tex.) called the proposal "absolutely unacceptable," saying, "It would be very disruptive." ("Investor's Daily" 6/21)

PHILADELPHIA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The Marriott Business Travel Institute (MBTI) today announced it will be offering a special 28-page guidebook titled "Business Travelers: The Choice Is Yours" at the beginning of July.

Featuring detailed explanations and helpful hints about hotels, airlines and car rental companies, the guide will seek to educate the business traveler about these often confusing alternatives.

A national survey commissioned by MBTI and funded by American Express of more than 200 business travelers and more than 70 corporate travel managers from Fortune 500 companies indicated that many employees are unaware of the services provided to business travelers and are unfamiliar with their companies' travel policies.

MBTI's survey found that employees and corporate travel managers often have different perceptions of business travel. Part of this problem stems from the failure of many companies to properly communicate their travel policies to employees.

"Factual and easy to understand, 'Travel Choices' will help business travelers and corporate travel managers make informed travel decisions and improve their ability to match the type of lodging or transportation with the purpose of the trip," according to Brian Tierney, executive director of MBTI.

In light of these survey findings, the guide will be designed to help business travelers become more productive and efficient on the road. "Until now, about the only way to learn the tricks of the seasoned business traveler was to become one. Companies often send their employees out on business without giving them the knowledge they need to make the trip successful," said Tierney. "Business travelers need to be educated about travel, not just about business."

For a copy of "Business Travelers: The Choice Is Yours," send $2.25 to "Travel Choices," P.O. Box 40114-5114, Philadelphia, Pa., 19106-5114, or call toll-free 800-MBTI-876 (Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.-8 p.m. EDT.) Checks should be made payable to the Marriott Business Travel Institute.

STAMFORD, CONN. (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - GTE Corp. (NYSE: GTE) announced today that it has awarded grants totaling nearly $200,000 to 50 colleges and universities throughout the United States to sponsor public lectures on technology and ethics in today's society.

The awards, given under the GTE Foundation Lectureship Program in science, technology and human values, will provide each school with up to $4,000 for lectures during the 1990-91 academic year. The theme for this year is "Technology and Ethics."

"The lectures will focus on society's efforts to apply science and technology in solving critical human-needs problems," said Edward C. MacEwen, vice president-corporate communications for GTE. "As a company with technology-based businesses, GTE is concerned with the efforts to meet human needs in an increasingly complex world. In addition, the program fosters better communication between the business and academic communities."

The GTE Lectureship program has a twofold purpose: to enrich the schools' curricula by bringing prominent speakers into contact with students and faculty members and promoting ties between the various disciplines on campus; and, to expand the educational impact of the sponsoring schools in their nearby communities.

The 50 participating four-year and two-year schools were chosen by a panel of college educators from 250 proposals submitted. Selection was based on the quality and description of the proposed lectures as they related to the theme of the series, timeliness and significance of the topics and the qualifications of the recommended speakers. The Lectureship grants were given on a geographical basis so that all regions of the United States would be represented.

GTE's subsidiaries operate in 46 states and 41 countries, with combined revenues and sales of $17.4 billion and net income of $1.4 billion in 1989. GTE is a leader in its three core businesses -- telecommunications lighting and precision materials -- providing products and services worldwide.

KIRKLAND, WA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Costco Wholesale Corp. (NASDAQ-NMS: COST) today reported record sales and earnings for the third quarter (12 weeks) and first 36 weeks of fiscal 1990, both ended May 13, 1990.

Net sales for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 increased 44 percent to $931.5 million, from $645.9 million during the third quarter of fiscal 1989. Comparable warehouse sales increased 22 percent over the prior year's third quarter.

Net income during the third quarter of fiscal 1990 increased 40 percent to $5.4 million, or $.15 per share, from $3.9 million, or $.15 per share, during the third quarter of fiscal 1989. The fiscal 1990 third quarter results are after taking a $6 million pretax write-off in the quarter to cover the anticipated costs of closing four of the company's 12 Florida warehouse locations. On an after-tax basis this non-recurring charge reduced fiscal 1990 third quarter net income by $3.7 million, or 10 cents per share.

For the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1990, net sales increased 43 percent to $2.71 billion, from $1.90 billion during the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1989. Comparable warehouse sales during this period increased 20 percent over the prior year's first 36 weeks.

Net income for the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1990 increased 81 percent to $27.3 million, or $0.79 per share ($0.78 per share on a fully-diluted basis), from $15 million, or 58 cents per share ($0.57 on a fully-diluted basis), during the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1989.

Comparable sales have continued to increase at strong rates, with an increase of 20 percent being recorded during the first five weeks of the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990.

In a May 23 press release, the company announced that, on June 16, 1990, it would close its three west Florida locations -- Tampa, Clearwater and Palm Harbor -- and also would close its Lauderhill, Fla., warehouse during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 in conjunction with the planned opening during the fourth quarter of a new warehouse in nearby Delray Beach, Fla.

Costco ended its 1989 fiscal year on Sept. 3, 1989, with 56 warehouses in operation. Five new warehouses were opened during this year's first quarter; and one warehouse was opened during the second quarter. Three additional warehouses were opened during the third quarter -- in Laguna Niguel anRedding, Calif.; and Edmonton, Alberta, Canada -- bringing to 62 the number of warehouses now in operation.

Expansion plans for fiscal 1991, which begins Sept. 3, include the opening of 10-14 additional warehouse locations, including the company's initial expansion into the Northeast United States. The company's first Northeast opening is planned for the Fall of 1990 -- in West Springfield, Mass. -- during the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

#90172p8319 06/21/1990 ~PR Newswire

WILMINGTON, DE (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Du Pont (NYSE: DD) today reported funds have been authorized for design of worldscale production facilities for its line of non-ozone-depleting alternatives to fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs).

The plants are planned for Corpus Christi, Texas, Louisville, Ky., Dordrecht, Netherlands, and Chiba, Japan. They would become operational between 1992 and 1995. Investment was not disclosed.

The facilities would be capable of producing more than 140 million pounds annually and could supply most worldwide refrigeration needs through the end of the century. They would produce hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs) 134a, 152a and 125, for automobile air conditioners, appliances and commercial refrigeration.

Including $240 million invested through 1990 and projected costs over the next 10 years, Du Pont's overall expenditures to commercialize its line of CFC alternatives could total more than $1 billion in research and development and capital projects.

The Corpus Christi site would produce about 70 million pounds per year of HFC-134a, the leading candidate to replace CFC-12 in such applications as home refrigerators and auto air conditioning, in addition to uses in products such as asthma inhaler sprays.

The site also would produce 20 million pounds of HFC-125, the primary replacement for refrigerant-502 in low-temperature commercial refrigeration uses, such as supermarket display cases and for Halon 1301 fire extinguishant applications.

Plans call for expansion of HFC-152a capacity by 20 million pounds at the existing Louisville site and by constructing a new facility at a location to be determined. HFC-152a would be used in blends targeted for refrigeration and air conditioning applications.

Commercial facilities at Chiba and Dordrecht would have combined annual capacity of about 30 million pounds of HFC-134a. The facilities would give Du Pont four alternatives sites outside the United States.

Du Pont's plans to expand hydrochlorofluorocarbon (HCFC) alternatives production capacity at sites in the U.S., Canada, Europe and Japan are currently on hold pending the outcome of proposed regulations in the U.S. Congress. The HCFCs have, on average, 95 percent less ozone depletion potential than CFCs. Any regulations requiring the early phaseout of HCFCs would discourage further investment.

SDRC's I-DEAS(TM) software will be used by Lockheed's Space Systems Division for the design of satellite systems. In addition, Lockheed's Computer Integrated Engineering and Manufacturing (CIEM) group selected I-DEAS software as an element of its company-wide mechanical design automation system.

"We are extremely pleased that Lockheed selected I-DEAS software for its mechanical design automation solution," said Ronald J. Friedsam, SDRC chairman and chief executive officer. LOS ANGELES (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of National Mercantile Bancorp (NASDAQ: MBLA), the holding company for Mercantile National Bank, announced today that as a result of reassessing its current and long-term strategies it will make a pretax charge to earnings of approximately $3.1 million in the second quarter. This action will result in a net aftertax loss of approximately $1 million for the second quarter and $350,000 for the six months ending June 30, 1990.

Recently named President William T. Hughes attributed the charges principally to severance costs relating to the resignation in April of the former president; to a full charge against the balance due on one previously disclosed loan now determined to be uncollectible; and to a general increase in the loan loss reserve.

"We have made a thorough review of our total loan portfolio, which has grown 35 percent or approximately $70 million in the past nine months," Hughes said. "The additional reserve reflects a conservative approach, establishing reserves at historic levels in relation to the loan portfolio and commensurate with the actual and projected loan growth in 1990."

In a separate action, the board declared a cash dividend of 10 cents per share, payable on or about July 30, 1990 to shareholders of record July 18 1990. This represents the fifth consecutive year of dividend payments.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - First Bank System, Inc. (NYSE: FBS), today announced that it has signed a termination agreement with Banks of Iowa, Inc. (NASDAQ: BIOW), ending their 1981 asset purchase agreement.

The 1981 agreement provided for a minimum purchase price of 1-1/2 times shareholders equity at the end of the month preceding the purchase. The agreement, which was to run for 15 years, was contingent upon the passage of interstate banking legislation allowing ownership of Iowa banks by FBS and regulatory approval. Enabling legislation passed in 1989 becomes effective on Jan. 1, 1991.

Under terms of the termination agreement, Banks of Iowa will repurchase 550,197 shares of Class B nonvoting stock held by FBS for $69 per share, which results in a gain on the sale of approximately $9,500,000. The gain will not be reflected in net income since it is related to First Bank System's restructuring program. And therefore, the gain will be credited to the restructuring reserve previously established.

"We believe that terminating the agreement and selling our nonvoting stock back to Banks of Iowa is in the best interests of both our companies and shareholders," explained John F. Grundhofer, FBS chairman, president and CEO.

NEW ORLEANS (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Texaco (NYSE: TX) has successfully drilled and completed the first documented horizontal well in the Gulf of Mexico at a location about 200 miles southwest of New Orleans, it was announced today by William F. Wallace, vice president of Texaco U.S.A.'s Eastern exploration and producing region.

The well, named OCS-G-0974 No. B-12, was drilled in 180 feet of water from the "B" platform in the OCS East Cameron Block 265 Field to develop shallow gas reserves from an unconsolidated sandstone formation at a depth of 1,700 feet. The platform is actually located on the northern edge of East Cameron Block 278, immediately south of Block 265. Texaco's horizontal development well covered a horizontal length of 670 feet within a vertical variation of 15 feet.

The well was tested and flowed at a daily rate of 11 million cubic feet of gas. Drilling was accomplished in 20 days from spud to completion at a significant cost savings when compared to a conventional high angle well. The company plans to continue testing and place the well on production once a compressor is installed.

"By drilling horizontally we may be able to recover more gas from the producing field than would be possible using conventional drilling technology, and we can do this at a significant cost savings compared to a high angle well," said Wallace.

A second horizontal well has been spudded from this platform. Texaco plans to utilize this technology to develop other shallow horizons in the Gulf of Mexico.

Texaco operates the East Cameron Block 265 Field with a 50 percent interest and Amoco Production Company owns the other 50 percent.

WYOMISSING, PA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - VF Corporation (NYSE: VFC) today announced that consolidated earnings per share for the second quarter compared to the prior year would be down approximately 47 percent.

According to L.R. Pugh, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, the principal reason is a continuing shortfall in jeans orders resulting from weak consumer demand for the category, compounded by a generally cautious attitude at retail regarding inventory levels. In addition, the trend to at-once orders and shipments occurring late in the season continue to impact overall levels of orders on hand. This combination not only affected sales in the second quarter, it also affected costs as the company reduced production days in an effort to control inventory levels.

In this regard, second-quarter results will also include a charge related to the cost of closing several jeans production facilities. These closings result from increased production efficiencies, expanded offshore production by Wrangler and a planned change to more basic and basic fashion products at Lee.

The company also reported that Jantzen was continuing to have sales shortfalls in both their spring and summer product lines, which will reduce Jantzen's income in the second quarter and for the year.

Second-quarter earnings also include a special charge for potential liabilities related to the previous sale of the Wrangler Canada operation.

Since the buyer of that operation may not continue to sublease the former Wrangler facility, under the terms of the sale agreement the company may be liable for certain employee and lease obligations.

Pugh pointed out that other VF companies are performing well in spite of a weakened demand for apparel by the consumer. He said, "All other VF divisions are doing better than last year, and we believe that this performance will continue throughout the year."

Pugh also said, "As previously stated, we remain confident that operating performance at Lee in the third and fourth quarters will be improved. While the outlook for the corporation's results for the full year remains cloudy due to the uncertainty of consumer demand for jeans during the back-to- school selling period, we currently expect results will be flat to down 10 percent from 1989."

LAPEER, MI (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Durakon Industries, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: DRKN) President David Laro announced today that Durakon has entered into an agreement with Custom Truck of California, Inc., to distribute Durakon's Duraliner and other products in eleven western states.

"This is an important event," said Laro, "because it significantly enhances Durakon's West Coast distribution. In addition we anticipate increased sales of our bed liners due to the strong presence which Custom Truck has in the west."

Previously, Custom Truck distributed for a competitor, and Durakon distributed its products in the west through company leased warehouses and sales centers.

As part of the agreement, Durakon will sell to Custom Truck various lease-hold and other assets in its two locations in Los Angeles and San Diego.

Laro also stated, "This change is possible because Custom Truck is a superior distributor and is well managed. Durakon feels comfortable with independent distributors where the distributor is well known and has a strong track record or high sales and quality customer service, rather than company-managed warehouses."

Custom Truck presently owns and operates five major full line truck accessory stores in the western states including two stores in Las Vegas and separate stores in Boise, Idaho, San Marcos, Calif. and Ontario, Oregon. Additionally, Custom Truck maintains a wide variety of sub-distributors throughout the western region.

Mark Martindale, president of Custom Truck stated about the new relationship with Durakon, "We are very pleased to be able to distribute the Duraliner. It represents the highest quality, best design, and best known name in the bed liner industry."

Durakon is the world's leading manufacturer and distributor of truckbed liners and rollback carriers.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.S. Department of Justice, on behalf of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), has filed suit against the Vineland Chemical Company and its owners, Arthur and Miriam Schwerdtle, seeking $69 million under the federal Superfund program for the Vineland Chemical Company Superfund site in Burlington County, N.J. EPA has already spent $3 million at the arsenic-contaminated site and estimates the next phase of the clean-up will cost $66 million dollars. EPA is currently designing a remedy for the site and will begin work as soon as the design is completed.

"These parties have refused to take part in the cleanup at the site," said EPA Regional Administrator Constantine Sidamon-Eristoff. "We have now asked the court to force them to take responsibility for their past practices. Individuals and firms that have been identified as responsible parties at Superfund sites must be aware that we will pursue every action possible to ensure their participation in clean-up activities at Superfund sites."

EPA spent $3 million to study contamination at the site and to determine the best remedy to address the contamination. The remedy selected for the site involves flushing the soil and pumping and treating the water to remove contaminants. Dredging and removal of arsenic contaminated sediments in two nearby rivers and Union Lake will be done as necessary.

The U.S. District Court of New Jersey recently ordered Vineland Chemical to pay a $1.2 million penalty for failing to comply with the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. EPA initiated the judicial action after the company refused an EPA order to close two regulated hazardous waste collection areas on the property. The court also told the company to close these surface impoundments in compliance with New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection regulations.

The Vineland Chemical Company, a manufacturer of agricultural chemicals since 1949, released significant amounts of arsenic and some heavy metals into the soil and groundwater at the site. Past improper practices at the plant have been corrected through NJDEP enforcement actions.

KIRKLAND, WA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Costco Wholesale Corp. (NASDAQ-NMS: COST) today reported record sales and earnings for the third quarter (12 weeks) and first 36 weeks of fiscal 1990, both ended May 13, 1990.

Net sales for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 increased 44 percent to $931.5 million, from $645.9 million during the third quarter of fiscal 1989. Comparable warehouse sales increased 22 percent over the prior year's third quarter.

Net income during the third quarter of fiscal 1990 increased 40 percent to $5.4 million, or $.15 per share, from $3.9 million, or $.15 per share, during the third quarter of fiscal 1989.

The fiscal 1990 third quarter results are after taking a $6 million pretax write-off in the quarter to cover the anticipated costs of closing four of the company's 12 Florida warehouse locations. On an after-tax basis this non-recurring charge reduced fiscal 1990 third quarter net income by $3.7 million, or ten cents per share.

For the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1990, net sales increased 43 percent to $2.71 billion, from $1.90 billion during the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1989. Comparable warehouse sales during this period increased 20 percent over the prior year's first 36 weeks.

Net income for the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1990 increased 81 percent to $27.3 million, or $0.79 per share ($0.78 per share on a fully-diluted basis), from $15 million, or 58 cents per share ($0.57 on a fully-diluted basis), during the first 36 weeks of fiscal 1989.

Comparable sales have continued to increase at strong rates, with an increase of 20 percent being recorded during the first five weeks of the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990.

In a May 23 press release, the company announced that, on June 16, 1990, it would close its three west Florida locations - Tampa, Clearwater and Palm Harbor - and also would close its Lauderhill, Fla., warehouse during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 in conjunction with the planned opening during the fourth quarter of a new warehouse in nearby Delray Beach, Fla.

Costco ended its 1989 fiscal year on Sept. 3, 1989, with 56 warehouses in operation. Five new warehouses were opened during this year's first quarter; and one warehouse was opened during the second quarter. Three additional warehouses were opened during the third quarter - in Laguna Niguel and Redding, Calif.; and Edmonton, Alberta, Canada - bringing to 62 the number of warehouses now in operation.

Expansion plans for fiscal 1991, which begins Sept. 3, include the opening of 10-14 additional warehouse locations, including the company's initial expansion into the Northeast United States. The company's first Northeast opening is planned for the Fall of 1990 - in West Springfield, Mass. - during the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

The company's common stock trades on the NASDAQ National Market System under the ticker symbol, "COST."

MINNETONKA, MN (JUNE 20) PR NEWSWIRE - LecTec/NDM (NASDAQ: LECT) today announced that a new agreement has been signed with the Pharmaseal Division of Baxter HealthCare Corporation.

The first product to be covered by the agreement will be introduced during the fall. The product is a novel sterile wound dressing designed to absorb wound exudate and to enhance the healing process.

The dressing features a clear absorbent hydrogel and a see-through grid that enables the rate of healing to be measured without removal from the wound site. The product will be sold by the Pharmaseal Division of Baxter to acute care hospitals in the United States.

Additional products are expected to be developed and introduced, under terms of the agreement, within the next 18 to 24 months. Future products will be designed for wound healing and for treatment of a variety of deep and superficial skin wounds.

According to LecTec/NDM Vice President David Kaysen; "This contract solidifies our entry into the growing wound care market. Due to the aging of the U.S. population, the incidence of wounds, such as decubitus ulcers, is effecting more people.

For example, we estimate that just decubitus ulcers effect over 2.5 million people each year in the U.S. Adding the need to treat other types of wounds, it is obvious that a critical need exists in the medical market for this new product."

LecTec/NDM is a medical products company headquartered in Minnetonka, Minn., with additional facilities in Dayton, Ohio. The company was created in November through LecTec's acquisition of NDM from Baxter Healthcare. In addition to wound dressing products, LecTec/NDM manufactures electrodes, medical tapes, and transdermal drug delivery systems.

PINEHURST, NC (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Reynolds Metals Company (NYSE: RLM) is projecting that capital projects to be completed in 1990 and 1991 will produce pre-tax profit improvement of approximately $150 million next year increasing to $200 million in 1992, Chairman and CEO William O. Bourke told the 11th annual Oppenheimer & Co. Investment Conference here today.

Stating that "we are investing more in this company now than at any time in our history," Mr. Bourke said that for the three years 1988, '89 and '90, the company will have invested an average of $700 million per year.

"Capital spending next year will continue at least at that average," he said. "This year alone we will spend $900 million.

"We are transforming Reynolds Metals into an even stronger, more competitive, more diversified and more profitable company through a worldwide, multi-billion dollar expansion and technology improvement program that will increase our revenues while reducing our costs," Mr. Bourke said.

He stated that following four record-breaking years in a row the company is stronger financially today than it has ever been.

Acknowledging that first quarter results were down from last year, he said "late in the first quarter orders and prices began to turn up and we should see improvement in our second quarter report.

"For 1990 as a whole," Mr. Bourke said, "while we will not set records, I believe we will have one of our best years ever.

"We anticipate that the U.S. economy will gradually improve over the rest of the year, leading into a strong year for the aluminum business in 1991 " he said. "Based on continued strength in the developed European and Asian economies we expect about a five percent increase in both world demand and U.S. domestic demand for 1991."

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - International Multifoods Corp. (NYSE: IMC) today reported a strong increase in sales and earnings for its first quarter ended May 31, 1990.

For the quarter, net earnings rose 15 percent to $5.2 million, or $.40 per common share, with sharp earnings improvements in U.S. and Canadian businesses. Net sales increased 9 percent to $548 million compared to the same period a year ago.

"We got off to a good start in the first quarter and I'm pleased with the progress we're making," said Tony Luiso, chairman, president and chief executive officer. "Our foodservice operations continue to grow at a strong pace and we had an excellent earnings gain in our Canadian business which we restructured last year."

U.S. earnings climbed 24 percent to $14 million on an 11 percent improvement in net sales to $416 million. Good volume and margin gains were achieved in specialty distribution and foodservice manufacturing. Agricultural operations had sharply higher results due to improved market conditions.

In Canada, earnings advanced 37 percent to $3.5 million with improvements in nearly all consumer product lines and the elimination of losses from businesses divested last year. These were partially offset by lower earnings in industrial foods compared with a strong first quarter a year ago. Canadian net sales declined 7 percent to $81.8 million as a result of the business divestitures last year.

Venezuelan earnings declined 37 percent to $4.3 million due to an unfavorable currency translation rate and a return to more normal margins following the major economic changes in Venezuela last year. Net sales were up 30 percent to $50.5 million, the result of price increases since last year's first quarter.

"As we anticipated, year-to-year comparisons will be difficult in our Venezuelan business in the near-term due to the major economic changes that went on in the country last year," said Luiso. "However, we expect the Venezuelan economy to begin to stabilize during the year."

Major unusual items during the quarter were a $5.5 million gain from the sale of Mister Donut and a $4.5 million charge for the consolidation of the company's specialty meat operations. These major unusual items had no impact on net earnings or earnings per share because of the high tax rate related to the gain on the Mister Donut sale.

Minneapolis-based International Multifoods, with fiscal 1990 net sales of $2.1 billion, is a diversified food company with major operations in the United States, Canada and Venezuela.

The addition of this order for 40 aircraft shipsets of NORDAM hush kits brings the total to 100 firm orders, with an additional 51 options. SEATTLE (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The government of Thailand has approved the acquisition of five additional 747-400 superjets by Thai Airways International, Boeing Commercial Airplane Group confirmed today.

Thai Airways International, the country's national carrier, has now ordered a total of eight 747-400s, including those in today's announcement. The carrier is currently operating two 747-400s, delivered earlier this year, on its Bangkok to Europe routes.

"With the growing popularity of tourism in Thailand and surrounding regions, Thai is ensuring an increased fleet of dependable aircraft," Air Chief Marshal Weera Kitchathorn, president of Thai Airways International, said in announcing the plan to purchase additional 747-400s.

Thai Airways International is one of the most rapidly growing carriers in Southeast Asia, serving 72 cities in Asia, Europe, North America, Australia, New Zealand and the Middle East. Since l976, the national carrier has purchased 28 Boeing jetliners. In addition to the 747 family, the airline has ordered seven 737-400s, the first of which will be delivered this year.

Larry Dickenson, Boeing vice president-international sales for Asia-Pacific, said, "The recent stream of orders for Boeing 747-400s from Japan, China, South Korea and now Thailand indicates the increasing demand for long-range, high-capacity aircraft in the region. In the last five years, Asia-Pacific carriers have purchased over $43 billion worth of Boeing aircraft comprising over 500 airplanes. The Asia-Pacific region is the fastest growing market in terms of air travel and is expected to continue to grow into the 21st century."

ATLANTA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Georgia-Pacific Corp. (NYSE: GP) today responded to Assistant Majority Leader Marlin D. Schneider's letter concerning the company's severance package for workers displaced because of Georgia-Pacific's merger with Great Northern Nekoosa Corp. (NYSE: GNN).

The complete text of the letter from Ronald P. Hogan, Georgia-Pacific's president and chief operating officer, follows:

June 20, 1990

The Honorable Marlin D. Schneider Assistant Majority Leader
Wisconsin State Assembly Post Office Box 8953 Madison, Wisconsin 53708

Dear Representative Schneider:

I appreciate your letter of June 8. As you have heard me say before, it is our goal to see that Georgia-Pacific's employees are appropriately protected during this transition process merging Great Northern Nekoosa and Georgia-Pacific.

Let me clarify the facts about the severance package being provided our salaried employees who are being terminated as a result of the merger. First, the Employee Protection Plan, which provides severance pay based on length of service and salary level, is not a bonus program. It is, rather a financial security plan for individuals who become displaced because of Georgia-Pacific's merger with Great Northern Nekoosa.

In addition to providing former employees full pay in a lump sum for the period of up to two years, the Employee Protection Plan also provides life and medical insurance benefits for the length of the severance. Therefore the plan is designed to provide financial protection for those individuals during their search for new employment.

By contrast, the Wisconsin employment security law provides for a maximum benefit of $225 per week and then only for a maximum of twenty-six weeks during the year following the claim.

It goes without saying that the State program does not cover life and medical insurance benefits. As you can see, the generous benefits of the company's Employee Protection Plan far exceed those benefits provided by the State of Wisconsin. Indeed, while the maximum benefit under the State plan is $11,050, benefits under the Georgia-Pacific plan have often exceeded $100,000, plus full life and medical insurance benefits, and, on average, are several times that of the State's benefit.

Moreover, after the company's plan is exhausted, the great bulk of covered employees will still be eligible for State unemployment benefits, assuming they are still unemployed. Those few who will not be eligible for State benefits are those who are receiving the longest and the most generous severance benefits, which, as I indicated, extend up to two years.

Your unemployment compensation law is intended to bridge the period of time between loss of work and beginning employment elsewhere. Conversely, the Georgia-Pacific Employee Protection Plan is there, whether a bridge is needed or not.

According to Wisconsin law, employees covered by a severance plan such as Georgia-Pacific's may be considered to be employed during the extended period they are receiving salary and life and medical insurance benefits. This is because even though these people are not physically working, they are being paid as if they were.

The Wisconsin law was designed to recognize voluntary efforts such as Georgia-Pacific's generous severance package, which substantially exceeds the State program. Allowing individuals to draw unemployment benefits from the State plan while the company is already voluntarily paying full salary and benefits clearly could be used as a reason to discourage such voluntary employee protection efforts in the future.

As we have throughout the period of the tender offer and merger process, I hope we will be able to continue an open dialogue on matters of concern to the people of Wisconsin.

Sincerely,
Ronald P. Hogan
President

LARGO, FL (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The Nokia Group has reported earnings of $87.3 million on sales of $1.74 billion, a year-to-year increase of 40 percent for the first four months of 1990.

The Helsinki-based consumer electronics, mobile phone and telecommunications firm reported earnings of $62.6 million on sales of $1.72 billion for the same period in 1989.

The earnings figure includes $35.5 million from the sale of fixed assets, compared with $28.5 million from such sales in 1989.

Structural changes within the Group and the impact of exchange-rate fluctuations produced a net 10 percent increase in sales, the company said.

Nokia Mobile Phones, with U.S. operations headquartered in Largo, Fla., recorded net sales of $185 million through April, an increase of 35 percent over 1989.

Rapid growth continued in the mobile phone market, the company said, and Nokia further expanded its manufacturing capacity. Reorganization and streamlining of production at plants in Finland, West Germany and South Korea contributed to the increased production.

Nokia's market share in mobile phones worldwide is 12 percent, the company reported, with its U.K. share doubling.

Nokia reported a $12.5 million contract with the Dutch PTT for Nokia Talkman mobile phones for its NMT 900 network.

Deliveries of mobile phones to the Italian telecommunications authority, SIP, under a $33.7 million contract began in January. SIP subsequently increased its order $32.5 million.

Nokia's Mobitex operations were sold to Heikki Marttila Oy of Finland in February and its U.S. paging service company. Cue Paging Corp. was sold to Seltech Satellite Corp., Toronto, Canada, in April. Nokia will continue manufacturing pagers for Cue Paging.

DAYTON, OH (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The Duriron Company, Inc. (NASDAQ: DURI) announced today that the continuing implementation of cellular manufacturing technology and the impact of aggressive product development programs will probably preclude the possibility of second quarter earnings in excess of last year's all-time quarterly record of 43 cents per share. However, John S. Haddick, Duriron's Chief Executive Officer stated that, "Second quarter earnings should approximate the average of the last five quarters, and we still look for a record year in both sales and earnings." Haddick added that, "Incoming business remains strong as a result of capital spending by Duriron's customers in the chemical process industries. Although our shipping level has improved during the quarter, it is not yet keeping pace with new business as we continue to address important longer term manufacturing programs at three of our major operations. It is clear that performance for the remainder of 1990 hinges upon our ability to promptly implement these new manufacturing programs."

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - The California Assembly has commended Dwaine H. Smith, senior vice president of Arco Products Company, for his leadership in the research and development of Arco's low-emission EC-1 Regular gasoline that helps reduce air pollution in Southern California.

The resolution passed in the Assembly said Smith deserved special recognition for the company's efforts in the area of alternative fuels. Arco Products Co. is the refining and marketing division of Los Angeles-based Arco (NYSE: ARC).

The Assembly resolution noted that EC-1 Regular "has the potential for significantly reducing air pollution from pre-1975 autos and pre-1980 trucks and represents the first phase of an ongoing plan to help make even greater reductions in vehicular air pollution in the future -- a plan that includes research into the effectiveness and viability of other new alternative fuels."

The resolution also mentioned that "if all current users of leaded regular gasoline in outhern California switched to EC-1, as much as 350 tons of pollutants would be removed from the air each day; and use of this new gasoline would be the equivalent of permanently removing 20 percent, or more than 300,000 of the heavier- polluting pre-catalyst-equipped vehicles from southern California roads and thus make a significant contribution to the improvement of the air quality in southern California."

EC-1 Regular replaced Arco's leading regular gasoline in southern California last September. The gasoline is designed for use in vehicles unequipped with catalytic converters. Although these vehicles represent only 15 percent of the South Coast district'sd more than eight million cars and trucks, they are responsible for more than 30 percent of the area's vehicular air pollution.

"Although I am pleased to be recognized for my involvement in the development of EC-1, the gasoline has become a success because of the many dedicated employees at Arco, said Smith. "The fact that other companies are now introducing reformulated gasolines is a positive step towards finding clean air solutions."

Arco is now researching other EC-type gasolines for vehicles with catalytic converters that run on unleaded fuels.

Tsirogiannos, an institutional investor based in Athens, Greece, to enter into a stock purchase agreement in exchange for a $3 million investment by Mr. Tsirogiannos -- including about $800,000 in equity and $2,200,000 in debt with unspecified terms.

Under the stock purchase agreement, Tsirogiannos will receive 8,123,436 shares of legend common stock from the treasury of Seafoods From Alaska Inc. Additional legend common stock shares and warrants made available to Tsirogiannos by company management will total 4,930,000 shares, providing the purchaser with a sum of 13,053,436 shares, or 52.2 percent of the 25 million shares authorized. The intent agreement establishes a basis for additional investment by Tsirogiannos of up to $50 million, with the purchasers stock ownership in the company increasing as additional investments are made.

The $3 million investment will be used by Seafoods from Alaska Inc. to manage past debt and to meet working capital needs of the company. The company anticipates a significant portion of the working capital to be invested toward the further development and expansion of a LightSeas Brand of products, cured seafoods processed under a patent pending formula which have 50 percent less salt and 33 1/3 percent less sodium than competing brands. The company began an exclusive introduction of NOVA LITE from LightSeas Brand beginning June 10 in the chain of Waldbaum's Supermarkets in the greater New York City metropolitan area.

The completion of the stock purchase agreement is contingent upon the ability of Tsirogiannos and Seafoods from Alaska Inc. to manage past company debts, some of which resulted from the 1989 Exxon oil spill, in a manner which meets the objectives of Tsirogiannos for the use of proceeds from his investment.

The intent agreement requires the continued participation of all top management of Seafoods from Alaska Inc., located in Alaska as well as in the company's sales, marketing and business development office in Michigan.

Under the intent agreement, Tsirogiannos will be nominated to the board of directors of the company by Seafoods from Alaska Inc. directors, a matter to be presented to company shareholders.

Dr. Paul Freed, president of TWR said after giving the dedication address and prayer, "Establishing Trans World Radio ministries to proclaim the Gospel of Christ in the land of "Glasnost" and "Perestroika" shows to us that it is indeed a new day of "openness" and "restructuring" in the Soviet Union. We have worked for two years on a broadscale with Russian evangelicals in the Soviet Union -- this day is truly one of celebration."

Freed was present along with 40 other individuals at the TWR Leningrad facility's dedication. Other TWR representatives who attended the ceremony included Rev. Alan Travers, vice president of TWR U.S. Ministries and Mark Christensen, TWR director of Broadcaster Relations. The TWR Leningrad studio's emphasis will be music recording, interviews, testimonies and discussions with other programs to follow such as youth and childrens programs.

In addition to the Leningrad facility, TWR plans to set up at least four other studios, in Moscow, Kiev, Minsk and Brest before the end of the year. A mobile recording vehicle and several portable units will also be added. Though program development is still in process for these four studios, eventually programs targeting Soviet teenagers, and journalistic-type programs as well as music will be provided.

DALLAS (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Amtech Corp. (NASDAQ: AMTC) said today that the Oklahoma Turnpike Authority has approved the award of a contract to provide its TollTag(R) electronic non-stop toll collection system for 10 Oklahoma turnpikes. The total value of this contract, including third party equipment, is estimated by the company to be approximately $9.5 million over a five-year period.

The system will be implemented in three phases on the six existing turnpikes beginning with the Turner and Will Rogers turnpikes, and followed by the Bailey, Indian Nation, Muskogee, and Cimarron turnpikes. The system will be extended to four new turnpikes already under construction for completion in 1992.

The installations will include reader systems and auxiliary equipment on 72, 54 and 35 lanes, respectively, for each of the phases, as well as software and services such as installation, maintenance and operation of the TollTag(R) Store.

Amtech vice president, William H. Allen Jr., said, "The Oklahoma Turnpike Authority, in addition to installing state-of-the-art electronic toll collection systems, is also designing innovative toll plazas to speed up traffic flow and provide enhanced convenience to the consumer."

Large-scale Amtech electronic toll collection systems are already in operation in Dallas, Texas by the Texas Turnpike Authority and in New Orleans, Louisiana by the Louisiana Department of Transportation, as well as at the Lincoln Tunnel for bus traffic by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey. These systems are currently logging toll transactions at the rate of more than 12 million per year. Amtech also announced earlier this week that it has been awarded contracts by the Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey to provide pilot installation of its TollTag(R) electronic toll collection system on the Verrazano Narrows and the Geothals Bridges, which are terminus points of the Staten Island Expressway.

HIGH POINT, NC (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Culp, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: CULP) today reported net income of $2,286,000, or $0.52 per share, for the fiscal year ended April 29, 1990. That compares with a net loss in the prior year of $892,000, or $0.20 per share. Net sales for fiscal 1990 totaled $169,454,000 versus $176,839,000 for fiscal 1989.

For the fourth fiscal quarter, the company reported net income of $904,000, or $0.21 per share, versus income of $333,000, or $0.08 per share in the year-earlier period. Net sales for the quarter totaled $46,715,000 compared with $48,010,000 in the prior year.

Robert G. Culp, III, chief executive officer, said, "The primary factors contributing to the significant profit turnaround were a more profitable sales mix, reduced operating expenses and sharply lower interest expense. Although the decision a year ago to phase out certain lower-margin fabric categories led to reduced sales, we are pleased with the progress achieved to date in restoring Culp's profitability. It is especially gratifying that the strongest quarter of fiscal 1990 was the final period when earnings of $0.21 per share were recorded.

"Record cash flow from operations of $22.8 million for fiscal 1990 enabled us to reduce debt to only 26 percent of the company's total capital. This strong financial position provides sound support to Culp's competitive position, enabling us to continue an agressive capital spending program, which includes plans for approximately $10 million in expenditures for fiscal 1991. We are confident about Culp's longer-term prospects and are optimistic about the more immediate outlook in fiscal 1991 for realizing further improvement in the company's profitability."

Culp, Inc. is a leading manufacutrer and marketer of fabrics for the furniture, bedding, recreation vehicle and institutional furnishings markets. The company's common shares are traded in the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol CULP.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. textile mills posted a net loss in the first quarter of 1990, as profits after taxes plunged from $340 million during the first quarter of 1989 to a negative of $47 million, according to revised figures from the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Reacting to this news and to today's action by the Senate Finance Committee -- which reported to the full Senate the Textile, Apparel and Footwear Trade Act of 1990 -- Donald R. Hughes, president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, said: "This is truly a good news, bad news situation.

"The negative profit figures for the industry confirm our worst fears that we are being overwhelmed by imports. The good news is that the Senate recognizes the urgency of the situation and is acting quickly and positively to move textile import legislation," Hughes said. "A legislative solution to the import problem is essential to the future of the domestic textile industry."

The textile and apparel import control bill calls for a comprehensive global quota system that would be based on the record-breaking import levels of 1989. Imports would be allowed to grow each year at 1 percent, the rate of growth of the U.S. market.

DETROIT, (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - General Motors announced today it will begin notifying owners of approximately 1.6 million 1984-90 Chevrolet Camaro and Pontiac Firebird cars of a safety-related defect with the safety belt buckle assemblies.

Some of the subject vehicles have safety belt buckle assemblies that may not latch or release properly. In most cases this is caused by a broken red plastic push button weakened by prolonged exposure to ultraviolet radiation from the sun. If the safety belt is inoperable, the risk of injury in an accident increases for an unbelted occupant.

Prior to contacting a dealer for a service appointment, owners are being asked to inspect all four safety belt buckles in the car. If a safety belt will not latch or release, or if the red plastic push button is broken, owners should promptly schedule a service appointment. If owners are unclear as to the proper operation of the buckle assemblies, they should have a dealer perform the inspection.

Owners who find all four safety belt buckle assemblies in good working condition need not schedule an immediate service appointment. These owners are being asked to periodically inspect the safety belts and schedule a service appointment immediately if an inoperable buckle or broken red plastic push button is discovered.

Owners of vehicles not needing immediate safety belt replacement will be sent a follow-up letter starting this fall to schedule a service appointment as replacement parts become available.

Ultimately, all safety belt buckle assemblies on all subject vehicles will either be replaced or repaired. Chevrolet and Pontiac dealers will perform the necessary inspections and repairs at no charge to owners.

COMPTON, CA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Hitachi, Ltd. (NYSE: HIT) today announced that it will merge its two separate California-based U.S. consumer products manufacturing and sales companies, located in Anaheim and Compton, respectively, into a new company to be headquartered in Compton and called Hitachi Home Electronics (America) Inc.

The formation of the new company, planned for October, is designed to strengthen Hitachi's position in the highly competitive U.S. consumer products market.

The strategy also includes the implementation of several other measures aimed at adding muscle to the company's U.S. operations in this business sector. The new company will be capitalized at $40 million and will be 60 percent owned by HAL and 40 percent owned by Hitachi Sales Corp.

Hitachi's consumer products operations in the United States are currently conducted by Hitachi Consumer Products of America Inc., an Anaheim, Calif. subsidiary of Hitachi America, Ltd. engaged mainly in TV and VCR production. Hitachi Sales Corp. of America, a Compton, Calif., subsidiary of Hitachi Sales Corp., is engaged in consumer products marketing and service activities for products including color TV's, projection TV's, VCR's, camcorders, small appliances and industrial products.

The last major reorganization of Hitachi's U.S. operations was in April 1987, when the company but its wholly owned U.S. manufacturing subsidiaries under the wing of Hitachi America, Ltd. in Tarrytown, N.Y.

The present move is an extension of this earlier integration. It is focused specifically on improving Hitachi's competitive position in the U.S. consumer product market.

Hitachi officials expect the integration of manufacturing and sales operations resulting from the merger to "enhance Hitachi's capability to control the entire operation and to develop products matched to the demands of the marketplace."

The merger also will help Hitachi to secure sales channels for reaching the "more personalized" consumer markets of the future, company officials say.

Another anticipated effect is the stronger financial position that will result from the capital increase at the time of the merger. Hitachi's plan calls for doubling annual sales to more than $800 million within five years of establishment of the new company.

In conjunction with the merger, Hitachi also intends to reinforce its U.S. production capability. Hitachi Consumer products of America, for example, will discontinue production of medium-sized TVs and increase its output of projection TVs and other large-screen models.

This will facilitate expansion of Hitachi's bright, high-resolution UltraVision projection TV in the U.S. market, and enable Hitachi to respond more effectively to the rapid increase in demand for its 27-inch model. Medium-sized TV production, meanwhile, is to be turned over mainly to facilities in Asian countries.

Hitachi, Ltd. is a Tokyo-based manufacturer of electronics and electrical products with annual sales of nearly $45 billion.

ALBANY, GA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Gray Communications Systems Inc. announced that its board of directors today agreed in principle to a merger proposal made today, under the terms of which holders of its common stock would receive $162.50 per share for each share of common stock owned by them.

The proposal was made by James H. Gray Jr., currently president of the company and editor and publisher of The Albany Herald, the newspaper owned and published by the company.

Upon consummation of the merger, the company would become a wholly owned subsidiary of a corporation controlled by Gray and other shareholders of the company would receive the indicated price per share in cash for their shares of common stock in the company. Gray advised that he would own a majority of the voting stock of his company and, together with a small number of outside equity investors led by Noro-Moseley Partners of Atlanta would own all of the issued common stock and preferred stock of his company.

The board of directors was also advised today that the heirs of the Estate of James H. Gray Sr. had reached an agreement for the Estate to sell the shares of common stock of the company owned by the Estate of James H. Gray Jr. or to his company, either through a direct sale for the same price per share as offered in connection with a merger proposal made to the board of directors or by means of such merger.

Gray's right to purchase the 253,800 shares of common stock of the company owned by the Estate (constituting approximately 51.7 percent of the outstanding shares) runs through Oct. 1 (or such later date, but not beyond Nov. 30 as may be required to obtain necessary approval of the Federal Communications Commission). By agreement among the heirs of the Estate, the cash proceeds to the Estate will be allocated to pay estate taxes, existing indebtedness of the Estate and to fund a distribution of remaining cash to the other heirs of the Estate.

The merger proposal is subject to a number of conditions, including execution of a definitive merger agreement, receipt of an opinion from an independent investment banking firm that the consideration offered is fair to the holders of common stock of the company from a financial point of view, and receipt of necessary approvals of the Federal Communications Commission. Gray advised the board that he had proposals to provide adequate financing to fund the merger and that the offer was not contingent upon obtaining financing.

Terry P. McKenna, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, stated that the board of directors appointed a committee of three non-management directors of the company to consider the terms of the merger proposal and to engage and consult with an investment banking firm, and retain independent counsel, each of their selection, to advise concerning the terms of the proposed merger. McKenna stated that he hoped that the independent committee would be in a position to make a recommendation to the full board of directors promptly and that an announcement of the action of the board of directors concerning the merger proposal would be made at that time.

Gray Communications Systems Inc. is a holding company located in Albany, Ga., and operates three VHF television stations located in Albany, Panama City, Fla., and Monroe, La.; a daily newspaper in Albany; warehouses; and a fixed-base operation at the Albany airport.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Superior Court Judge Anthony Gibson has denied a motion by Donald Trump and Penthouse International to dismiss claims by Pratt Hotel Corporation (AMEX: PHC) that Trump and Penthouse violated antitrust laws when they entered into a contract for Trump to buy the former Penthouse Casino site from Penthouse. Penthouse had previously entered into a contract to sell the property, located at the Boardwalk and Missouri Avenue, to Pratt.

The motion resulted from a 15-count suit filed in April 1989, by Pratt against Trump and Robert Guccione, owner of Penthouse, in New Jersey Superior Court. In that suit, in addition to antitrust, Pratt charged Trump and Guccione with civil conspiracy, fraud, engaging in a pattern of racketeering activity, breach of contract, malicious interference with contractual relations and prospective economic advantage, breach of and inducement to breach fiduciary duties, malicious abuse of the legal process, and the filing of frivolous legal claims.

In its complaint, Pratt seeks various forms of relief, including the voiding of the unlawful transfer of the old Penthouse Casino site from Guccione to Trump, compensatory damages, treble damages, and punitive damages.

"This is a watershed day in the progress of our suit against Messrs. Trump and Guccione," said Roberto Rivera-Soto, esq., general counsel for Pratt Hotel Corporation. "The court has decided that our antitrust claims have merit and should be fully heard at trial."

Pratt's suit arose from Guccione and Trump's behavior regarding a pre-existing contract between Guccione and Pratt in which Guccione had agreed to sell the Penthouse Casino site to Pratt. This agreement envisions the development of the Sands/Hollywood Casino Hotel immediately adjacent and connected to Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino. Trump and the Trump Organization consistently and vehemently opposed the development of the Sand/Hollywood, which would be a competitor immediately next door to the Trump Plaza.

The suit alleges that after Trump realized that his delaying tactics, arbitrary objections, and attempts to purchase parcels needed for the development of the Sand/Hollywood Casino Hotel project would not prevail, Trump and Guccione conspired to wrongfully breach the Guccione/Pratt agreement.

William P. Weidner, president of Pratt, stated, "We negotiated in good faith, had been under contract to purchase the Penthouse Casino Site for more than two years, and had been waiting for the required conditions to be satisfied. In reliance on that contract, we went forward, expending millions of dollars, in planning and developing the Sand/Hollywood Casino Hotel."

MILWAUKEE (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - Value Merchants, Inc. (NASDAQ: VLMR), formerly Wisconsin Toy Company, Inc., Milwaukee-based toy wholesaler and operator of Toy Liquidators and Everything's A $1.00 retail stores across the United States, announced the first quarter (16 weeks) ended May 26, 1990, resulted in a loss of $867,000 or $0.16 per share on sales of $23,178,000 compared to a loss of $79,000 or $0.02 per share on sales of $12,313,000 for the comparable period in fiscal 1990 (ended May 20, 1989) as restated to reflect the company's 1990 change in fiscal year.

Phillip Cohen, chairman, and Steven J. Appel, president, stated that "The loss was consistent with budget projections, and attributable to the growing importance of our retail operations from 39 percent of last year's first quarter sales to 75 percent of this year's sales.

"Our retail business is seasonal and the first quarter is traditionally a loss quarter." In addition, the company experienced a softness in wholesale sales, created by a weak retail market.

The company's retail operations, Toy Liquidator stores in factory outlet malls and Everything's A $1.00 stores in regional malls, showed an increase in comparable store sales of two percent and 30 percent, respectively, from the same period last year when Everything's A Dollar was under different management. They said that Value Merchants was on target to open a combined total of approximately 60 stores by the Christmas season.

"We were successful in acquiring certain assets of the bankrupt Toy King retail chain and are operating inventory liquidation sales in the Toy King stores. The results of this initiative will be reflected in the second quarter. We have also executed an agreement to be the exclusive supplier of toy merchandise to a department store chain for the 1990 Christmas season.

"We remain confident in our growth and profit expectations for fiscal 1991 " Cohen and Appel said.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - In a pioneering effort to move beyond the conceptual design of space exploration systems and into actual hardware development, McDonnell Douglas Space Systems Co. and the Mars Mission Research Center (MMRC) are preparing to conduct a series of Mars aerobrake assembly demonstrations.

The current schedule calls for preliminary scuba swim-through tests to start the week of June 25 with activity peaking on June 28 at the McDonnell Douglas Underwater Test Facility in Huntington Beach. Pete Conrad, former Apollo astronaut, and one of the divers in the upcoming tests, will help correlate the results from the neutral buoyancy tests with actual space operations.

Aerobrakes, large structures covered with materials able to withstand high temperatures, operate by creating atmospheric drag forces which slow down an approaching spacecraft, allowing it to enter the orbit of the destination planet. NASA has identified aerobraking as a critical technology for the Space Exploration Initiative that President Bush established last July.

Next week's test will use a partial, full-scale mock-up of a candidate Mars aerobrake that MMRC has developed at its facilities in North Carolina. This academic organization is a NASA-sponsored University Space Engineering Research Center that is co-located at North Carolina State and North Carolina A&T Universities. Students at the center have had an important role in developing the mock-up and will be supporting the upcoming tests.

The benefit of aerobraking comes from potential savings in propellant requirements compared to standard approaches that employ rockets for all of the braking maneuvers. However, because of their large sizes (some designs call for dimensions of more than 120 feet), it will probably be impractical to launch a fully integrated, rigid aerobrake on a single rocket booster.

Consequently, the option of assembling them in orbit, possibly on Space Station Freedom, is receiving considerable interest. Another alternative is to make the aerobrakes out of advanced, flexible materials that can be packed into a standard launch vehicle fairing and then deployed upon reaching orbit.

McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) plans to generate data on the erectable aerobrake approach this year, particularly in the areas of facilities, operations and interactions between space-walking astronauts and telerobotic arms. Such data will be used to refine future designs of aerobrakes, as well as growth versions of Space Station Freedom.

REDMOND, WA (JUNE 21) PR NEWSWIRE - In an industry that will claim more than $5 billion in sales for 1990, Nintendo of America Inc. today added its 50 millionth player to the growing list of home video game enthusiasts. With a Nintendo Entertainment System(R) already in more than one in four homes in America, currently nine out of 10 hardware systems purchased bear the Nintendo(R) name.

Sell-through figures for the first half of this year indicate a 40 percent increase in software demand over last year's figures. This increase, along with the strong sales of its recently introduced portable system, Game Boy(TM), has further expanded Nintendo's total share of market.

In addition, sales of the Nintendo Entertainment System (NES)(R) continue to be stronger than ever. While the company had earlier forecast sales of 7.5 million Nintendo Entertainment Systems, consumer sell-through suggests a demand of more than nine million units. "Despite the introduction of new product configurations by both Sega and NEC, our more than 80 percent share-of-market continues to grow," said Peter Main, vice president of marketing for Nintendo of America Inc. "In fact, the latest T.R.S.T.S. data (Toy Retail Sales Tracking Study) suggests a combined market share of only slightly more than 6 percent for these 16-bit competitors," he added.

Nintendo's dedication to a marketing strategy that goes beyond providing a quality product to the development of a complete customer service program has solidified player loyalty. "Our philosophy of listening to our players and providing them with the best and most challenging games has been the key to our success," Main explained.

For example, the over 400 Nintendo game counselors and customer service representatives answer calls from more than 100,000 players per week. Players from all over the country call to get game tips and advice on installing systems and locating specific games in their area. Plans are under way to further expand the game counselor team to over 200, to provide service seven days per week, 18 hours per day.

"Just last week we had the largest volume of calls in our history, with 141,000 players seeking game tips, strategies and assistance in finding their favorite games," said Main.

Interest in game play is not limited to the traditional video game player, boys between the ages of 8 to 15. Instead, Nintendo players include nearly 20 million adults, age 18 and over, 39 percent of the total player base. Females comprise more than 17 million, or 33 percent of the total player base.

According to Main, Nintendo and its licensees will satisfy player demand with 80 new games for the second half of 1990; providing annual sales projections of 70 million NES game paks, a 40 percent increase over 1989 sales.

Redmond-based Nintendo of America Inc. sells personal, home and arcade video games in the United States.

DALLAS (JUNE 21) UPI - The National Labor Relations Board has filed a cease and desist order barring union drivers from committing acts of violence in the continuing strike against Greyhound Lines Inc., company spokesmen said Wednesday.

''This action by the NLRB should send a powerful message to passengers in the Northeast, where union violence has been more open and prevalent than in other parts of the country,'' P. Anthony Lannie, Greyhound executive vice president, said in a statement issued Wednesday night.

The NLRB took the action Tuesday night and informed the bus company and union Wednesday, said George Gravley, a spokesman at Greyhound headquarters in Dallas.

The cease and desist order bars striking drivers from ''assaulting, threatening, harassing, or intimidating'' Greyhound workers, supervisors, managers or customers.

It bars violent acts such as rock or bottle throwing, industrial sabotage or vandalism of buses, as well as ''picketing in mass, patrolling, or parking'' vehicles near Greyhound facilities to keep non-striking employees from carrying out their work.

Representatives of the 9,300 striking Greyhound workers, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, have signed a consent decree agreeing to the cease and desist order. In signing the stipulation, the union did not admit to any illegal action.

''The point of all this is that this is an effective mechanism finally to stop the violence, which is what we've been trying to do since March 2'' when the strike began, Gravley said. A bus in Chicago was shot at that day.

The NRLB is an administrative civil agency that has no enforcement power. As a result, the NRLB will file a petition asking U.S. Court of Appeals to turn the NRLB action into a court order, giving the court the power to enforce it, he said.

The Greyhound workers have been on strike since March in bitter, sometimes violent dispute with management. One striker, Robert Waterhouse, was killed by a replacement worker-driven bus and there have been some two dozen incidents of buses or terminals being shot at.

Efforts by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to bring the two sides together have failed, largely over Greyhound's refusal to bargain.

In May, the National Labor Relations Board filed an unfair labor practice complaint against the company and on June 4 the company filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws.

Just days before Greyhound announced its brankruptcy filing, the union said it had hired a consultant to explore the possibility of a worker buyout of the company.

Still pending is an unfair labor practices complaint filed by the union against Greyhound. An administrative law judge in Milwaukee has scheduled a Sept. 17 hearing on union charges that the company should not have enforced its final offer because the two sides had not reached an impasse in bargaining.

DAVIE, FL (JUNE 21) UPI - A school bus apparently lost it brakes, ran a red light and jumped a median Wednesday, slamming into five cars and a guardrail, injuring at least 27 people including 18 children, police said.

The bus, carrying 67 children, was stopped by the guardrail, which prevented it from going off a bridge and crashing into a canal, police said. Seventeen children on board suffered minor injuries.

The bus driver and an adult in one of the cars were seriously injured and taken to Humana Hospital. A 13-year-old boy in one of the cars was treated and released at Humana.

''The bus driver said she was attempting to slow down because the red light was changing and she lost the brakes,'' Davie police spokeswoman Christine Murray said. ''She struck five vehicles and the driver of one of the vehicles, a Ford Bronco, was ejected. She was airlifted to Broward General Medical Center in critical condition.

''This could have been a lot worse,'' she said. ''If the bus had not been stopped by the guardrail this bus full of children would have gone into the canal.''

The driver of the Bronco, Donna Perez, 30, of Hollywood, was listed in critical condition at Humana Hospital. She suffered from head injuries, officials said.

The bus, carrying children between the ages of 6 and 12 and six adults, was from the Alfa Academy and Sports Camp day school in Plantation. The group was returning from a movie in Hollywood when the accident occurred about 3:30 p.m., Murray said.

''All of a sudden, we all popped up and then we all fell on the floor and we all started crying because we were hurt,'' said Nicole Rech, a child who was on the bus when the accident occurred.

Her mother, Karen Rech met Nicole at the scene. ''I've never been more glad to see her in my life,'' she said.

''I was pretty terrified,'' said John Stoddard, who also was on the bus. ''We were all just juggling around in the seats.''

The bus was traveling north on Pine Island Road when the brakes went out at the State Road 84 intersection.

''After she struck the first two vehicles in her lane the bus jumped the median and struck three cars in the southbound lane of Pine Island Road and went through a concrete guard rail on a bridge the overlooks the New River Canal,'' Murray said.

Another youth on the bus, Nathan Mitchell, said ''The bus driver ran a red light and another car came by and went crack, and the lady went flying.''

Davie police spokesman Jay Seiler said the bus driver, Angela Boyd, of Pompano, did run the red light, but police were investigating to determine whether the brakes actually failed or the accident was caused by driver negligence.

''The bus will be inspected properly, with the cooperation of the Florida Highway Patrol and bus inspectors,'' he said. ''We will talk to all the drivers, as many as witnesses as possible, to try and find out why this happened.''

MOSCOW (JUNE 21) UPI - A former top KGB official said the secret police continue to spy on new political parties and strike committees and charged there was an official plot to discredit populist politician Boris Yeltsin.

In unprecedented interviews published Wednesday in the Komsomolskaya Pravda and Moscow News newspapers, retired Maj. Gen. Oleg Kalugin said the disinformation campaign against Yeltsin, newly elected president of the Russian Republic, was conducted on orders from top levels of the Communist Party.

''When it concerns structures opposed to the CPSU (Communist Party of the Soviet Union), all limitations were lifted, at least until recently,'' Kalugin told Komsomolskaya Pravda. ''All means at (the KGB's disposal) are brought into play, anything that can discredit or defame the person who behaves in a way contrary to certain people's wishes.

''The discreditation of Yeltsin and (Parliament deputy Telman) Gdlyan go without saying,'' he said. ''Not long before the first Congress of People's Deputies, the KGB leadership gave direct instructions regarding this at a closed meeting in the KGB.''

Kalugin said he spent 30 years as a KGB agent, working his way up from the cover of a Radio Moscow correspondent in New York to deputy chief of the KGB mission in Washington in the late 1960s and top posts in Leningrad and Moscow.

He said after a dispute with Leningrad party leaders and an outspoken letter to President Mikhail Gorbachev, it was ''suggested'' that he retire in 1989.

While Kalugin said he could not reveal classified details of his time as an undercover agent, his interviews provided a fascinating look at the inner workings of the dreaded secret police.

Kalugin told Komsomolskaya Pravda he began his KGB career after graduating from Leningrad University with a specialty in English. In 1958, he was sent to Columbia University in New York on one of the first post-war Soviet-U.S. exchange programs, in which he said he was not the only spy.

''Eight or nine months later I went again to New York, this time under the cover of Radio Moscow,'' he said. ''For four years I combined the activities of a journalist and intelligence officer.''

After a year back in the Soviet Union, he returned to the United States as a second secretary in the embassy in Washington. He was later promoted to first secretary and deputy chief of the KGB mission.

Kalugin said he could not reveal all the details of his job in Washington, but said it included coordinating agents' networks of sources and paying money for information about politics, technology and such ''enemy'' agencies as the CIA, FBI and National Security Agency.

He said he began to get disillusioned during the 1968 Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia after he passed along ''absolutely reliable documents'' that showed the United States had nothing to do with the ''Prague Spring'' reforms that the Soviets blamed on Western influence.

''A year later when I came to Moscow on vacation, I learned that the KGB leadership gave instructions that my messages be shown to no one and that they be destroyed,'' he told Komsomolskaya Pravda.

After returning from his tour of duty in the United States, Kalugin was assigned as first deputy chief of the Leningrad KGB, where he stayed until 1987 and was able to see the entire scope of secret police activities inside the Soviet Union.

''There is not a single sphere of life which escaped the hand or shadow of the KGB,'' he said. ''All talk about a new face of the KGB, in my opinion, is so far nothing more than camouflage.

''I've got every reason to assert that old Stalinist schooling is (still) the basis of KGB activities.''

He said the targets of domestic spying have changed from the Trotskyites in the 1930s to new political parties and independent unions and strike committees today.

But Kalugin argued the KGB uses ''the very same methods which are used by every police department in the world'' - including recruiting or installing agents inside organizations and ''discrediting of this or that movement's activists.''

He said in Leningrad the KGB's control extended so far that when concerns were raised about young people crowding into rock 'n' roll clubs the agency simply set up its own ''to keep this movement under control.''

(JUNE 21) UPI - Nelson Mandela postponed a scheduled Wednesday evening meeting with African-American media representatives in New York to get some badly needed rest. The 71-year-old South African black leader is spending the night at Gracie Mansion, the official residence of Mayor David Dinkins. He'll have breakfast Thursday morning with Jesse Jackson before resuming his strenuous schedule, that includes a concert-rally Thursday night at Yankee Stadium.

The Palestine Liberation Organization says it regrets ''the American decision'' to suspend diplomatic contact with the group. A spokesman for the Arab League of States says the decision shows the United States is NO longer a viable mediator in the Middle East peace process. He says he'll meet Thursday in Washington with 22 ambassadors from Arab League member nations to discuss reviving plans for a U-N-backed international peace conference.

The midnight oil is burning on Capitol Hill. House Republicans are deliveringan all-night round of speeches to promote the anti-crime bill introduced by President Bush one year ago... most of which remains in the House Judiciary Committee. G-O-P lawmakers accuse the Democrats of refusing to act on the legislation. The talkathon... which technically will keep the House in session throughout the night... is to continue until Thursday morning.

Greyhound officials say the National Labor Relations Board has filed an order barring striking union drivers from violence. The action comes three and one-half months after workers walked off the job in the bitter, sometimes violent dispute. NO comment from union officials, who signed a consent decree agreeing to the cease-and-desist order. In signing the order, the union did NOT admit to any illegal action.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 21) UPI - Dr. Luc Montagnier, a discoverer of the AIDS virus, reported an unusual microbe may act as an important co-factor spurring AIDS progression and antibiotics attacking the microbe appear to help some patients.

Montagnier presented research findings Wednesday night that suggest a very small, primitive microogranism, called a mycoplasma, may increase the cell-killing power of the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus and thereby lead to AIDS patients' decline and ultimate death.

The French researcher emphasized his latest work does not contradict his past findings that HIV is the cause of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Montagnier, along with American Robert Gallo, is credited with discovering HIV in 1983.

''This is not to say HIV is not the primary agent'' in causing AIDS, Montagnier told an American Medical Association seminar held in conjunction with the 6th International AIDS Conference.

But Montagnier said many researchers have been puzzled by the complex nature of HIV infection and the long time - 10 years or more - it takes some HIV-infected people to develop AIDS. ''One difficulty has been to be explain why HIV is a killer virus,'' he said.

Montagnier and his colleagues at the Pasteur Institute said they found signs of mycoplasma infection in blood cell cultures of 37 of 97 patients suffering from AIDS symptoms. Because mycoplasma is a common contaminant of cells grown in the test-tube, researchers then tested freshly drawn blood cells and found mycoplasma in 16 of 37 patients who were positive by the cell culture method.

Only ''one or two'' people out of 20 healthy subjects showed signs of mycoplasma, Montagnier said.

Mycoplasmas, which resemble bacteria but lack a cell wall, previously have been shown to cause walking pneumonia, arthritis and spontaneous abortion. But until recently, they had not been linked with fatal disease.

Following up on test-tube work that found mycoplasma-killing antibiotics could reduce the death of HIV-infected cells, Montagnier's team gave antibiotics to 21 AIDS patients who tested positive for mycoplasma.

About one-third of patients showed ''some improvement'' including weight gain and fever reduction, Montagnier said. However, he said two-thirds of the patients receiving antibiotics showed no improvement or worsening of symptoms.

Montganier said the spotty success of antibiotic treatment could indicate ''mycoplasma is not very important in AIDS.'' But it is more likely the antibiotic dose was too low to wipe out mycoplasma infection in the patients who did not improve, he said.

Antibiotics have no effect on HIV and other viruses, but can kill bacteria and mycoplasma.

The findings suggest an AIDS treatment strategy that teams up anti-viral drugs with mycoplamsa-fighting antibiotics. But Montagnier said he thinks new antibiotics must be developed before such therapy would be a major boon to AIDS patients.

Current antibiotic drugs ''will not be sufficient to improve the condition of most AIDS patients,'' he said.

The controversy over mycoplasmas' role in AIDS began in 1986 when Dr. Shyh-Ching Lo of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology reported he had identified a new ''virus'' in AIDS patients. Those findings were sharply criticized by other AIDS researchers, and Lo last year revised his conslusions to say the mystery microbe was a mycoplasma.

The mycoplasma strains identified in AIDS patients by Montagnier and Lo appear closely related, but are not identical. Lo, who also talked at Wednesday's seminar, said his research indicates mycoplasma infections may underlie the massive tissue death found in the heart, kidney, brain and other organs of some AIDS patients.

Montagnier found peaks of mycoplasma infection appeared to coincide with increased reproduction of HIV, which is associated with greater cell death. But he has not determined exactly how mycoplasma could act to step up HIV replication.

Other recent research has pointed to herpes viruses and cytomegalovirus as possible co-factors in AIDS progression. It is also thought chemicals called cytokines, which the body produces in response to infection, might play important roles.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Both the Blue Jays and pitcher Dave Stieb are on target to achieve year-end goals, but don't talk to Stieb about it.

''It's way too early to think about 20 wins,'' said Stieb after Toronto's 11-0 thrashing of Boston Wednesday night. ''I'm not concerned with it. If this club keeps playing the way it does, and I pitch the way I've been pitching, the 20 wins will come.''

Stieb boosted his record to 10-2 and dropped his ERA to an American League leading 2.26. In turn, the Blue Jays increased their AL East lead to two games over Boston with their 10th victory in their last 12 games and are one game closer to a 100-win season.

The right-hander scattered seven hits over 7 2-3 innings while striking out seven and walking none.

Boston Manager Joe Morgan was impressed by Stieb's performance to the point that he asked home plate umpire Larry Barnett to check Stieb's glove and cap for foreign substances at the top of the sixth inning. The search yielded nothing.

''The story tonight was that Stieb was too good for us,'' Morgan said. ''He must've thrown 90 percent breaking balls, that was the story of the contest.''

Morgan explained that his actions were in response to an earlier incident when Toronto Manager Cito Gaston asked Barnett to check catcher Tony Pena's glove for pine tar. Barnett found the substance and forced Pena to change gloves.

''We suspected Stieb of doing things of that nature before, not necessarily tonight, but we weren't sure,'' said Morgan. ''But when they did that (complained about Pena) I figured I might as well get my two cents worth.''

Toronto supported Stieb with a club record-tying eight consecutive hits in an eight-run eighth inning.

The Blue Jays sent 12 batters to the plate in the eighth rocking relievers Jeff Gray and Tom Bolton. Tony Fernandez, Kelly Gruber, George Bell, Fred McGriff and John Olerud each singled to drive in three runs, giving Toronto a 6-0 lead.

Tom Henke pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 11th save and the Red Sox' Wes Gardner fell to 1-4.

In other AL action, New York nipped Milwaukee 5-4, Oakland pounded Detroit 12-7, Baltimore beat Cleveland 3-1, Chicago edged California 2-1, Texas pummeled Minnesota 8-0 and Seattle defeated Kansas City 3-2.

In the NL it was: Philadelphia 7, Pittsburgh 2; New York 6, St. Louis 3; San Diego 4, San Francisco 3; Montreal 3, Chicago 2; Cincinnati 9, Atlanta 8; and Los Angeles 3, Houston 2.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Yankees 5, Brewers 4

At Milwaukee, Roberto Kelly homered with two outs in the ninth inning to lift New York. Kelly lofted a 1-0 pitch off reliever Chuck Crim, 2-3, just inside the right field foul pole for his third homer. Lee Guetterman, 4-2,

Athletics 12, Tigers 7

At Detroit, Terry Steinbach belted a grand slam in the fourth inning after hitting a two-run single to collect a career-high six RBI and Bob Welch won his eighth straight game, leading Oakland. Welch raised his record to 11-2 with a six-hitter over six innings, walking and striking out none. The Tigers' Dan Petry fell to 5-4.

Orioles 3, Indians 1

At Cleveland, Randy Milligan belted a solo home run in the ninth inning to pace Baltimore. Milligan's 11th home run made a loser of Jesse Orosco, 3-3. Pete Harnisch, 7-3, gave up five hits and one walk in eight innings. Gregg Olson finished for his 15th save.

White Sox 2, Angels 1

At Chicago, Sammy Sosa smacked his fifth homer in the fifth inning, snapping the White Sox' five-game losing streak. Barry Jones, 8-1, pitched 2 1-3 innings, allowing a hit and a walk and fanning two to get the victory. Bobby Thigpen hurled the final two innings for his 22nd save. Mark Langston, 4-7, suffered the loss.

Rangers 8, Twins 0

At Arlington, Texas, Kevin Brown pitched a four-hitter to guide the Rangers. Texas has won nine of 14 and three straight. The Twins have lost three in a row and are 1-5 on their current road trip. Brown, 9-4, struck out four and walked none. Loser Tim Drummond, 0-3, allowed eight hits and six runs in four innings.

Mariners 3, Royals 2

At Kansas City, Mo., Ken Griffey Jr. hit an inside-the-park home run in the fifth inning breaking a tie and giving Seattle the victory. Brian Holman, 8-5, gave up seven hits in eight innings for the Mariners, striking out seven and walking none. Mike Schooler pitched the ninth for his 16th save. Kansas City starter Kevin Appier dropped to 2-3.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Tehran Radio says many deaths are feared in the wake of a strong earthquake that rocked Central Asia early Thursday. The report from the Iranian capital said the quake measured more than seven on the Richter scale. NO other details were reported. From Menlo Park, California, the U-S Geological Survey reported the quake measured seven-point-seven on the Richter scale. A spokeswoman says the epicenter was in the Caspian Sea, 160 miles south of Baku, the capital of the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, and 200 miles northwest of Tehran.

Lawyers for condemned killer Judi Buenoano will ask a federal court in Orlando, Florida, Thursday morning for an 11th-hour stay of execution. Buenoano is to be electrocuted at noon for the 1971 poisoning death of her husband. If the execution proceeds, she would be the first woman put to death in Florida's electric chair... and the second woman to be executed nationally since the death penalty was reinstated in the 1970's.

44 protesters were arrested Wednesday in the first major demonstration of ''Redwood Summer'' aimed at slowing the felling of trees in the Northwest's ancient forests. Some 250 environmental demonstrators took part in the rally across the road from a Louisiana-Pacific sawmill and shipping dock in Samoa, California. Behind the gate, about 75 millworkers staged a counter-protest. One worker's sign read- ''We Need Our Jobs to Feed Our Kids.''

(JUNE 21) UPI - Philadelphia has reminded Pittsburgh of the team that claimed first place in the National League East from the Pirates for one day before injuries and poor pitching plummeted the Phillies back to .500.

Aided by improved health and pitching, the Phillies beat the Pirates 7-2 Wednesday afternoon to claim their fifth victory in six games. Bruce Ruffin pitched eight effective innings and Lenny Dykstra and Tom Herr sparked the offense.

''Anytime you play the first-place team and win two in a row, that has to be a big lift,'' said Ruffin, 5-6, who gave up five hits and two runs in eight innings while walking three and striking out seven.

''We didn't face the aces of their staff. We probably will next week (when the Phillies visit Pittsburgh for a three-game series) but this has to put the thought in their minds that we're going to battle all season.''

The Pirates, 38-26, lost for the fourth time in five games and allowed the 34-30 Phillies to close within four games of the division lead held by the Pirates for all but one day since April 22. That was May 26, when the Phillies grabbed a one-half game lead.

''Anytime you play the first-place team and pick up two games, it's a plus for us,'' Philadelphia Manager Nick Leyva said. ''We're battling and starting to play good baseball again. We're pitching good, getting key hits and playing good defense and we have to do all three of those things to win.''

Dykstra went 2 for 3 and scored three runs, Herr knocked in three runs and Dickie Thon hit a solo home run as Pittsburgh starter Bob Patterson, 4-3, lasted only 2 1-3 innings.

''We stunk,'' Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said. ''Ruffin pitched good. We stunk. That's as simple as it is.''

In other NL action, New York flushed St. Louis 6-3, San Diego edged San Francisco 4-3, Montreal nipped Chicago 3-2, Cincinnati overpowered Atlanta 9-8 and Los Angeles stopped Houston 3-2.

In the AL it was: Toronto 11, Boston 0; New York 5, Milwaukee 4; Oakland 12, Detroit 7; Baltimore 3, Cleveland 1; Chicago 2, California 1; Texas 8, Minnesota 0; and Seattle 3, Kansas City 2.

Mets 6, Cardinals 3

At New York, Kevin McReynolds slammed a three-run home run and Sid Fernandez allowed three hits over six innings lifting New York. McReynolds' homer off Bryn Smith, 6-6, capped a four-run first inning for the Mets, winners of 12 of 16 games. Fernandez, 5-5, allowed one run, struck out nine and walked one.

Padres 4, Giants 3, 11 innings

At San Francisco, Mike Pagliarulo tripled in the 11th inning and scored the winning run on Shawn Abner's double that was misjudged by right fielder Rick Parker guiding San Diego. Pagliarulo tripled into the right field corner off Steve Bedrosian, 3-4. Craig Lefferts, 5-1, pitched 2 1-3 innings to get the victory while Greg Harris pitched the 11th to notch his fourth save.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

At Montreal, Wallace Johnson's pinch hit single keyed a three-run seventh inning rally, boosting Montreal. Dale Mahorcic, 1-0, pitched the seventh inning for the win giving up one hit. Dave Schmidt pitched the last two innings for his eighth save. Greg Maddux, 4-8, lost a three-hitter in the seventh.

Reds 9, Braves 8, 10 innings

At Atlanta, Billy Hatcher singled home Mariano Duncan with one out in the 10th inning to pace Cincinnati. Duncan led off with a walk off reliever Rick Luecken, 0-2. He went to second on a sacrifice by Jeff Reed. Todd Benzinger singled, moving Duncan to third. Hatcher then singled to score Duncan and help Randy Myers, the fifth Reds pitcher, improve to 2-1.

Dodgers 3, Astros 2

At Los Angeles, Mike Scioscia singled and homered to drive in all three Dodgers runs. Ramon Marinez, 8-3, struck out 10 in 6 2-3 innings to increase his league-leading strikeout total to 112. Jay Howell picked up his fourth save, striking out three, walking one and not giving up a hit in two innings. Jim Clancy, 2-7, gave up five hits, three walks and three runs, striking out five.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 21) UPI - With a warning that AIDS threatens every human being on the planet, the 6th International Conference on AIDS opened with nearly 100 arrests of protesters critical of the federal government's AIDS-related travel restrictions and its efforts to combat the disease.

Keynote speaker Eunice Kiereini, head of the World Health Organization's nursing task force in Kenya, sounded the alarm Wednesday to approximately 10,000 delegates attending the four-day conference.

''We can no longer categorize it (AIDS) as a disease threatening some races and not others, only men and not women and children,'' she said. ''Every single human being on this earth is faced with AIDS threat.''

The National Academy of Sciences released a report concluding that the AIDS epidemic will broaden its attack on the United States over the next decade, striking more women, teenagers and others once thought at low risk.

The AIDS virus has infected at least 6 million people worldwide, including about 1 million Americans. More than 136,000 AIDS cases have been reported in the United States since the epidemic was detected in 1981 and more than 83,000 have died, more than the number of Americans killed in combat in the Vietnam and Korean wars combined. The World Health Organization estimates at least 300,000 people have died of AIDS around the globe since the disease was first detected.

About 100 international groups are boycotting the conference because of the U.S. ban on visitors who have AIDS or have tested positive for the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

Conference co-chairman John Ziegler wore a red armband in solidarity with protesters arrested outside the Moscone Center.

''This conference ... opposes U.S. immigration policy in the strongest possible terms,'' Ziegler told delegates who stood in silence in support of groups boycotting the conference because of the immigration regulations.

During the opening ceremony, nearly 100 people were arrested outside as they moved from a designated area past barricades where one-by-one they were arrested, photographed, and driven away in buses.

No arrests occurred inside the convention center, where several HIV-infected delegates, including Peter Staley of New York's AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, or ACT UP, delivered speeches attacking the federal government's response to the AIDS epidemic and President Bush's failure to lift the travel rule or even attend the conference.

''There is a man who could have prevented these absurdities. This is a man who has said he would like to see a kinder, gentler nation,'' Staley said as a slide of Bush flashed upon a giant screen.

Many members of the packed auditorium stood at Staley's urging to chant, ''Three-hundred-thousand dead from AIDS - Where is George?''

Bush refused two invitations to address the conference, choosing instead to attend a fund-raising event for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a leader in efforts to restrict travel and employment of people with AIDS, Staley said.

''I would like to say how sorry I am, and how embarrassed as an American, that our country - whose tradition serves as a proud beacon for emerging democracies - should persist in such misguided and irrational current policy,'' Dr. June Osborn, head of the U.S. National AIDS Commission, said at the conference's opening ceremony.

But Osborn, who dedicated her remarks to people who have died of AIDS and groups boycotting the meeting, added: ''We must learn to cope usefully with anger. There is room, and cause, for anger ..., but it must be transformed into resolve in order to be useful.''

Although the conference is the leading scientific forum for AIDS research and some promising new findings are expected to be reported, no major advancements in the development of a vaccine or treatment are anticipated.

Since AIDS was first diagnosed among U.S. homosexual men nearly a decade ago, HIV has been isolated, tests have been developed to protect the blood supply and some drugs have been developed to slow the disease's progression.

Arawn Eibhlyn, of ACT UP San Francisco, led Wednesday's march through downtown Market Street, which tied up the cable car system at a popular tourist boarding site and ended at a fountain where a marathon AIDS vigil was held last year.

''We want access to treatments, to drugs and to all aspects of AIDS advances,'' said Eibhlyn, who added that ACT UP also was marching to expose the flaws in the highly touted San Francisco model of AIDS care.

''People are slipping through the cracks. It's a model that depends on volunteerism. It hasn't worked here and it won't work elsewhere,'' he said.

(JUNE 21) UPI - The dawning of the new season was greeted with booms of thunder and flashes of lightning across the Plains and in parts of the South as thunderstorms early Thursday marked the summer solstice.

Thunderstorms were reported in Nebraska, Oklahoma, Kentucky, Wyoming, Arkansas and Mississippi, with heavy lightning and golfball-size hail raining down on North Platte, Neb., and smaller hail dropping on Calumet, Okla., the National Weather Service said.

Summer was to officially begin at the summer solstice, which was to occur at 11:33 a.m. EDT, making Thursday the longest day of the year in the Northern Hemisphere.

The first day of summer brought no changes in the heat wave that has gripped parts of the South for the last several days.

Hot weather was predicted again for the region, where records were broken or tied Wednesday in seven cities. Macon, Ga., hit 102 degrees, breaking the record of 100 degrees set in 1970 and Tuscon, Ariz., hit 109 degrees, tying a 1958 mark.

An excessive heat advisory was posted for much of north Texas Thursday, as temperatures in the upper 90s throughout the region were expected to produce heat indexes of 105 to 110 degrees.

In California and Arizona summer came with a scorcher. In San Francisco it was 91, which is 23 degrees above normal. In Sacramento, Calif., it was 105, and in Phoenix, Ariz., it was 113.

Clear skies covered the Pacific Coast Thursday, but a slight cooling was beginning everywhere except in Arizona where hot, dry weather was so entrenched that forecasters predicted no relief for at least five days.

Parts of the Midwest grappled with flood waters as several days of heavy rains kept rivers at or near their banks. The South Skunk River at Oskaloosa, Iowa, crested Wednesday at a record 22.5 feet, more than 7 feet over flood stage.

In central Illinois, crews were searching for a member of the Washburn rescue squad who was washed away when a bridge collapsed and his ambulance plunged into storm-swollen Richland Creek.

Cloudy skies prevailed over most of New England early Thursday. In Boston, the temperature dropped to a chilly 59 degrees, but 93 percent humidity rate kept the atmosphere muggy.

Light fog was reported on Cape Cod and over parts of Connecticut and New Hampshire. Skies were hazy over western Massachusetts and Providence, R.I.

Mist coated Portland, Maine, where the temperature was 57 degrees at 2 a.m.

Skies were mostly cloudy in Pennsylvania, with areas of showers and thunderstorms. In Maryland, Delaware and southern New Jersey, skies were cloudy with some showers and locally heavy rain in western Maryland and thunderstorms in West Virginia.

LONDON (JUNE 21) UPI - The first day of summer broke quietly at Stonehenge Thursday, ending several years of confrontration between sun worshipers, nomads and the police who have barred them from reaching the ancient stones in an annual rite.

The 200 people who breached the 4-mile exclusion zone surrounding the circle of stones on the Salisbury Plain, 80 miles southwest of London, were outnumbered by 800 police, said Wiltshire Police Inspector John Mason.

Twenty-six people were arrested, 20 for violating an order closing the Stone Age relic through Sunday, five for drug offenses and one for stealing an automobile, he said.

''We're very pleased that not all that many travelers showed up compared with previous years,'' Mason said.

English Heritage, responsible for protecting Britain's antiquities, said it was anxious to open discussions with police and the public to consider reopening the monument for summer solstice in future years.

As on each cloudless morning of June 21, the first rays of the dawn of the longest day of the year were framed by the main arch at Stonehenge.

Druids once conducted a solstice ceremony within the circle and some people believe the event is magical. Millions have flocked to the site over the decades.

Police were enforcing a Wiltshire Council order that prohibits processions within a 4-mile radius of Stonehenge through June 24. The edict was issued for a second year to protect the monument and prevent a repeat of violence that occurred two years ago when 5,000 people came to the site.

About 1,000 people hurling rocks, iron bars and bottles clashed with police at Stonehenge in 1988, turning the mystical dawn rite into a riot under the floodlights of a police helicopter that ended with 115 arrests.

Last year, 261 people hoping to reach the ancient monument were arrested 2 miles away. About 800 police from 12 forces were deployed.

Local landowners also obtained injunctions to prevent people from camping on their land.

Most travelers this year said they decided to avoid the risk of approaching Stonehenge and instead would head to the Glastonbury festival, 40 miles away.

The Musicians Network issued a flier advertising a ''birthday suit party'' Thursday, and urging readers to ''do the Stonehenge streak.''

MIAMI (JUNE 21) UPI - The U.S. government, admitting its prosecution of former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega is extraordinary, will ask foreign countries to release millions of dollars of his assets to pay his defense.

The government made the concession Wednesday in an out-of-court agreement with Noriega's attorneys, who had threatened to withdraw from the case because of lack of funds to pay for Noriega's defense on drug-trafficking charges.

''The government decided it was in the best interest of all parties to resolve this issue once and for all,'' Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Sullivan said. ''We entered into this voluntary agreement to recognize the unique circumstances we are operating under.''

The agreement was a switch for the government, which had opposed unfreezing the assets claiming they were the proceeds of drug sales and had agreed to pay for Noriega's defense with tax dollars.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler approved the new agreement during a 10-minute hearing, which Noriega did not attend.

''This agreement certainly does have the support of the court,'' Hoeveler said. ''I want to commend counsel for working it out.''

The earlier deal was rejected by Hoeveler after the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that Noriega would be entitled to one attorney who would be paid $75 an hour, far less than the $250 to $350 that private lawyers typically receive.

Sullivan said the government agreed to ask the countries that had frozen $4.5 million to $6 million of Noriega's assets to release them to allow the case to proceed.

Sullivan said the agreement had the approval at the highest level of the Justice Department, and that it ''basically sets out that the U.S. government will make its best effort to persuade governments to unfreeze accounts that are frozen in Europe.''

Hoeveler said he would put the unfrozen assets in an escrow account. The money is part of an estimated $20 million in Noriega assets frozen last year at the request of U.S. officials.

Lead defense attorney Frank Rubino said the money would come from accounts in ''a half-dozen'' European countries. He told reporters he and Noriega were satisfied with the agreement.

''We feel that with that amount of money, we can adequately represent him. We can hire the experts we need, the investigators we need, all the people we need to do a fair and good job with the general,'' Rubino said after the hearing.

"The general is obviously happy and he also thanks the government for allowing him to proceed forward with the lawyers of his choice to represent him,'' he said.

''The American public should be very happy to hear that their tax dollars are not funding Noriega's defense team,'' Rubino said.

At the hearing, Washington lawyer Gregory Craig told Hoeveler he planned to file a federal civil suit on behalf of the government of Panama, which he said has an interest in Noriega's assets.

''The government of Panama intends to bring civil suit against Gen. Noriega in the Southern District of Florida in an effort to recover funds and assets rightfully belonging to the people of Panama,'' Craig said after the hearing. ''We will be filing the suit within a couple of weeks.''

The suit would seek $100 million in compensatory damages and $5 billion in punitive damages, he said.

Rubino rejected Craig's assertion that the Panamanian government could have a greater interest in the assets than Noriega's defense.

''I'm kind of shocked that anyone wants to deprive someone of the right to defend himself in a criminal matter to enrich themselves,'' Rubino said. ''I just don't think that will happen.''

Hoeveler last week ordered prosecutors to either prove Noriega's assets were obtained through drug trafficking or be prepared to give up their demand that the funds remain impounded.

Defense attorneys have maintained that Noriega received $11 million from U.S. intelligence agencies and the Drug Enforcement Administration over the years and $7 million from foreign sources that could be used to pay for his defense.

Prosecutors have said those figures are inflated.

The release of the assets will increase the chances of the defense being ready for trial by Hoeveler's January target date, Rubino said.

BANGKOK, Thailand (JUNE 21) UPI - The Vietnamese-installed government of Cambodia has arrested government officials for treason, foiling a ''reactionary coup d'etat'' backed by foreign spy agencies, official radio said Thursday.

The broadcast late Wednesday said the subsequent sacking of three prominent liberals was ''routine'' and unconnected with any coup.

An unconfirmed report by the radio of the Khmer Rouge resistance group said security officials tried to arrest three officials this week and were investigating two more cabinet ministers.

''The enemies - including foreign espionage circles - took advantage of the political and economic liberalization policy of our party and state to set up a traitorous force within our inner ranks with the intention of overthrowing the State of Cambodia through attacks from the rear in addition to military attacks from the front,'' the radio said.

It said foreign espionage services set up a ''secret reactionary organization for subversive activities'' within government ranks and planned to overthrow the government between June and August.

''This would have taken the form of a reactionary coup d' etat if our party and state had failed to prevent it,'' the radio said.

It gave no further details but appeared to be referring to the arrests of at least six government officials, including Transport Minister Ung Phan and two officials of the defense ministry, in late May.

Ung Phan was known for his personal connections with Prime Minister Hun Sen.

Sources in Phnom Penh said last week the six men were arrested for secretly setting up a new political party to challenge the Communist Party's monopoly.

They were also being questioned on their connections to the U.S.-backed resistance that is fighting the government set up following the 1979 Vietnamese invasion, the sources said.

There had been speculation that they would be freed once the prime minister returned from an overseas trip but the radio report indicated the men would be charged with treason.

The radio denied ''Western propaganda'' that the arrests were part of a crackdown on a democracy movement.

''The punishment of this act of treason does not mean a suppression of the aspirations for democracy,'' it said.

The radio confirmed reports that a number of senior officials were removed from their positions but it did not identify them and denied the changes were connected with the arrests.

Government sources said those moved to less important positions were all known as liberals and included Men Sam An, the only female member of the party politburo; Khieu Kanharith, the outspoken editor of the state-owned Kampuchea newspaper, and Health Minister Yith Kim Seng.

Khieu Kanharith, who was also known for his close connections to Hun Sen, said the transfers were ''a warning to liberals.''

The three apparently retained their positions in the National Assembly.

The Khmer Rouge radio quoted ''reliable sources'' as saying Defense Minister Tie Banh and Minister to the Prime Minister's Office Hor Nam Hong were also under investigation ''on account of their close relations with foreign traders.''

It said Heng Samkai, the brother of President Heng Samrin and governor of Svay Rieng Province, was suspected of ''hiding arms.''

The radio offered little substantiation for the reports and analysts in Bangkok said they could be merely attempts to increase suspicion within the Phnom Penh government.

The Khmer Rouge also reported its troops captured a district town while the government said 99 guerrillas were killed in fighting near the Thai border

''On June 15 at 5 a.m., our national resistance forces attacked, liberated and controlled Thmar Bang district seat at the mouth of Piphat river,'' Khmer Rouge radio said.

It said seven government soldiers were killed in the 30-minute battle for the town in Koh Kong province, less than 20 miles from Thailand.

The radio did not say if the Khmer Rouge would try to hold the town.

The three-party Cambodian resistance launched a rainy season drive in the past three weeks that has included attacks on three province capitals and numerous district towns.

Phnom Penh radio said Thursday that from June 11-16 the resistance ''continued to carry out destructive and provocative activities.''

Government ''mopping-up operations'' killed 99 guerrillas and captured 34 others in fighting near the border with Thailand, it said.

Resistance sources said the upsurge in fighting was meant to take advantage of the rain that hampers movement of the government' s heavy Soviet-supplied equipment and to exploit internal political divisions in the government.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (JUNE 21) UPI - Opposition parties asked for a vote of confidence in Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhaven's Cabinet Thursday amid political tension between the government and senior military commanders.

''If this government is allowed to continue the administration, there will be more problems that are difficult to solve,'' said Narong Wongwan, leader of the Solidarity party, the largest opposition party.

The five opposition parties control only 127 seats in the 358-seat lower house of Parliament, but conflicts within the ruling six-party coalition and questions over military support for the government made it possible the no-confidence debate could turn into a serious challenge to the 23-month-old Chatichai government.

Narong called the Cabinet corrupt and inefficient.

''Most of the ministers were apparently involved in corruption and intended to use their power in order to get personal benefits,'' he said.

The no-confidence debate is expected to start next month and will be televised live nationwide.

The opposition move came amid tension between Chatichai and military commanders led by former deputy prime minister Chavalit Yongchaiyudh.

Chavalit, a former army commander-in-chief, resigned from the Cabinet on June 11 in protest Chatichai's failure to discipline a fellow minister for hinting that Chavalit and his wife were corrupt.

Senior army officers angrily denounced the charges as insults to the military and rallied troops to protest the accusations.

Chatichai made repeated attempts to woo the 58-year-old general back into the government, but Chavalit has so far rejected every offer, saying he would only consider an appointment to special advisor to the military Supreme Command.

Military support has long been essential to government stability in Thailand, which has seen 16 coups or coup attempts since the end of absolute monarchy in 1932.

Analysts said it was unlikely the military would risk an outright takeover attempt while the country is peaceful and prosperous.

But the military wields considerable power through its representatives in the upper house of Parliament, its control of security agencies, its ownership of television and radio stations and its large budget for civilian programs.

Chavalit is widely expected to either form his own party or join an existing party to mount a challenge against Chatichai, but he has not yet stated his intentions.

The National Assembly of Journalists Wednesday added to the pressure on Chatichai by denouncing the government's proposed new press bill which maintains the government's power to shut down newspapers without a court order.

TAIPEI, TAIWAN (JUNE 21) UPI - A Taiwan-born pop singer who was arrested in Beijing before the anniversary of the Tiananmen Square crackdown said Thursday that Chinese officials had ordered him to choose between going to jail or returning to Taiwan.

Hou Dejian, one of three dissidents detained before the June 3 anniversary said Chinese officials presented him with the options after he refused to confess to wrongdoings.

Hou, 33, arrived in northern Taiwan on a fishing boat early Wednesday morning after spending some 50 hours at sea, the last of three dissidents to resurface after being detained by the Chinese government.

''The officials told me that I had two choices - to go to jail or to return to Taiwan,'' Hou said in an interview with the Chinese-language United Daily News. ''They said they hoped that I would choose Taiwan.''

Another dissident, Zhou Duo, 43, was freed Sunday, while the third, Gao Xin, 33, told friends by telephone on Tuesday that he had been released after being held in a Beijing suburb.

Hou said Chinese security officials put him on a coastal patrol craft in Fuchou in the southern province of Fujian on June 18 before transferring him to a Taiwan fishing boat they had randomly flagged down.

In Beijing, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Jinhua refused to comment on whether Hou had been ''expelled'' from China, saying this was not an issue for the Foreign Ministry.

Earlier, the Chinese government had continually rebuffed inquiries on whether the three dissidents had been detained.

Taiwan's Bureau of Entry and Exit Vice Director Liu Feng-tsun said the government would most likely allow Hou to resettle in Taiwan, despite that he entered the country illegally.

''No specific laws exist on how to deal with a case like Hou's,'' said Liu. ''But we will probably classify him as a Chinese dissident and let him stay here.''

Taiwan initiated a one-year program last July offering political asylum to Chinese dissidents fleeing a government crackdown on China's pro-democracy movement last June.

The three dissidents disappeared May 30 on the eve of a risky scheduled news conference at which they had planned to issue an open letter asking China's hard-line leaders to free political prisoners held since last June.

Hou said security officers took him from his Beijing home on the night of May 30 to a suburban detention center, where he was asked to sign a statement saying he had engaged in counter-revolutionary activities.

''Over the next two weeks, I met with almost all of their high-level security officials with the exception of the chief,'' Hou said. ''They asked me to retract statements I had made in interviews with the press.''

''They tried both persuasion and threats, but I told them making a false confession would only be fooling them and fooling myself,'' he said.

But Hou said he was treated well by his captors, to the extent that they postponed his voyage back to Taiwan due to high waves.

Gao, a communist party member and former editor of Beijing Normal University's newspaper, reportedly had been allowed to go fishing during part of his time in detention.

After turning himself in to the Taipei authorities shortly after midnight Wednesday, Hou spent the greater part of the day being questioned by the prosecutor, his lawyer Chiu Re-chung said.

The singer, who defected to mainland China in 1983, participated in a hunger strike last June in Tienanmen Square just before Chinese troops moved in and crushed the movement.

He sought refuge in the Australian embassy in Beijing for two months after the crackdown, finally coming out on his own after government guarantees that he would not be prosecuted.

MIAMI (JUNE 21) UPI - A $1.5 million advertising blitz helped Rep. Bill Nelson gain on his rival for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, but former Sen. Lawton Chiles still holds a solid lead, a survey showed Thursday.

The poll sponsored by The Miami Herald and WCIX-TV showed that 55 percent of likely Democratic voters support Chiles, while 38 percent back Nelson. Another 7 percent were undecided.

An April survey found Chiles leading Nelson by 58 percent to 24 percent. However, the earlier survey was completed before Nelson began his television campaign, which concluded Friday.

Nelson gained much of his new support among previously undecided voters, the Herald reported.

The survey also showed that Chiles would easily defeat Republican Gov. Bob Martinez, if the election were held today, while a race between Nelson and Martinez would be a toss-up.

The survey showed Chiles leading Martinez, 53 percent to 38 percent. The results represent a 9-point gain for Chiles over the April survey results, the Herald said.

Nelson also outpolled the governor, 46 percent to 41 percent, but because the survey had a margin of error of 4 percentage points, the potential match-up was deemed to close to call.

The results are based on the responses of 627 likely voters polled over the weekend by Mason-Dixon Opinion Research, the Herald said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The first-quarter gross national product advanced a better-than-expected 1.9 percent and after-tax corporate profits gained 1.1 percent in the quarter, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

Inflation was moderate in January, February and March.

The government's preliminary GNP report, which was issued last month, estimated an increase of 1.3 percent in the nation's total output of goods and services. Economists awaiting the revised data expected identical results.

In dollar amounts, the first quarter real GNP increased $19.3 billion - adjusted for inflation - while after-tax corporate profits were up $1.8 billion, according to the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

First-quarter personal consumption edged up by 1.6 percent, while business investment leaped 7.7 percent, the Commerce Department said. Exports of goods and services soared 12.8 percent in the quarter and imports were held to a 3 percent gain.

Government purchases of goods and services rose by 3.4 percent.

The 1.9 percent increase in the real GNP in the first three months of the year follows an increase of 1.1 percent in the fourth quarter of 1989 and a gain of 3 percent in the third quarter of last year.

In January, February and March 1989, the real GNP was up 3.7 percent, the department said.

After-tax corporate profits were up 2.8 percent in the fourth quarter of last year after plunging 5.4 percent in the third quarter and tumbling 7.2 percent in the second quarter, the report said.

All the figures are adjusted for seasonal factors, such as weather, and are presented at an annual rate.

The implicit price deflator, a barometer of inflation linked to the GNP, climbed to 5.4 percent in the first quarter of 1990 - mainly because of higher food and energy prices in the wake of December's brutal cold snap.

In the fourth quarter of 1989, the inflation rate stood at 3.2 percent.

The latest report confirms the domestic economy's pattern of slow growth.

''Inventories hold the key to near-term growth,'' said analysts at Mitsubishi Bank in New York. ''Until the inventory slowdown is complete, the economy - and manufacturing, in particular, will remain sluggish.

''Catalysts for improving business activity are at hand, but prospects for an improving economy could fizzle,'' the analysts said. ''To be sure there are lingering problems in the U.S. economy but with a little bit of luck and no major surprises, the economy will mend.''

''Second quarter real GNP is expected to expand by 2.3 percent while the (third quarter) growth is likely to be around 3 percent - boosted by modest inventory accumulation,'' they indicated.

(JUNE 21) UPI - A vote is coming up in the House today on one of the most emotional issues of the year... a constitutional amendment that would ban flag-burning.

President Bush is pressing for passage of the amendment against flag desecration. But amendment opponents say they are confident they can hold supporters to well under the two-thirds vote necessary from both the House and the Senate for the amendment to be sent to the states for ratification.

House leaders set aside six hours for debate on the amendment. A late afternoon vote is expected.

Bush said last night he'll fight for the amendment. But he noted the amendment is an emotional issue- quote- ''on which Americans of good faith can and do disagree.''

House Republicans hoped to win a weekend reprieve to get veterans groups to lobby for the proposal. But the Democratic leadership put the amendment before the House today.

Regardless of the outcome in the House, a Senate vote is guaranteed before the Independence Day recess under an agreement worked out among Senate leaders. Any amendment approved in Congress must be approved by three quarters of the states.

The Sixth International Conference on AIDS opened in San Francisco yesterday with nearly 100 arrests of protesters.

The protestors were criticizing the federal government's AIDS-related travel restrictions and its efforts to combat the disease. About 100 international groups are boycotting the conference because of the U-S ban on visitors who have AIDS or have tested positive for the AIDS-causing H-I-V virus.

World Health Organization official Eunice Kiereini was yesterday's keynote speaker. She warned the approximately 10-thousand delegates that AIDS threatens every human being on the planet.

In her words... ''We can NO longer categorize it as a disease threatening some races and NOT others, only men and NOT women and children.''

The National Academy of Sciences released a report yesterday with some startling results. It concluded that the AIDS epidemic will broaden its attack on the United States over the next decade... striking more women, teen-agers and others once thought at low risk.

The AIDS virus has infected at least six-Million people worldwide, including about one-Million Americans.

LIMA, PERU (JUNE 21) UPI - President-elect Alberto Fujimori plans to visit the United States, Korea and Japan before taking office July 28 and to begin a drastic reconstruction of Peru's shattered economy as soon as he is sworn in, news reports said Thursday.

Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants who came from political obscurity to win a run-off election this month, earlier had announced that he also would visit Canada and Europe but they were scratched from his agenda without explanation.

Speaking to the press before meeting with his economic team Wednesday, Fujimori said he would begin a two-week international tour June 28 with a visit to the United States.

He also vowed that he would stop the government from printing money without proper backing - a common practice considered by economists as a leading cause cause of Peru's four-digit inflation, which in 1989 reached 2,755 percent.

Fujimori also announced a tax reform plan aimed at boosting tax revenues by stepping up and tightening collection procedures.

Tax revenues currently account for just 4 percent of Peru's Gross Domestic Product, down from about 15 percent a decade ago.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Arab nations plan a meeting today to discuss how to cut the United States out of its mediation role in the Middle East.

The move was prompted by President Bush's announcement that he's suspending diplomatic contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Israel and Congress welcomed the president's decision... while Arab nations said it showed that the United States is NO longer a viable mediator in the peace process.

An Arab League spokesman said 22 nations in the organization will revive a proposal for an international conference under United Nations sponsorship.

P-L-O officials and U-S Ambassador Robert Pelletreau have been meeting in Tunisia periodically for 18 months. Bush broke off the contacts yesterday because the P-L-O refused to condemn a splinter group's attempt to attack Israel and refused to take steps to discipline the group's leader.

Bush says he gave the P-L-O ample time to deal with the issue. The president says he's prepared to promptly resume contacts when the P-L-O fulfills U-S conditions.

The first rays of dawn of the longest day of the year were framed by the main arch at Stonehenge today... as on each cloudless morning of June 21st.

Few people saw the sun at the ancient circle of stones in England. Police out-numbered civilians in the area by four-to-one... keeping most of them well away from Stonehenge.

800 police were waiting for the sun worshipers, nomads and modern-day Druids on Salisbury Plain, 80 miles southwest of London. About 200 people breached the four-mile exclusion zone around the site in attempting to conduct their annual celebration.

Police say they arrested 26 people... 20 for violating an order closing Stonehenge through Sunday, five for drug offenses and one for stealing a car.

People are being kept away from the Stone Age monument for a second year to protect the site and prevent violence. Two years ago, about one-thousand people fought with police at Stonehenge.

Most would-be travelers to Stonehenge this year said they decided to go instead to the Glastonbury festival, 40 miles away.

BEIJING (JUNE 21) UPI - China said Thursday that Beijing and Jakarta have resolved ''technical issues'' blocking restoration of full diplomatic ties after 23 years of enmity but stopped short of saying agreement had been reached.

Chinese officials confirmed a May 30 announcement by Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas's that he would travel to Beijing July 1 for three days of talks with his Chinese counterpart, Qian Qichen.

Both sides are hopeful that restored diplomatic ties will strengthen bilateral trade, which has been burgeoning since 1985, when Jakarta lifted a ban on direct commercial links.

Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Li Jinhua said China's relations with Indonesia have improved rapidly in recent years and suggested that little now stands in the way of full diplomatic ties, which Jakarta severed in 1967.

''Due to the friendly consultations between the two sides and their joint efforts, the technical issues regarding the restoration of diplomatic relations between China and Indonesia have now been settled,'' Li said at a weekly ministry news briefing.

Li indicated that China is not troubled by Indonesia's forcible annexation in 1975 of East Timor, a Roman Catholic portion of Timor Island that had won independence from Portugal. About 100,000 of East Timor's 600,000 people have died resisting incorporation in predominantly Moslem Indonesia and Jakarta has been accused of serious human rights abuses there.

Li made it clear that China views East Timor as an internal Indonesian issue, saying bilateral relations should be governed by China's oft-cited ''five principles of peaceful coexistence'' - one of which is non-interference in other nations' internal affairs.

Li declined to say whether the two sides would issue a joint declaration laying out a timetable for renewing full diplomatic ties. ''We hope to see the process of restoration completed soon,'' she said.

Jakarta cut diplomatic ties with Beijing in 1967, two years after a failed coup attempt led by Indonesian communists inspired by China's communist revolution.

Jakarta accused Beijing of backing the insurrection, which led to the downfall of President Sukarno, but China consistently denied the accusation.

Alatas announced on May 30 that he would visit China on July 1, saying the two sides had resolved a dispute over repayment of debt owed to China by Indonesia, paving the way for final steps toward re-establishing full diplomatic ties.

''It is not the intent of this trip to finalize normalization,'' Alatas said. ''The date (for normalization) is yet to be decided.''

WINSTON-SALEM, NC (JUNE 21) UPI - Several hundred youngsters converged Thursday for an international double Dutch jump-rope contest that also encourages the participants to avoid drugs and stay in school.

Three-hundred teams from 20 states and two foreign countries - Canada and Sweden - will compete in 10 categories in the 17th Annual American Double Dutch League World Invitational Championship this weekend.

''It's important because it builds self-esteem and teaches them to work together,'' said Janice Melvins, vice president of the American Double Dutch League. ''The theme is 'Rope, Not Dope.'

''We have to offer them a positive alternative to drugs. We can say 'Just Say No' to drugs all day but that alone doesn't work,'' Melvins said. ''Also, the youngsters must have good grades. We are teaching them that they must go to school and get an education.''

Talk show host and actress Oprah Winfrey will be on hand Saturday to give the trophies to the winning teams.

''We have a have a speed round, free-style, singles, doubles and compulsory events,'' said Melanie Popper, a spokeswoman for the league. ''Some of the moves are intricate - flips, turns and jumps. It's quite spectacular.''

Many of the people involved in the double Dutch competition are police officers. The competition was started in 1973 in New York City by two police detectives, David Walker and Mike Williams, Melvins said.

Since then, double Dutch has spread across the world, Melvins said.

''Last year, we had a team from Washington, D.C., that went to Russia in a culture exchange program,'' she said. ''I was in East Berlin and West Berlin last week with a team invited to perform on television there. They like the theme of 'Rope Not Dope.'''

Double Dutch has been played in the United States since the 18th century when Dutch settlers brought the two-rope game with them.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (JUNE 21) UPI - The government has agreed to a key demand to release political prisoners and hopes to start negotiations with blacks on a post-apartheid constitution early next year, a top official said Thursday.

Constitutional Development Minister Gerrit Viljoen, the manager of President Frederik de Klerk's racial reforms, said in a statement the government considers itself part of the ''anti-apartheid struggle'' and expects power sharing negotiations to begin in six months.

His remarks were in response to a report in the Star, a Johannesburg newspaper, Thursday that Pretoria agreed to release up to 1,000 political prisoners, which the African National Congress had demanded before agreeing to power sharing negotiations.

The paper said the information was leaked from a joint government and ANC working group.

Viljoen said the government accepted the group's recommendations to release the prisoners but that the ANC is ''once more dragging its feet'' by not making its stand clear on the joint report.

Viljoen said it is unfair for the ANC to present the government as ''an apartheid regime'' after de Klerk has instituted a number of racial reforms - including legalizing the ANC and releasing ANC leader Nelson Mandela from prison.

''The government is ... part of the anti-apartheid struggle,'' he said.

The ANC contends it will not begin power-sharing negotiations until the last vestiges of the white majority government's apartheid system are eliminated.

The working group's report recommends the government release all political prisoners and that the ANC promise to abandon its armed struggle, which it has already done in theory, if not officially, the Star said.

It said Pretoria agreed to allow the phased return of political exiles suspected of violence, another key ANC condition for talks.

About 20,000 exiles, some of them suspected criminals, are waiting to return to South Africa.

The government and the ANC agreed to create the working group in May to resolve disputes in the way of power sharing negotiations. The group made its report to the government and the ANC executive council May 21.

De Klerk has already acceded to some ANC demands. He lifted a 4-year-old state of emergency throughout most of the country on June 8.

The ANC also has stipulated that government troops be removed from black townships but de Klerk has argued only the army can quell the worst of the internecine violence.

Earlier Thursday, bomb blasts damaged a police station and magistrate's court in strife-torn Natal province in violence police blamed on political factions. No group claimed responsiblity for the attacks.

Mandela, deputy president of the ANC, is expected to respond to the recommendations when he returns July 18 from a 45-day tour of Africa, Europe and North America.

ORLANDO, FL (JUNE 21) UPI - A federal judge issued a 24-hour stay Thursday blocking the execution of Judi Buenoano, less than four hours before the ''black widow'' killer was scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair for poisoning her husband for his insurance money.

''We just received word that the court in Orlando has granted a 24-hour stay,'' said Bob MacMaster, a spokesman for the Florida Department of Corrections in Starke.

U.S. District Judge Patricia C. Fawsett issued the stay at 8:12 a.m. EDT, less than four hours before Buenoano was to have been killed at 12:01 p.m. in the electric chair, which has been the subject of questions about its efficiency.

''The stay is in effect until 8:12 a.m. tomorrow,'' McMaster said.

MacMaster said the execution would be rescheduled. Meanwhile, the hearing before Fawsett continued Thursday, a clerk said.

Buenoano was convicted of the arsenic murder of her husband in 1971 and she also has been convicted of drowning her quadriplegic son and trying to murder a boyfriend. She also is suspected of poisoining a common-law husband and insurance money is believed to have been her motivation in each case.

Buenoano would be the second woman executed in the United States since the Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment in 1976 and the 131st person put to death since executions resumed. She would be the 10th person executed in the country this year and second this week.

She also would be the first woman executed in Florida.

Buenoano's lawyers had been expected to file a motion for the stay based on their claims that a malfunctioning electric chair could subject

Buenoano her to cruel and unusual punishment.

The Florida Supreme Court rejected the claim Wednesday.

Buenoano was sentenced to death for the 1971 arsenic poisoning murder of her husband, James Goodyear, in Orlando. Buenoano is her translation into Spanish of her husband's name.

The state appeals court rejected Buenoano's motion on a 4-3 vote. The majority said it had faith in the Department of Corrections claim that any malfunction had been repaired since flames were seen around Jesse Tafero's head when he was electrocuted May 4 for the murder of two police officers.

''Death by electrocution is not cruel and unusual punishment, and one malfunction is not sufficient to justify a judicial inquiry into the Department of Corrections' competence,'' the majority opinion said.

Lawyers for Buenoano departed for Orlando as soon as the high court ruling was handed down to carry their appeals to the U.S. District Court there.

A minority led by Justice Leander Shaw said Buenoano was entitled to a full hearing before a judge so her lawyers could present evidence supporting assertions the DOC has not solved the problem with Florida's electric chair.

In a separate dissenting opinion, Justice Gerald Kogan went further, warning that if true, Buenoano's arguments might fortell more ghastly malfunctions in the future.

''I believe that any electrical malfunction that results in needless charring of human flesh or an unnecessarily slow death is cruel and unusual punishment, and thus if forbidden by the state and federal constitutions,'' Kogan wrote.

In another separate dissenting opinion, Justice Rosemary Barkett said the court majority seemed to place undue faith in the state's judgment about whether the chair would inflict the sort of cruel and unusual punishment forbidden by the Constitution.

''She can die taking comfort in knowing that her death may contribute to some other person's relief if her death, and perhaps countless others, prove to be as horrible as Tafero's. Only then, according to the majority, will there be a sufficient number of malfunctions to justify even a judicial inquiry,'' Barkett wrote.

''This is a bizarre twist of death penalty jurisprudence,'' she added.

Buenoano also has been given a life sentence in the 1980 drowning of her quadriplegic son, Michael, 19. She drew a 12-year sentence for the 1983 attempted murder of her boyfriend John Gentry, and is suspected of poisoning her common-law husband Bobby Joe Morris in Colorado in 1981.

The state says her motives were to collect on insurance policies. One prosecutor dubbed her the ''black widow'' killer for preying off the lives of her loved ones, and the name stuck.

The DOC blamed the problems with Tafero's execution on a defective sponge which, soaked in brine, is used in a metal skull cap to conduct 2,000 volts of electricity into the condemned.

LONDON (JUNE 21) UPI - Air force personnel Thursday discovered a bomb planted at the perimeter of their base in suburban London and evacuated about 400 people before the device exploded, damaging a building but causing no injuries.

There were no claims of responsiblity but the British Broadcasting Corp. reported two people had been detained during the evacuation.

Officials said the explosion bore similarities to previous attacks by the Irish Republican Army, which has targeted low security British military facilities as part of its campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Personnel doing a routine security check of the Royal Air Force supply depot found a blue rucksack at the perimeter fence of the facility in the northwestern London district of Stanmore Park.

They contacted police and immediately evacuated about 400 people from the base and an adjacent old person's home.

Police said the device exploded at 9.30 a.m. before a bomb disposal squad arrived. The blast virtually destroyed a building which is now used as a photography club by personnel, they said.

Wing Commander Simon Appleton said a full alert was in place, and the successful evacuation showed security precautions were adequate.

''We were able to take the appropriate actions and minimize the consequences,'' he said.

Defense Minister Tom King condemned the incident.

''It confirms what we know, that there are some people who are determined to commit terrorist atrocities,'' he said. ''We have to stand together and give all posible assistance to the police ... and find these people.''

NEW DELHI, India (JUNE 21) UPI - The Indian government Thursday ordered all city and suburban gas stations to close nights and Sundays in an effort to curb the country's growing hunger for petroleum products.

M.S. Gurupadaswamy, the minister of petroleum and chemicals, told a news conference the move was being taken because India faces a serious shortage of petroleum, the Press Trust of India reported.

''Without resorting to harsh measures like rationing, I am trying my best to create a proper climate for curbing the needless consumption of petroleum products,'' he told the news conference.

Demand for petroleum in India has grown from 39 million tons in 1984-85 to 54 million tons in 1989-1990. Gurupadaswamy said India did not produce enough oil to meet demand and could not make up the shortfall with imports because of a shortage in foreign exchange.

The petroleum minister's directive affected all gas stations located in a 12-mile radius of any municipal area, the Press Trust said. The stations were ordered to close Sundays beginning June 24 and to remain open daily between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The restrictions were part of a package of controls announced by Gurupadaswamy, the Press Trust said. The measures were expected to curb petroleum imports by about 2.8 million tons and save about $500 million this year, the agency said.

The government also took steps to curb consumption of kerosene by industries.

The national railway system was ordered to cut diesel consumption by 10 percent and the state airline was told to hold the line on the use of aviation fuel.

CHEEKTOWAGA, NY (JUNE 21) UPI - Police called to a home where the grass was growing wild and mail had piled up found an elderly woman propped up in a living room chair. She had been dead for six months.

The woman's son, Louis Kowalewski, 47, denied his mother was dead and was taken to the Erie County Medical Center for mental evalution, police said Thursday.

Lt. Thomas Rowan said the medical examiner will conduct tests, but police believe Florence Kowalewski, 77, died of natural causes.

Police said there was a strong odor in the home and the body showed traces of mummification.

''(The son) was at home with his mother and denied she was dead when police told him,'' Rowan said. ''It's a sad case.''

Police were called Wednesday afternoon by a social worker who went to the home after receiving a notice the utilities were to be shut off.

The worker found an accumulation of mail and noticed the grass was growing wild in the yard of the home in the quiet residential neighborhood. Police found the mother's body propped in a living room chair.

The son was in the kithcen and was not alarmed or startled, Rowan said.

Rowan said police last went to the house June 13 to check on the welfare of the Kowalewskis.

''The son met the officers at the door and was very lucid,'' he said. ''They asked about his mother and he said she was not well and was in bed under doctor's orders. He said she was suffering from diabetes and cancer.''

Neighbors told police the Kowalewskis were loners. Mrs. Kowalewski was widowed for 31 years, neighbors said.

''My husband and I haven't seen her for two years,'' said Theresa Wagner, a neighbor. ''We lived next door to them for 32 years and we'd say hello to them but they kept to themselves.''

CINCINNATI (JUNE 21) UPI - Arts professionals say they are astounded by a judge's ruling that the city's Contemporary Arts Center is not a museum, a key point in the continuing controversy over a display of photographs critics say are obscene and supporters say are art.

The decision Tuesday by Hamilton County Municipal Court Judge F. David Albanese in part led him this week to deny a motion to dismiss obscenity charges against the center stemming from a spring exhibit of photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe.

One official called the ruling bizarre, since the center is not a commercial enterprise like a gallery.

The center, in a motion for dismissal, said Ohio law allows museums to display even obscene photographs for educational and cultural purposes.

But the judge said the center's 1940 articles of incorporation clearly indicate it is not an art museum under Ohio law.

Albanese ruled ''the CAC is in this case more aptly defined as a gallery according to Webster's Unified Dictionary, a room used for the showing of art.''

Arts professionals disagreed.

''In the field, a gallery is a commercial enterprise,'' said Bruce Evans, director of the Dayton, Ohio, Art Institute. ''The CAC is a museum.''

Millicent Gaudier, the director of the American Association of Museum Directors, said Wednesday the Cincinnati center belongs in its fold. ''As far as this association is concerned, we view the CAC as a museum in the true sense of the word,'' she said.

The Institute of Museum Services in Washington said it has awarded the center grants six times.

Albanese set a Sept. 24 trial date for the center on charges related to displaying two Mapplethorpe photographs that show childrens' genitals.

He postponed action on a charge of pandering obscenity, concerning five homoerotic photographs, until after an Aug. 20 hearing on a prosecution motion that the pictures should be measured individually against obscenity standards. The defense says all 175 photographs in the show should be seen as a single work of art.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - A spokesman for fallen Wall Street powerhouse Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc. Thursday said the firm's government securities subsidiary has filed for federal bankruptcy protection.

With the filing late Wednesday, Drexel Burnham Lambert Government Securities Inc., listing assets of $262.2 million and liabilities of $155.2 million, joins its parent company and 15 other Drexel subsidiaries that previously petitioned for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors.

Reeling from the collapse of the junk-bond market, the parent filed for Chapter 11 relief on Feb. 13 in the largest bankruptcy action in Wall Street history. Drexel's broker-dealer arm and 14 other units sought the same protection on May 29.

Drexel spokesman Steve Anreder said the filing is ''part of a program to consolidate all these entities into one bankruptcy case.''

''The objective is to come out with a confirmable plan that we think will maximize the value of the assets.''

Drexel and its creditors earlier this month agreed to work on a joint plan to reorganize the firm - which pioneered the use of high-risk, high-yield junk bonds that fueled the takeover frenzy of the 1980s - in hopes of bringing Drexel out of bankrutpcy in early 1991.

PARIS (JUNE 21) UPI - Suriname guerrilla leader Ronny Brunswijk arrived in Paris Thursday after being freed by police in French Guiana but was told by French police he may not leave the capital without permission.

Brunswijk, dressed casually in a jacket and sports trousers and wearing a baseball cap and dark glasses, made no comments to waiting reporters at Orly Airport other than to say he hoped to visit the Netherlands and to return to Surinam.

The guerrilla leader and two unidentified fellow travelers spent one hour with police before being allowed to enter the capital.

''France is seeking a country of asylum, preferably the Netherlands,'' a French official said.

But a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said the Dutch government had indicated it would refuse to grant Brunswijk permanent residence.

Sources said Brunswijk would be staying at the home of a doctor belonging to an organization called Internation Medical Aid, which is sponsoring his trip to Paris.

The guerrilla leader was arrested Monday at the Cayenne airport in French Guiana carrying false papers and about $26,000.

Brunswijk heads an insurgent group in the Suriname jungle that has taken over the eastern town of Moengo and a bauxite plant owned by an American company, Alcoa of Pittsburgh.

The Suriname government ordered the guerrillas out of Moengo but Brunswijk refused. The military surrounded the town and Brunswijk was arrested Monday while awaiting a plane for the Netherlands.

The military and guerrillas are believed in a standoff, with the guerrillas threatening to blow up the bauxite facility if the troops attack.

Brunswijk told officials he was turning over leadership of the guerrilla movement to his top aide and was seeking political asylum.

Brunswijk was arrested in March in the Surinamese capital of Paramaribo as part of an investigation into cocaine smuggling while he was negotiating a peace plan with President Ramsewak Shankar. He was released several days later.

KIEV, UKRAINE, USSR (JUNE 21) UPI - Hard-line Ukrainian communists bitterly assailed Mikhail Gorbachev for plunging the Communist Party into crisis and challenged him to restore order.

The Ukrainian communists, meeting at their congress held every five years, said they were displeased that Gorbachev turned down their invitation to come to Kiev to address their conclave, which began Tuesday.

The Ukrainian Communist Party, second largest in the Soviet Union, has 3.2 million members and 1,696 delegates are taking part in the congress. Foreign reporters were not allowed to watch the debate Thursday.

But Pravda Ukrainy, the daily newspaper of the Communist Party of the Ukraine, published Thursday the speeches of the delegates, who assailed Gorbachev and raised an alarm over growing tension in the coal mining region.

Nikolai Calyuk, a driver from the Khmelinitsky region, said the party has been coming under a firestorm of criticism from liberal opposition groups and he blamed Gorbachev for allowing them to raise their voices.

''I would blame the Central Commitee, the Polituburo led by the founder of perestroika, Mr. Gorbachev, for the situation,'' he said to loud applause from most of the delegates.

''Gorbachev plunged the party into debt,'' Calyuk said. ''Aware that his power as first party secretary was coming to an end, he became president (in March) to have strong power.

''If you hear me, Mr. Gorbachev, answer my question. What power did you lack to introduce order in the country as the party leader?'' he said, drawing deafening applause.

The opposition group in the Kiev said the Ukrainian Communist Party is a conservative group and that about 30 percent of the delegates who represent the so-called Democratic platform are for the independence of the Ukraine.

The 1986 nuclear disaster at Chernobyl was high on the agenda during the congress, as it has been at every forum in the Ukraine, a republic of 51.2 million the size of France and rich in coal and farmland.

On Tuesday Voldomir Ivashko, the leader of the Ukrainian Communist Party, accused Soviet authorities of hiding information about the 1986 nuclear disaster from Ukrainian authorities.

Ivashko also telephoned Gorbachev Wednesday and invited him to to Kiev, but the president said he was too busy with the founding congress of the Russian Communist Party, local communists told United Press International.

''He insulted us,'' said one Communist Party official, who declained to give his name.

The criticism from the Ukranians was an echo of the attacks on Gorbachev at the conference of Russian communists, which was also dominated by conservatives.

Petro Kozynov, a delegate from the coal mining region of Donbass, charged that Soviet authorites have failed to meet the demands of coal miners who went on strike last summer as part of a nationwide work stoppage.

The strikers signed an agreement then with the Soviet authorites that promised to improve their wages, put more supplies in shops and increase job safety.

Kozynov said protests have again sprung up in the area lately because ''the authorities have failed to implement the demands.''

Independent Ukrainian groups said they are ignoring the Communist Party and the congress because the role of the party is dwindling.

''In one or two years, this party will disappear,'' Anerdzhe Dombrovski, an activist from a human rights group in Kharkov. ''We shall have an independent Ukraine then.''

Official figures published in the media said 125,000 communists renounced their membership in the party in the last five months in a trend of defections that has swept the entire country.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (JUNE 21) UPI - The East and West German parliaments Thursday took two major steps toward unification by writing off the territory lost to Poland after World II and approving the economic merger of the two countries.

Both measures were milestones toward the political unification of Germany that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl hopes to bring about Dec. 9, immediately after all-German elections.

Foreign ministers of the six nations involved in the unity talks anticipated witnessing Friday the dismantling of Checkpoint Charlie, the Berlin Wall crossing where U.S. and Soviet troops faced off for 16 tense hours shortly after the wall went up in 1961.

After the brief morning ceremony at the Allied checkpoint, the ministers from the two Germanys, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United States will sit down for a key session of the German unity negotiation process known as two-plus-four.

Kohl, in a policy statement Thursday to the Bonn Bundestag, the West German parliament, said the loss of former German territory in Silesia, eastern Brandenburg, Pomerania and East and West Prussia, where millions of Germans used to live, must be accepted to assure international support for unification.

A joint resolution introduced in the East German Volkskammer (People's Chamber) in East Berlin and the Bonn parliament said Germany will never question the present border on the Oder-Neisse rivers or make territorial claims on Poland.

The East German Parliament approved the resolution in the morning. Its Bonn counterpart was to pass it in the evening.

''Let no one be mistaken,'' Kohl said, obviously addressing organizations of former residents of the lost territory who opposed the resolution. ''Today we face an absolutely clear choice. Either we confirm the existing border or we gamble away the chance of German unity.

''Today the German Bundestag, together with the German Democratic Republic's Volkskammer, is addressing a clear message to Poland: Poland's border with Germany, as it stands today, is final. At no time, either today or in the future, will it be questioned through territorial claims on the part of we Germans,'' he promised.

The two parliaments met to pass the resolution and approve the East-West German treaty on economic, monetary and social union to take effect July 1 on the eve of the second two-plus-four talks in East Berlin.

The United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France, who have residual rights in Germany as World War II victors, made German acceptance of the Polish border a condition for unification.

The resolution said Germany wants to replace its painful past with a policy of reconciliation and understanding between Poles and Germans.

It said the war caused ''dreadful suffering'' in Poland and that after the war ''great injustice was done by expelling millions of Germans from their ancestral homelands.''

Kohl said that after unification the new German government will sign a border treaty with Poland that would be binding under international law.

He said the economic treaty would give East Germans the opportunity for rapid improvement in living conditions.

He said he speeded up action on the treaty because a delay would have meant ''the immediate collapse of the German Democratic Republic'' and ''devastating consequences'' because of a dramatic rise in East Germans moving to the West.

Several foreign ministers involved in the unity talks scheduled bilateral meetings Thursday in East Berlin in advance of the conference.

Secretary of State James Baker arrived in West Berlin Thursday morning and was to meet with East German Foreign Minister Markus Meckel in the afternoon and with West German counterpart Hans-Dietrich Genscher in the evening.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Bonn said Genscher will brief Baker on his recent talks with his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze.

Genscher and Shevardnadze did not agree on the controversial issue of Germany's military future but the spokesman said they made progress on several issues.

He said he did not expect a major breakthrough at Friday's ministerial conference, either.

The Western Allies in the unity talks want Germany to belong to NATO but the Soviet Union rejects the idea, suggesting the country be part of both NATO and the eastern Warsaw Pact.

DETROIT (JUNE 21) UPI - The United Auto Workers union, which opens formal negotiations for new labor contracts with the Big Three automakers next month, says it has no intention of sacrificing jobs for higher wages.

UAW President Owen Bieber, during a meeting in Indianapolis Wednesday with the union's Ford Council, rejected the strategy of trading away ''all claims to job security ... in return for vastly expanded income maintainence programs for current workers.

''Much of the job shrinkage the companies are confronting us with is not inevitable, and we should fight it and try to reverse it,'' Bieber told the council.

But Bieber later acknowledged that ''reasonable and predictable'' job reductions may be necessary, though he declined to discuss how they might be achieved until talks begin next month.

Automotive analysts say General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. - which all underwent dramatic job shrinkages during the 1980s - must reduce their workforces further if they are to remain competitive with import carmakers and with transplants, the U.S. assembly operations of Asian-based carmakers.

Current contracts covering about 500,000 active and idled U.S. automakers at the nation's Big Three automakers expire Sept. 14.

Bieber also called on Ford during the meeting to reverse its growing reliance on its overseas operations to develop cars for the North American market.

Ford's Probe sports coupe and its all-new Escort and Tracer subcompacts are heavily based on designs by Mazda, the Japanese carmaker partly owned by Ford, while Ford's European operation is now developing the next generation of its compact Tempo and Topaz sedans for the U.S. market in 1992.

''We can't embrace Ford's 'world car' concept when it directly threatens our future,'' Bieber told the council.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (UPI) - The crew of the shuttle Atlantis sailed through a dress-rehearsal countdown Thursday in preparation for blastoff around July 14 on a blacked-out mission to ferry a secret Pentagon payload into orbit.

Wearing bulky, bright-orange spacesuits, the shuttle's five-man, all-military crew strapped in aboard the $2 billion orbiter for the final hours of the ''terminal countdown demonstration test,'' a traditional milestone in a space shuttle's launch processing.

The countdown test ended with the simulated ignition and shutdown of the shuttle's three main engines.

''Ten, nine, eight, seven ... we have a go for main engine start ... six, five, four ... and we have a cutoff,'' said NASA launch commentator Lisa Malone as the test came to an end. ''We have had a ... simulated launch abort. It appears we have had a successful launch countdown test today. Everything proceeded very smoothly in the dress rehearsal.''

Air Force Col. Richard Covey, Atlantis's commander, Navy Cmdr. Frank Culbertson, the co-pilot, Marine Col. Robert Springer, Air Force Lt. Col. Carl Meade and Army Capt. Charles Gemar hope to blast off on the year's fourth shuttle flight shortly before 8 a.m. EDT around July 14.

Details about the flight are classified, but sources have said the mission is scheduled to last about four days. The shuttle's typical altitude will be 190 miles, the sources said, in an orbit tipped 28.5 degrees to the equator.

But Atlantis first must pass a critical test next Wednesday in which supercold liquid hydrogen rocket fuel will be loaded into the ship's external tank to make sure no leaks are present like the one that grounded the shuttle Columbia just six hours before blastoff May 30 on a 10-day astronomy mission.

Engineers traced Columbia's leak to a cavity where the shuttle's 17-inch-wide hydrogen line enters the belly of the orbiter. But the precise location of the leak eluded engineers, and NASA managers had no choice but to order the ship back to its hangar for detailed inspections.

At the same time, NASA decided to press ahead with plans to launch Atlantis on a secret military mission to ferry a Pentagon payload into orbit.

Because some of the hardware in the 17-inch ''disconnect'' fittings used by Columbia and Atlantis have similar test histories, NASA managers ordered the unusual fueling test next week to make sure Atlantis is leak free.

Columbia, meanwhile, was rolled back to the Vehicle Assembly Building last week, removed from its external tank and hauled to a nearby hangar.

A valve assembly inside the tank side of the 17-inch disconnect fitting was removed and flown to a Rockwell International shuttle facility in California Tuesday for tests to find out if the leak involves tank hardware or the part of the fitting that is built into Columbia's belly.

If the leak cannot be duplicated, engineers will remove the matching valve and associated fittings from Columbia and replace them with a 17-inch umbilical currently installed aboard the new space shuttle Endeavour, under construction at a Rockwell International factory in Palmdale, Calif.

In either case, NASA managers say Columbia should be ready for another launch attempt around Aug. 12.

SALT LAKE CITY (JUNE 21) UPI - Russian citizens want their nation's chemical weapons stockpile destroyed but not near their homes, said the head of a Soviet team ending a four-day tour Thursday of a Utah military base.

The problem of detoxifying thousands of tons of chemical weapons in the Soviet Union lies not in the technology but where to build the facilities to do the job, said Nikita Smidovich, leader of the 15-man Russian delegation.

The Soviet Union public's attitude is generally ''you can destroy it, but not in my backyard,'' Smidovich said.

The Soviet delegation of diplomats and chemical weapons experts has been in Utah since Monday, meeting in Salt Lake City with a similar U.S. team and touring Tooele Army Depot, which stores about 43 percent of the Defense Department's chemical weapons.

The base 30 miles southwest of Salt Lake has constructed a pilot detoxification facility to incinerate chemical weapons. The Chemical Agency Munitions Disposal System is the first of its kind in the United States. It is being used to perfect chemical weapons destruction technology.

The Russian visit is the first of seven under the memorandum of understanding signed last September by Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnardze.

ROCKY HILL, Conn. (JUNE 21) UPI - Ames Department Stores Inc. has asked a bankruptcy judge in New York to void employment contracts the financially ailing chain had signed with four one-time top executives, a spokesman said Thursday.

The national retailer, based in Rocky Hill, filed documents with U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Howard C. Buschman, claiming it could not afford about $1.4 million in annual salaries for the ousted executives.

Buschman scheduled a hearing on the matter July 17.

The four former executives, including former Chief Executive Officer Peter Hollis, left the company after Ames filed for Chapter 11 protection April 25, crushed by debt from its takeover of the former Zayre discount chain.

Earlier this week, Ames reported a staggering loss of $431 million for its latest quarter, in part because of its recent decision to close 221 stores in more than a dozen states.

All four men signed contracts when they took their positions with Ames and the contracts run through 1992 or 1993.

Hollis' contract guarantees him a salary of $700,000 a year through Jan. 31, 1993, while Duane Wolter, former chief financial officer, would earn $200,000 a year through Jan. 31, 1992.

Ames also wants to scrap contracts with Leslie Dietzman, former executive vice president of merchandising, who would earn $325,000 through 1992 and Jeffrey Dentz, former executive vice president of operations, who would be paid $200,000 through Jan. 31, 1993.

Ames has stopped making payments under the contracts and none of the four men received any severance when they left the company, said Ames spokesman William Roberts.

The Ames Board of Directors voted to replace the company's top management and Hollis resigned a few days after the company filed for bankruptcy protection in New York.

Hollis was replaced by Stephen L. Pistner, a turnaround specialist, who is being paid $1.5 million a year in salary. He said he would bring in a new management team quickly and has hired new top executives.

LONDON (JUNE 21) UPI - American conductor Leonard Bernstein and Italian filmmaker Federico Fellini were among five leading contributors to the arts who won $100,000 each Thursday in the Japanese-funded Praemium Imperiale awards.

Other victors announced at Claridge's Hotel were Italian sculptor Arnaldo Pomodoro, Spanish painter Antoni Tapies and Scottish architect James Stirling.

The Praemium Imperiale awards began last year and offer the winners $100,000 awards contributed by leading Japanese corporations.

Winners are leading contributors in the five categories of painting, sculpture, architecture, music, and theater or film. Selections are made by the Japan Art Association and the awards are patronized by Prince Hitachi, the younger brother of Japan's Emperor Akihito.

Last year's awards ceremony in Tokyo was attended by former President Reagan.

However, the prize did not receive much recognition, so organizers for this year's event made the announcement in London and invited four former European prime ministers - Edward Heath of England, Jacques Chirac of France, Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and Amintore Fanfani of Italy - to give greater gravitas to the prize.

Backers include Sony Corp. but all have eschewed any self-promotion or public links to the award.

''We Japanese have received much of the cultural impact and benefits from all over the world, so we Japanese like to express our appreciation and thanks to the world,'' said Japan Art Association Chairman Hiroaki Shikanai.

Japanese are excluded from winning the prize for its first three years.

SEABROOK, NEW HAMPSHIRE (JUNE 21) UPI - Technicians at the Seabrook nuclear power plant were working Thursday to determine the reason for the $6.5 billion facility's first automatic shutdown, a spokesman said.

Seabrook was operating at 30 percent power, producing about 210 megawatts of power, when its turbine automatically shut down at 4:38 p.m. Wednesday.

''The generator sensed that there was a problem and immediately disconnected itself from the (New England power) grid as it was designed '' said Rob Williams, a spokesman for Seabrook owner New Hampshire Yankee. ''All of the major pieces of equipment have systems that monitor other equipment that operates with it.''

The disconnection of the generator caused the plant's turbine and nuclear reactor to shut down in turn.

Williams said automatic shutdowns are a normal part of a nuclear plant's operations. But he said operators did not know what caused the plant to shut itself off.

''They are reviewing computer data to determine the exact cause of the disconnection. They don't have any preliminary indication of the cause of the shutdown,'' he said.

Williams could not estimate when the plant might be restarted.

''In keeping with our conservative testing program, the plant will be started only after a thorough review of the shutdown,'' he said.

Seabrook received its full-power license in March, and operators have been increasing the plant's operating power in stages since late that month.

The plant reached its highest operating level to date - 50 percent - last week. Seabrook was temporarily shut down on Saturday for evaluation.

Plant officials said they expect that Seabrook will reach full power, producing 1,150 megawatts of power, late this summer.

(JUNE 21) UPI - A government report released today confirms that the domestic economy is growing slowly. The Commerce Department says the first-quarter Gross National Product advanced one-point-nine percent. Along with the increase in the nation's total output of goods and services came a one-point-one gain in after-tax corporate profits. Business investment from January through March soared seven-point-seven percent. Exports of goods and services leaped 12-point-eight percent, while imports were held to three percent.

Official reports from Iran say an earthquake today caused massive destruction and killed at least one-thousand people... 700 of them in Zanjan province about 175 miles northwest of Tehran. Thousands of other people were injured and cities and villages in northern Iran. The Islamic Republic News Agency says several mountain villages were leveled. Only minor damage is reported in Tehran itself. IRNA says Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, has allocated one-BILLION dollars for relief efforts.

The House has voted to override a presidential veto of legislation lifting a ban on partisan political activity by federal employees. The Senate will vote on whether to override the Hatch Act today. A Senate override is NOT a given. The vote is expected to be far closer than the 327-93 vote in the House yesterday. If the Senate votes for the override, federal workers will be able to take part in nearly all political activities... except running for public office on a partisan ticket.

The Navy says there was NO danger of a nuclear accident aboard the U-S-S Midway during two explosions and a fire yesterday. Two sailors died and 16 others were hurt. In keeping with Navy policy, officers won't confirm or deny the presence of nuclear weapons on the aircraft carrier. But officers say the fire was NOT near any weapons. The first explosion was in a storeroom containing emergency equipment for fighting fires. The cause is under investigation.

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA (JUNE 21) UPI - Malaysia and Vietnam began three days of talks Thursday on the thorny issue of forced repatriation of Vietnamese boatpeople and economic measures they hope will stem the flow of the refugees.

At the same time, the U.N. High Commission for Refugees appealed to countries granting refugees first asylum to abandon their threat to turn back Vietnamese refugees landing on their shores beginning next month.

A Canadian warship, meanwhile, rescued 90 Vietnamese boat people in the South China Sea but two of them later died, Canadian Ambassador to the Philippines Andre Simard said.

Hong Kong and members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, where the refugees have been landing, warned at a meeting last month in Manila that beginning July 1 they would forcibly reject those who left their countries foreconomic rather than political reasons.

Vietnam and the United States oppose forced repatriation on humanitarian grounds but ASEAN - composed of Malaysia, Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore, the Philippines and Brunei - says the refugees are straining their economies.

''During our screening of newly arrived Vietnamese boatpeople, we found 70 percent of them were economic migrants, not refugees,'' Malaysia's Foreign Minister Abu Hassan Omar said Thursday.

In Hong Kong, screening led to 90 percent being screened-out and refused refugee status. The majority of the economic migrants are from northern Vietnam where the economy has been most seriously devastated since the end of the Vietnam War in 1975.

As the three-day talks on the issue began in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysian officials told Vietnam's Deputy Foreign Minister Vu Khoan they would encourage the private sector to study how to boost trade relations to improve the Vietnamese economy.

''I told the minister that Vietnam is responsible for the current situation which has not changed,'' Abu Hassan said.

Malaysia has agreed to open a trade office in Ho Chi Min City, formerly Saigon, not only to stimulate trade but to act as a consular office.

Abu Hassan also said Malaysian airlines would increase the number of flights to Vietnam.

Stimulating Vietnam's economy is important to prevent mass departures of its citizens and would relieve the burden on Southeast Asian nations who provide homes for the region's 150,000 Indochinese refugees.

Malaysia has more than 13,000 boatpeople in a holding camp on the island of Pulau Bidong and another 4,000 in a camp on the outskirts of the capital who are waiting resettlement.

Abu Hassan denied the government was pushing off refugees and disputed the latest U.N. figures claiming 8,700 boatpeople have been turned away from Malaysian shores in the past year.

He also said, ''We intented to close Pulau Bidong as soon possible due to social economic reasons.''

Abu Hassan demanded that Vietnam and the United States, which oppose forced repatriation, devise a solution to the issue.

''If the two countries disagree they should come up with alternatives for us to resolve the problem. Malaysia wants Vietnam and the United States to be more responsible,'' he said.

The United States resettled 300,000 refugees from first asylum countries and another 500,000 directly from Vietnam, exceeding its pledge to accept 40 percent of the boat people under the comprehensive plan of action, according to U.S. officials.

In Manila, Thorvald Stoltenberg, visiting head of the Geneva-based UNHCR, said forcible repatriation would lead to a collapse of the comprehensive plan of action, signed by 56 countries, to solve the problem.

''This declaration by the countries in all the region is a reaction to the problem in the region and it is obvious that the reason why I went on this trip now was in order to see if the UNHCR can contribute to the solution of this dramatic situation,'' Stotenberg said.

''It is our responsibility to protect these (refugees),'' he said, adding he hoped his trip will ''uphold and strengthen the principle of first asylum.''

But he also expressed opposition to the granting of asylum to economic refugees because ''the sheer number of refugees fleeing poverty is such that it would be impossible'' to resettle them.

LONDON (JUNE 21) UPI - A Hong Kong jewelry company paid a record $7 million for the Agra Diamond, a pink stone that once adorned the turban of a Mongol emperor, Christie's said Thursday.

A spokeswoman for the auction house said the sale of various jewels on Wednesday netted a record $20.7 million, with the Agra Diamond being the most prominent item.

The 32.24-carat stone is the seventh largest pink diamond in the world, and was once owned by Babur, the central Asian warlord who conquered northern India in 1526 and founded the Mongul empire.

She said it was purchased for $7 million by Ciba Corp., a leading Hong Kong jewelery firm.

The spokeswoman said the sum was the highest paid for a pink diamond, and more than four times what they had been expecting before the hectic bidding began. Saudi Arabian jeweller Robert Mouawad last year paid $6.2 million for a smaller pink stone.

She said the Agra diamond was owned by a private English collector. Its history is enmeshed with that of the subcontinent.

Babur received the diamond in exchange for sparing the lives of the family of the maharaja of Gwalior, and named it after the site of his capital, where one of his successors, Shah Jehan, later built the Taj Mahal.

The emperor also bagged the Koh-i-noor diamond, which now sits in the Tower of London as a part of the crown jewels. But the pink stone was his favorite and was worn on the front of his turban.

It was bequeathed to subsequent rulers, and eventually purchased by a British colonial, the duke of Brunswick. It weighed 41.75 carats, but was streamlined to its present size after being shipped to Europe.

The diamond changed hands numerous times between jewellers and magnates, and was eventually acquired by its last unnamed owner, who the spokeswomn said got it by ''descent.''

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (JUNE 21) UPI - The government said Thursday it had recaptured the eastern part of the country from Tamil separatist guerrillas after 10 days of bitter fighting, but security forces fought the rebels at the northern tip of the island.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, whose members are fighting for a separate state in the north and east of the teardrop-shaped island, continued their attack on the military base at Palali, 10 miles north of Jaffna, military sources said.

Fighting erupted at the base when troops at the installation tried to extend their outer perimeter to secure a runway so that military aircraft could land safely, the sources said. The base came under heavy mortar fire Wednesday.

At least six soldiers, including two air force men, and six Liberation Tiger rebels have been killed so far in the two days of clashes at the military base, the sources said.

The Sri Lankan government claimed Thursday it had recaptured the eastern part of the country, where fighting erupted 10 days ago and triggered a major confrontation between the rebels and security forces. Authorities say nearly 700 soldiers, police, rebels and civilians have been killed.

Minister of State for Defense Ranjan Wijeratne told reporters the military was conducting ''mopping up'' operations and the government would soon re-establish police stations in the district. The police stations had been a primary target of the Tamil rebels.

The government also will soon restore the civil administration but will continue the army presence until police control is secure, Wijeratne said at a briefing for reporters on the weekly Cabinet meeting.

Indian forces were introduced into Sri Lanka in 1987 after New Delhi and Colombo signed a peace accord aimed at ending ethnic violence that had battered the tiny island since 1983.

Under the agreement, the Indian military was to supervise the surrender of weapons by several Tamil separatist groups. But the Liberation Tigers refused to surrender their weapons, saying the agreement failed to meet Tamil aspirations for an independent homeland.

The rejection of the plan triggered a war between the Liberation Tigers and the Indian military. At least 1,100 soldiers and 600 rebels were killed in the fighting.

The Tamil Tigers are demanding a separate state because they believe the country's Tamil minority, which is predominantly Hindu, has been discriminated against for years by the Sinhalese majority, which is mostly Buddhist.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri both rejected as inadequate Thursday the Bush administration's new deficit reduction plan offered to budget negotiators.

''I would not judge it to be an adequate proposal,'' Foley told reporters, echoing the reaction of other Democratic negotiators, one of whom bluntly said Bush's plan ''stinks.'' ''I'm disappointed it isn't more extensive.''

But Foley said despite the weaknesses of the plan, offered at the bipartisan budget talks on Wednesday by Bush's budget director, Richard Darman, ''it's the beginning of a process of greater specificity'' from the administration.

Gephardt, chairman of the budget summit, said Bush's plan "is not a good start."

''It has some obvious initial deficiencies,'' Gephardt said. ''I'm worried that it's far short of where it needs to be.''

Democrats Thursday were considering the new Bush proposal and planned to offer their own proposal during a budget summit meeting later in the day.

''At some point we're going to have to respond,'' said House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif. He said the latest Bush proposal was ''an important step'' but said ''the question is whether or not it can begin the process of give and take.''

On Wednesday, Panetta said the plan was ''a non-starter legislatively but at least it might kick off the negotiations.''

The Bush plan - the first deficit reduction plan to be offered after five weeks of preliminary talks - called for $51 billion in budget savings in fiscal year 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and about $440 billion in savings over five years, participants said after Wednesday's closed meeting. Democrats have pushed for larger reductions, particularly over five years.

Bush's plan achieves those savings mostly through additional cuts in domestic programs and entitlements, such as Medicare and farm programs, according to participants. Sources said the plan would cut defense by about $6 billion - nearly double the $3.2 billion cut Bush proposed in January but far short of the Pentagon cuts proposed by Democrats.

The plan contains no significant new revenues beyond the roughly $20 billion in taxes and user fees Bush proposed in January, participants said.

Reaction to Darman's proposal on Wednesday was predictably partisan.

Asked if he was happy about Bush's plan, Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said, ''No, it stinks.''

''I thought it was a very inadequate offer and certainly a disappointment '' said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. ''He's called for a substantial increase in cuts on entitlements but there were some new proposals that I thought were worth exploring.''

Bentsen said he wanted to ''see if we can't get a more serious offer from them.''

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., a negotiator, said Darman offered ''some very good proposals for deficit reduction that have not been on the table before'' and called the plan ''a good starting point.''

Also Wednesday, the Congressional Budget Office and the administration's Office of Management and Budget both released new, higher deficit estimates for fiscal 1991.

The CBO projected the deficit will be $162 billion next year if the huge cost of bailing out failed savings and loans is removed from deficit calculations. In mid-May, the CBO projected a deficit of $149 billion to $159 billion excluding S&L bailout costs.

With S&L bailout costs included, the CBO said, the fiscal 1991 deficit would jump by $70 billion to $232 billion.

Darman told negotiators that the OMB is projecting a fiscal 1991 deficit of $159 billion, $21 billion higher than the $138 billion deficit the OMB estimated in March.

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law, Congress must cut the deficit to $64 billion in fiscal 1991 or face automatic, across-the-board spending cuts split evenly between defense and domestic programs.

If the OMB is right and the 1991 deficit is $159 billion, not counting S&L bailout costs, then $96 billion in deficit reductions would be needed to meet the $64 billion Gramm-Rudman target.

Negotiators have talked about producing a $50 billion to $60 billion package, which would be twice as big as any previous reduction but which would also fall far short of the cuts needed to meet the target.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Technological advancements in air travel have made flying safer in the past 20 years, leaving the pilot as the most fallible element in commercial airline service, a study reported Thursday.

The study, conducted by Conde Nast Traveler magazine, said pilot error is a probable cause of nearly eight out of 10 crashes of scheduled passenger flights, with mechanical error the cause of only 16 percent.

The majority of airplane accidents take place during takeoff and landing, not during flight, the study showed.

Weather accounts for 12 percent of air accidents, air traffic control error, 11 percent, poor maintenance and other airline error, 9 percent, terrorism and sabotage, 4 percent, and airport operations, 2 percent, according to the study released by Traveler editor Harold Evans at a press conference.

The Traveler study analyzed the accident and fatality statistics of 80 domestic and foreign airlines for the period 1968 through 1988 and found U.S. airlines had an overall safety record better than Western European airlines, Evans said.

The study identified Pan Am as the major U.S. carrier with the highest gross fatality rate, 3.35 fatal accidents per 1 million scheduled passenger flights. It pointed out that four of Pan Am's accidents were due to terrorism.

American, Northwest, United and Delta are the major Amerian airlines that have fatal accident rates slightly lower than Lufthansa, a German airline renowed for its safety record and to quality maintenance, the study said, although Western European airlines demonstrated a lower accident rate than U.S. carriers in the last 10 years of the study.

The study listed the top safety-enhancing advancements in commercial flight as jet engines, wind shear alert systems, ground proximity warning systems and multiple emergency backup systems. It said aircraft engines of 1990 are about 10 times more reliable than those of a decade ago.

Evans said one misconception put to rest by the study was that airline deregulation in the United States in 1979 had a negative effect on American airline safety.

Since deregulation, he said, the number of fatal crashes among U.S. carriers has declined while the number of flights has risen 25 percent.

According to the study, the following carriers performed best in the past 20 years:

-Dallas-based Southwest Airlines has made the most scheduled flights and carried the most pasengers without ever having a fatal accident.

-Other U.S. carriers with spotless fatality records are Midway, Horizon, American West, and Hawaiian Airlines.

-American Airlines had the lowest accident rate, excluding those carriers with no fatal crahes, .24 fatal accidents per 1 million departures.

-Foreign carriers with no fatal accidents include Australia's Ansett, the Netherlands' KLM, Finland's Finnair, Canadian Airlines International and Singapore Airlines.

The study said airlines based in Asia, the Middle East and Eastern Europe have the highest accident rate with the worst record held by EgyptAir with 11.6 fatal accents per 1 million flights. Russia's Aeroflot and China airlines had the worst records during the second 10-year period studied.

Other carriers with high accident rates per 1 million flights were Air India, 10.14, Turkish Airlines, 10.09, Philippine Airlines, 8.59, LOT Polish Airlines, 6.14, Colombia's Avianca, 6.1, and Pakistan International 6.07.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - High hog prices and strengthening feed grain prices prompted the Agriculture Department to raise its forecast of this year's net cash farm income by $1 billion Thursday.

The Economic Research Service said net cash farm income would range from $55 billion to $59 billion, up $1 billion from the forecast made three months ago.

''U.S. farm sales are showing some unexpected strength, so income prospects have brightened since March,'' the department said. ''Strong hog prices and firming (feed) grain prices are behind the improvement.''

If correct, this would be the fourth year in a row for net cash farm income in the mid-to-upper $50 billion range. It hit a record $57.2 billion in 1988.

Net cash farm income measures the value of commodities sold in a calendar year plus government payments but subtracting farmers' out-of-pocket expenses. Federal payments were forecast for $8.2 billion this fiscal year down from $10.5 billion in 1989, and a projected $11.7 billion in fiscal 1991.

Market hog prices were projected to average from $54-$58 per 100 pounds this year, well up from last year's average of $44.03.

With production of corn and other feed grains expected to trail consumption this year, ''prices are expected to remain firm,'' the department said.

Despite the rise in net cash farm income, the government said net farm income ''probably will remain even with last year,'' when it was $49 billion. Net farm income measures the value of agricultural production and government payments in a calendar year, minus all expenses.

All the same, the recent strengthening in farm sales prompted the department to adjust upward its estimate of possible net farm income. In March, it projected income in the range of $45 billion-$49 billion. The new forecast is $47 billion-$51 billion.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Supreme Court, in a blow to the news media, overturned a lower court ruling Thursday and held that a newspaper column implying a high school wrestling coach had lied under oath may be held libelous.

The justices, in a 7-2 ruling, held that the column in the News-Herald in Lake County, Ohio, did not use loose or hyperbolic language in implying that the coach had committed perjury, and cited numerous cases in which First Amendment protection had been used as a defense.

However, in an opinion delivered by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, the court said ''there is also another side to the equation'' and remanded the case to trial court.

''We have regularly acknowledged the important social values which underlie the law of defamation and recognize that society has a pervasive and strong interest in preventing and redressing attacks upon reputation '' the court said.

But it pointed to a case in which the late Justice Potter Stewart found that ''the destruction that defamatory falsehood can bring is, to be sure, often beyond the capacity of the law to redeem. Yet ... an action for damages is the only hope for vindication or redress the law gives to a man whose reputation has been falsely dishonored.''

The Ohio case began 15 years ago when Maple Heights High School coach Michael Milovich sued columnist J. Theodore Diadiun after he published an article implying that the coach had lied under oath at a hearing.

Milkovich, now retired, and his team became involved in an altercation at a home wrestling match with a team from Mentor High School. Several people were injured, and the Ohio High School Athletic Association held a hearing at which Milkovich testified.

After the hearing, the athletic association placed the Maple Heights team on probation for a year and censured Milkovich for his actions during the altercation.

Several parents and wrestlers sued the association and sought an order against its ruling, saying they had been denied due process in the hearing. A lower court overturned the association's probation orders.

One day later, Diadiun wrote a column that said in part that ''a lesson was learned ... yesterday by the student body of Maple Heights High School and by anyone who attended the Maple-Mentor wrestling meet of last Feb. 8. It is simply this: If you get in a jam, lie your way out.

''If you're successful enough and powerful enough ... you stand an excellent chance of making the lie stand up, regardless of what really happened.''

The lower court found the article was not published with ''actual malice.'' The appellate court reversed and remanded the case, saying there was sufficient evidence of actual malice to go to the jury. The state Supreme Court dismissed the appeal.

On remand, the trial court granted summary judgment to the Lorain Journal Co., which owned the News-Herald, on grounds the article was an opinion protected from libel and that Milkovich failed to prove malice.

The Ohio Court of Appeals affirmed, but on appeal, the state Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case, saying Milkovich was not a public figure or public official.

In a stinging dissent of the high court's opinion, Justice William Brennan said Diadiun was ''guilty of jumping to conclusions'' but was ''not, however, liable for defamation.''

''Ignorance ... has never served to defeat freedom of speech,'' Brennan said in his dissent, which was joined by Thurgood Marshall. ''I appreciate this court's concern with redressing injuries to an individual's reputation. But as long as it is clear to the reader that he is being offered conjecture and not solid information, the danger to reputation is one we have chosen to tolerate in pursuit of individual liberty and the common quest for truth.''

BEIJING (JUNE 21) UPI - A crewman on a sunken sand dredge survived for three days in an air pocket and was rescued Thursday, China's official news agency reported.

The crewman was pulled alive from the dredge, which was found at a depth of 75 feet in Jiaozhou Bay in the eastern coastal province of Shandong, the Xinhua agency said.

Divers reported finding the man in an air pocket in a watertight cabin of the dredge, which was found lying upside-down on the floor of the murky bay, Xinhua said.

The man's name, age and medical condition were not disclosed.

Rescue workers have yet to account for seven crew members missing since Monday, when the dredge was struck by a cargo ship and sank.

Thirty-one dredge workers were hauled safely aboard passing ships after the collision.

MOSCOW (JUNE 21) UPI - The Russian Parliament voted Thursday to pay the republic's newly elected populist president Boris Yeltsin $1,440 a month.

Yeltsin's salary will be less than one-fourth the $6,400-a-month salary voted for Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev by the national Parliament a month ago.

Gorbachev also officially receives a large apartment in Moscow, vacation cottages called dachas, outside of Moscow and in the Crimea, expenses and a fleet of limousines and aircraft at his disposal.

Yeltsin recently abandoned his compact Moskvich hatchback for a Volga sedan provided by the Russian Parliament, which also agreed to hire three or four bodyguards.

The average income for a resident of the Soviet Union is about $400 a month.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Asserting that the ''overall competitiveness of our nation'' hinges on an ambitious space program, a group of House Republicans said Thursday they will fight for restoration of funding for President Bush's plans for manned missions to the moon and Mars.

With the administration and Congress engaged in negotiations on where budget cuts should be made to scale back massive federal deficits, a House Appropriations subcommittee last week deleted the $1.3 billion in seed money Bush had sought for the moon-Mars initiative. The President Wednesday challenged Congress to summon past ''daring and imagination'' and back the plan.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the House Republican whip, called Bush's moon-Mars request ''a relatively modest amount of money that leads to a very, very large result'' and warned that the United States could fall behind in space exploration.

''It is clear that if America does not make the investment (in the moon-Mars initiative) that it won't be a function of human beings not getting to the moon and Mars, it will just be that they will be Japanese, they will be Chinese, they will be Brazilian,'' Gingrich said during a news conference with four other GOP House members.

Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., the ranking Republican on the House Committee on Science, Space and Technology, said the GOP will offer amendments in the full House Appropriations Committee to restore full funding. If that fails, Walker said, amendments will be offered on the House floor.

Although some Republicans have broken ranks on funding the moon-Mars plans Walker said the ''overwhelming majority'' of GOP House members back the initiative, adding, ''We will hope that we will be joined by Democrats who will be anxious to join with us in advancing the space program.''

Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, who is designated to offer the funding restoration amendment in the appropriations committee, said, ''Not only does our future in space depend on a vigorous space effort, but the future of technological advances, hence the overall competitiveness of our nation hinges on the prospects of a strong space program.''

Added Rep. Jack Buechner, R-Mo.: ''Some of the peace dividend ought to go to space.''

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - A government probe apparently has failed to find any proof that a U.S. researcher stole credit for discovering the AIDS virus from a French scientist, a leading scientific journal reported Thursday.

There is no evidence Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute ''stole credit'' for discovering the virus that causes AIDS from French researcher Luc Montagnier of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, Science magazine reported.

Gallo, who was unavailable to comment on the report, in 1984 claimed credit for discovering what later became known as the human immunodeficiency virus or HIV, which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

That claim was disputed by Montagnier, who had sent Gallo samples of virus the French scientist was testing. The dispute appeared to have been settled by an 1987 agreement signed by Gallo, Montagnier, President Ronald Reagan and French Premier Jacques Chirac that named Gallo and Montagnier as ''co-discoverers'' of the virus.

But the controversy was rekindled last November when the Chicago Tribune published an investigation into the case that said Gallo had, either by ''accident'' or ''theft,'' claimed Montagnier's virus as his own.

The article prompted the National Institute of Health's office of scientific integrity to form a 10-member panel, which has been conducting an investigation since December.

NIH spokesman Donald Ralbovsky said the agency would not comment on the investigation or the Science report, other than to say the NIH probe was expected to be completed within ''a number of weeks.''

But Science, which is published by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said it had ''obtained copies of hundreds of pages of documents Gallo has submitted to the NIH panel,'' ''examined pages from laboratory notebooks of Gallo and his colleagues'' and other documents and interviewd ''a number of persons close to'' Gallo's lab when the work was done.

''Science asked a small number of senior scientists with appropriate expertise and no direct involvement in the issues to review the documents we have obtained. They agreed to do so off the record,'' the magazine said.

''On the basis of what they have seen (admittedly only part of the evidence the panel has), their opinions are consistent on the matter of other viruses,'' it said.

''One reviewer summed it up this way: 'There's just no evidence of fraud here. It is clear that Gallo's lab was working on other AIDS retroviruses extensively before they got LAV (the French virus) and simultaneously once they had it,''' the magazine said.

'''Unless all these documents are forgeries in the greatest conspiracy since Watergate, you have to accept that there were other viruses,''' the panel member said.

Science also published a lengthy article outlining allegations that Gallo ''stole the credit for a key cell line in which'' his team grew the AIDS virus from a researcher who worked for the Veterans Administration. Those allegations are also being probed by the NIH panel.

FREDERICK, OK (JUNE 21) UPI - A frayed 30-foot rope with a hangman's noose, believed to have been used in Oklahoma's first legal hanging 82 years ago, finally is on display at the Tillman County Historical Museum in Frederick.

Museum officials said the rope is on loan from the Oklahoma Historical Society, which had it in storage for several years in Oklahoma City.

The rope is said to be the one used in Frederick by Sheriff Frank Carter for the execution of convicted wife-killer Frank Ford in 1908, and for as many as 29 other hangings before Oklahoma turned to the electric chair in 1915.

Ownership of the rope has been in question since 1988 when Bill Goodnight, president of the Tillman County Historical Society, announced plans to acquire the knotted relic for the Frederick museum.

School teacher Kay Barnett said she isn't certain that the rope really belongs to Tillman County, or to either of the historical societies. She said it may still belong to her grandfather, who owned a hardware store where county officials obtained the rope.

''That was a little quip my granddaddy would use. When he was talking about government or something, he'd say, 'And they didn't even pay for that rope.' And I think the truth was, they didn't,'' Barnett said.

KATMANDU, Nepal (JUNE 21) UPI - A petite fashion designer hotly defended her profession Thursday against a group of communist women who disrupted her fashion show by waving placards reading ''A woman's ability is reflected not in her beauty, but in her intellect.''

The communist protesters closed designer Pramila Acharya's show last Friday at a leading hotel in the capital.

The protest in the conservative Hindu Himalayn kingdom raised a heated debate on the role of women in the newly created democracy.

''Nobody should impose an idea on others,'' Acharya said in an interivew. ''It is my inborn right to pursue a career of my choice.

''I will go to court,'' she vowed. ''My protests to the prime minister have not borne any results.''

A fashion show in Nepal would have been unacceptable under the party-less monarchy that was replaced in a pro-democracy movement this spring with an interim government composed of several political parties.

The group of communist women said they stopped the show because they believed it is not correct for women to parade themselves before men.

''What are women expected to do - just stay home and cook?'' Acharya said. ''If fashion shows are to be stopped, so should Nepali movies. Or maybe men should dress up as women to take the place of actresses.''

A letter to the editor of a local newspaper said: ''If this group is so concerned about safeguarding the honor of Nepalese women, why don't they go to red light areas in India where a sizeable number of Nepalese women are forced to sell their honor and try to stop that?

''Even countries like the Soviet Union and Poland host such events,'' the letter said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Supreme Court Thursday upheld a ruling that gave only public utilities overcharged for natural gas the right to sue even if the utility passes on the inflated cost to its customers.

The court, in a 5-4 ruling, held that a utility may sue suppliers for damages in an antitrust violations because it alone suffered the antitrust injury. States and utility customers affected by the increase, however, may not sue.

The case was brought before the court by the state of Kansas on behalf of utility customers after a district court dismissed its claims and the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. The court said only the utility company directly suffered antitrust violations and could sue for damages.

Utilicorp United Inc., a public utility in Kansas, purchased natural gas at an inflated price and passed the cost on to its customers. It later filed suit in U.S. District Court against a pipeline company and five gas producers under the Clayton Act, which allows any person injured by antitrust violations to sue for damages.

The utility, alleging that the defendants unlawfully conspired to inflate the price of gas, sought damages for the amount overcharged and for the decrease in sales to customers caused by the overcharge.

Kansas filed separate actions against the same defendants for the antitrust violation on behalf of residents who had purchased gas from any utility at inflated prices.

The court, however, said the utilities suffered antitrust injuries as the direct purchaser but their customers as indirect purchasers had not.

The high court, in affirming the lower court's decison, said allowing indirect suits in such cases might necessitate complex cost apportionment calculations and cited previous cases that sought to avoid the adoption of an apportionment formula.

The court, in a ruling delivered by Justice Anthony Kennedy and joined by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia, said allowing indirect suits by utility customers would not better promote the goal of enforcement of antitrust laws.

HOUSTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Playing host to the leading democracies of the world during the 1990 Economic Summit next month is expected to cost more than $10 million.

Deputy director of the summit, Charles Hagel, said the tab for the three-day event will be split by the State Department and Houston.

The City of Houston and its business community have raised more than $5 million in cash and in-kind contributions to finance the July 9-11 event. The State Department will chip in $5.2 million.

Hagel said the 1990 summit may be the first such gathering to have more than half of its budget paid with private dollars as opposed to taxpayer funds.

About $500,000 is expected to be spent feeding the 3,000 reporters that will be in Houston for the summit.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Legislation was introduced Thursday requiring the nation's 200 fertility clinics to provide accurate success rate information for live births and to maintain specific minimum laboratory standards.

''One in six American couples is infertile and many are willing to do virtually anything to have a baby,'' said bill sponsor Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. ''Many of these desperate couples cannot even find understandable and unbiased information about the performance of our fertility clinics.''

His bill would require all clinics performing fertility procedures to report their success rates, including the ''take-home baby rate,'' to the Department of Health and Human Services, which would publish the information annually.

Wyden said some clinics use national success rates, which often are much higher than their own success rates, and confuse successful impregnation rates with successful live birth rates.

The legislation also would require all embryo clinics to meet certain quality control standards in order to receive certification. There approximately 200 fertility clinics nationwide.

''Our investigation found that today these labs are totally unregulated. There is absolutely no scrutiny. At present, embryo labs need not meet even minimum quality control standards - standards which all other labs must meet under the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Amendments of 1988,'' Wyden said.

Dr. J. Benjamin Younger, immediate past president of the American Fertility Society, said 1988 data indicate the average live birth rate was 12 percent for in vitro fertilization - in which eggs and sperm are fertilized in a laboratory and then implanted in the woman - and 21 percent for gamete intrafallopian transfer, or GIFT - in which retrieved eggs and sperm are transferred directly into the fallopian tubes for fertilization in the woman.

The legislation was endorsed by the American Fertility Soceity, the American Clinical Laboratory Association and the College of American Pathologists.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Cockroaches, the bane of millions of tidy housekeepers, are more than ''just a nasty nuisance'' - they also can pose a health hazard to people allergic to them, researchers said Thursday.

A team of scientists, including members of the Agricultural Research Service, is looking for ways to drive the pesky insects out of homes and to prevent allergies from developing.

An estimated 10 million to 15 million Americans are allergic to cockroaches, according to the National Institutes of Health and several allergists. Reactions range from a runny nose and skin irritation to difficulty in breathing or even more severe ailments.

''People simply cannot continue to view cockroaches as just a nasty nuisance,'' said Richard Brenner, an Agriculture Department entomologist.

Studies by allergist Bann Kang of the University of Kentucky show that 61 percent of asthmatics are sensitive to cockroaches.

Brenner, who pointed to the health implications of cockroach infestation in 1986, is coordinator of a team of medical professionals, human behavior specialists, construction experts and entomologists.

He said cockroach shells, feces and body fluids contain proteins that can cause allergies and the proteins may linger long after the cockroaches are gone.

Researchers are examining a number of possibilities for keeping cockroaches out of residences, including better ventilation, insulation treated with cockroach repellents and air filtration systems to trap allergy-causing cockroach parts. Other scientists are looking for methods to treat specific cockroach allergies and to persuade people to take steps to prevent cockroach infestations.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Supreme Court, in a decision described as the death knell for political patronage, ruled Thursday that party affiliation should not be a part of the government hiring process.

The court, in a 5-4 ruling by Justice William Brennan, said that promotions, transfers and hirings based on political affiliation or support infringe on the First Amendment rights of free speech.

''The First Amendment prevents the government, except in the most compelling circumstances, from wielding its power to interfere with its employees' freedom to believe and associate, or to not believe and not associate,'' Brennan said.

The court's decision, affecting all but the most high-level government employees, is yet anther step in its dismantling of the patronage system and is a major extension of decisions beginning in 1976 that mostly dealt with firing workers based on political affiliation.

In the case from Illinois, Brennan rejected arguments by the state that the First Amendment was not violated because the employment decision was ''not punitive, do not in any way adversely affect the terms of employment and therefore do not chill the exercise of protected belief and association by public employees.''

''This is not credible,'' Brennan said.

Brennan continued that employees who do not compromise their beliefs stand to lose raises, promotions and jobs.

''These are significant penalties and are imposed for the exercise of rights guaranteed by the First Amendment,'' he said. ''Unless these patronage practices are narrowly tailored to further vital government interests, we must conclude that they impermissibly encroach on First Amendment freedoms.''

Political patronage is the ancient practice of giving out government jobs or contracts as rewards to political supporters. It often is justified by the adage, ''To the victor belongs the spoils.''

While the system has been in decline, it is still extant and a number of groups that represent public employees, including the AFL-CIO, urged the court to put an end to it.

Frank Parker, director of the Voting Rights Project for the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, and who has followed the case closely, said the ruling is the ''death knell'' for patronage.

''It spells the end of political patronage in civil service jobs. It restores the original idea of civil service ... that decisions are based on merit not political connections.''

Nonetheless, Justice Antonin Scalia, joined by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony Kennedy, found much to praise in the patronage system.

''As the merit principle (of employment) has been extended and its effects increasingly felt; as the Boss Tweeds, the Tammany Halls, the Pendergast machines, the Byrd machines and the Daley machines have faded into history; we find that political leaders at all levels increasingly complain of the helplessness of elected government, unprotected by 'party discipline,' before the demands of small and cohesive interest-groups,'' Scalia said.

Scalia said previous Supreme Court rulings limiting patronage have ''contributed to the growth of interest-group politics in the last decade.'' He also praised patronage, a system he acknowledged was synonymous with corruption, as a ''powerful means of achieving the social and political integration of excluded groups.''

He said that many ethnic groups have been empowered by patronage and the ''abolition of patronage ... prevents groups that have only recently obtained political power, especially blacks, from following this path to economic and social advancement.''

The patronage case stems from employment policies of Gov. James Thompson, R-Ill., instituted in November 1980 that proclaimed a hiring freeze on all state departments under his control - an order covering some 60,000 state jobs. As a result, all hiring positions had to be approved by the governor's office.

Five people who eventually sued in federal court charged the system allowed the governor to limit employment to those who belonged to the Republican Party.

Cynthia Rutan and Franklin Taylor claimed they were denied promotions or transfers; James W. Moore claimed he was denied a job; and two others, Ricky Standefer and Dan O'Brien, claimed they were not recalled from layoffs all because of their party affiliation.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (JUNE 21) UPI - Tropical storm Orphelia pounded the Philippines Thursday, triggering a landslide that buried three children and injured six others in the capital, police said.

The second storm to affect the Philippines this year was 200 miles northeast of Manila in the Pacific Ocean by Thursday evening with winds peaking at 68 mph.

Police said heavy rains caused by Orphelia sent a motel wall in suburban Manila crashing on five shanties in a squatter colony, burying three children and injuring six others.

The U.S. military television Far East Network said a storm alert had been issued at the U.S. Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval base.

In South Korea, heavy rains have been responsible for the deaths of eight people since they started on Monday, authorities said Thursday.

Property damage from the Korean storms has been estimated at $5.2 million.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (JUNE 21) UPI - Police clashed with about 3,000 demonstrators in the center of the city Thursday after trying to remove barricades erected by taxi drivers protesting the murder of a fellow driver.

Authorities said about a dozen people were injured in the fracas.

Police used cranes to remove vehicles forming barricades among the main roads early in the afternoon. After traffic resumed, the protestors again put up barricades.

Police then smashed a three-wheeled-taxi blocking traffic, touching off the clashes.

The taxi drivers went on a wildcat strike Thursday afternoon to protest the murder of a colleague the previous night on the outskirts of the city.

Carrying the body of the cab driver, about 500 colleagues shouted slogans such as ''death to the home minister.'' The protestors marched to the local police station demanding action against the killers.

Vehicular traffic was disrupted for most of the day because of the roadblocks set up in the city and the strike by taxi operators was total. School children returning home were forced to walk.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - U.S. wheat farmers would lose their No. 1 customer - worth $1 billion in sales - if Congress decides to revoke most-favored-nation trade status for China, the National Association of Wheat Growers said Thursday.

Wheat Growers Vice President Ron Vivinius, an Elgin, N.D., farmer, asked a House Ways and Means subcommittee to continue favorable trade treatment for China.

''Our position is based on the belief that failure to continue China's MFN status will result in immediate retaliation against imports of U.S. wheat '' Rivinius said.

''China trade is vital to the U.S. farm sector and loss of this market would result in a deep decline in U.S. wheat sales and a severe drop in farm income.''

Beijing was the largest customer for U.S. wheat in the past two marketing years and already has purchased more than 2 million metric tons of U.S. wheat for delivery in the trade year that opened June 1. Purchases in the 1989-1990 trade year of 5.56 million tons were worth $1 billion.

None of the major U.S. competitors for the Chinese market - Canada, Australia, Argentina and the European Community - is likely to alter trade relations with Beijing, Rivinius said.

''If we abdicate our position as the major exporter to China ... it will be difficult, if not impossible, to find a market as large for our product '' he said.

LONDON (JUNE 21) UPI - Stock prices closed narrowly mixed in sluggish trading Thursday on the London International stock exchange.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 1.5 points Wednesday, closed off 0.9 points to 2,370.3. The narrower top 30 industrial average edged ahead 4.9 points to 1,908.3.

Volume amounted to about 415 million shares, compared with 437 million that changed hands Wednesday.

Market watchers, noting the low volume, said large, influential institutional investors remained sidelined.

Analysts said investors seemed to be squaring both long and short futures positions ahead of next week's expiration of the June futures contract. The expiration could result in some turbulence in the futures market and affect the underlying stock index.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Parkfield Group plunged $2.50 a share to $3.04, reflecting, analysts said, investors' reaction to news the steel casting and entertainment group's profits are unlikely to top last year's $39.5 million because of problems on the video distribution side.

Wellcome PLC, the pharmaceutical giant, tumbled 53 cents to $9.60 as the company was hit by an unfavorable comment on its anti-AIDS drug at an AIDS conference in San Francisco.

Anglo Overseas Trust PLC, Lord Rothschild's financial services outfit, was suspended at $2.77 a share ahead of the sale of principal operating subsidiary Anglo Leasing for $204 million to Summit, a privately held financial group.

Rothmans International PLC, the tobacco and luxury products company, advanced38 cents to $12.20 following a recommendation by a major brokerage house.

Thorn EMI PLC gained 21 cents to $12.30. On Wednesday, the company said it was holding talks that it expects will lead to the sale of its pressed-glass unit.

Eurotunnel dropped 48 cents to $7.28 as the company failed to obtain the representation level for shareholders.

Among some of the day's other highlights, brand-name food manufacturers attracted some speculative flurry amid rumors that Philip Morris may be bidding for Suchard of Switzerland. Cadbury Schweppes jumped 21 cents to $5.76 and United Biscuits gained 17 cents to $5.87.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed higher in light trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which gained 12.81 points Wednesday, was ahead 14.02 points to 1,863.57.

Traders said some strong interest from overseas buyers in the electronicssector helped to boost the overall market.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Nelson Mandela opened the second day of his 10-day U.S. visit Thursday by thanking American religious leaders - some of his staunchest allies in the anti-apartheid movement - and accepting $200,000 from them for the South African struggle.

Mandela, accompanied by his wife Winnie, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and Mayor David Dinkins, met with more than 100 Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Muslim leaders in a brief ceremony in Christ chapel at famed Riverside Church before attending an ecumenical religious service in the church's primary sancturary.

A hush fell over the small gathering as the Mandela entourage arrived. As the patrician, 71-year-old Mandela made his way down the aisle of the side chapel, they rose and applauded.

Many of them reached out to shake his hand or that of Jackson as they made their way to the front of the chapel.

Sitting on a chair rather than standing in the pulpit, Mandela praised the churches for their longstanding moral and financial support for the once banned African National Congress, branded by many as a revolutionary and terrorist group.

''We have enormous obligations that require enormous resources,'' Mandela told the religious leaders, many of them robed in the vestments of thir office as bishops and priests.

He told the group that church leaders and priests had been among the earliest supporters and leaders in the ANC and urged them to continue the pressure for copmprehenisve, mandatory sanctions against the South African government.

The difficulties caused by sanctions, he said, are ''one of the prices we are prepared to pay.''

''As long as aparthied is in place we will continue to ask for sanctions '' he said.

He also called the churches' financial support ''the means to prosecute that struggle'' against aparthied and defended the ANC's refusal to accept any pre-conditions from the government - including renouncing the armed struggle against aparthied - before negotiating, joking that the government must ''confess the sins they have committed.''

The religious leaders gathered at the Interfaith Church Center, headquarters of the National Council of Churches, before Mandela's arrival and adopted a statement calling members of the faith communities in the United States ''to keep the pressure on'' religious institutions, corporate and financial institutions, the U.S. government, the international community and the South African government in the name of ''the struggle for a free, just and multi-racial society in South Africa.''

Claire Randall, former general secretary of the church council, opened the short ceremony with a prayer.

Bishop Philip Cousin, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church and a former president of the ecumenical agency, presented Mandela with the check.

He told Mandela that opponents of apartheid often ''speak high sounding platitudes while lacking the resources'' to back them up.

The $200,000, he said, from the American religious communisty is ''something that can keep the struggle alive, keep the struggle going so that we can one day say, 'yes, we shall overcome.'''

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (JUNE 21) UPI - A British proposal to create a new European currency was greeted coolly Thursday by European Community officials, who said the plan fails to address economic union.

Top officials of the EC executive Commission said Britain's serious entry into the monetary-union debate was welcomed, but added there were practical and political pitfalls for the British proposal.

The plan, unveiled Wednesday night by Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major, calls for a common European currency - provided by a new European Monetary Fund - which would be used in parallel with existing national currencies.

"Major's speech went into monetary union but did not address economic union at all," Henning Christophersen, the EC commissioner for financial affairs, said through a spokesman. "It is equally important that we have economic unity. "But it's a positive step that Britain seems willing to accept a common currency and a central European banking institution," he said.

Jacques Delors, president of the EC Commission, said the British plan would be "studied with care," but was skeptical over the proposal for a parallel currency.

The Delors Report, headed by the Commission president, called last year for a three-stage economic and monetary union - with an independent central bank, dubbed the "Eurofed," and a common currency that would eventually replace national currencies. Stage 1 of the Delors plan, modest monetary cooperation, begins on July 1.

Delors noted Thursday that his panel's report specifically rejected a parallel common currency in the final stage of monetary union - because it would "further complicate the already difficult endeavor of coordinating different national monetary policies."

He said there were political difficulties in winning support for Britain's proposal, mentioning in particular Karl Otto Pohl, the powerful president of West Germany's Bundesbank. Pohl was a member of the Delors Report committee.

Still, Delors said the British proposal would help in preparations for a December intergovernmental conference on economic and monetary union. Both the Delors Report and the British proposal call for the common currency to be the now rarely used European Currency Unit.

The ECU is currently comprised of a weighted "basket" of existing EC currencies. The national currencies would disappear under the Delors Report proposal, while the British plan would tie the ECU to the strongest national currency in the 12-nation Community.

The British proposal was unveiled just five days before next week's two-day summit of EC leaders in Dublin, but the meeting is not expected to dwell on monetary matters. Instead, the heads of state are expected to call for a December intergovernmental conference on greater EC political union, which would run parallel to an already scheduled conference on economic and monetary union.

BOSTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Two youths charged with beating and kicking Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., in Washington earlier this month said they attacked the congressman after he ''antagonized'' them first, the Boston Herald reported Thursday.

The accusation brought a heated denial from Studds, who called the charge an ''outright lie.''

''It was definitely not unprovoked. That's all I can say,'' James Byrne, 19, told the newspaper.

Byrne and Thomas Carter, also 19, both of Silver Spring, Md., a Washington suburb, admitted they had been drinking heavily shortly before the attack and that Studds did not retaliate after they struck him on the night of June 7 as he walked home after having dinner at a friend's house, the Herald said. The two teenagers are from

But the two denied Studds' contention that he was struck from behind without warning and claimed he ''somehow 'antagonized' them before the attack,'' the newspaper said.

The youths would not say how Studds, an acknowledged homosexual, had provoked them, but said they did not realize at the time that he was gay or a congressman.

''I have nothing against him,'' said Byrne. ''I really don't have a problem that he's a homosexual.''

The two youths, who were arrested by U.S. Secret Service agents within hours after the beating, are charged with felony assault on a member of Congress.

Studds, 53, called the youths' account ''ridiculous'' and insisted he had not provoked his attackers.

''This 'accusation' is an outright lie that apparently took two weeks to concoct and which conflicts with statements the suspects gave to police officers who apprehended them after the attack,'' Studds said Thursday.

''I never looked at, said a word to or paid any attention whatsoever to the assailants until I was blindsided, knocked to the ground, beaten and kicked in the body and the head. To this day, I don't have the foggiest idea what they look like. There was no provocation,'' the eight-term congressman said.

Witnesses, who confirmed Studds' account to authorities, also said the assailants kicked and beat the lawmaker as he lay ''semi-conscious'' on the sidewalk near his home in Washington's fashionable Dupont Circle neighborhood.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Senate sustained Thursday President Bush's veto of legislation to lift a half-century ban on partisan political activity by federal employees.

The Senate voted 65-35, 2 short of the two thirds needed, to uphold the veto, keeping intact Bush's unbroken string of victories in veto showdowns with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The veto was the 12th in Bush's 17 months in office and every one has been sustained by Congress. A 13th veto is expected soon on the family medical leave bill.

The House voted Wednesday to override the veto 327-93. The Senate and the House have to reject a veto for the legislation to become law.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters ''we are pleased the Hatch Act was sustained. We felt it would have politicized the Civil Service.''

The Senate originally approved the bill 67-30, a large enough margin to override the veto.

But White House aides had worked feverishly to switch votes and prevent an override.

Sens. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Trent Lott, R-Miss., who originally voted for the bill, voted to sustain the veto. Bush also picked up the votes of two Republicans who had missed the first vote, Sens. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., and Christopher Bond, R-Mo.

Vincent Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said, ''President Bush's strongarm tactics to force senators to continue to deny millions of Americans political freedom places him in the same league as the world's dictators.''

The bill would have allow some 3 million federal workers to take part in nearly all political activities, except running for public office on a partisan ticket.

The political activity of federal employees is governed by the Hatch Act, passed in 1939 in response to numerous scandals involving political patronage and efforts to solicit campaign contributions from federal workers.

Several efforts to ease the restrictions have failed and former President Gerald Ford vetoed revisions in the Hatch Act in 1976.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, voting to override a Bush veto for the first time, ''This bill does not repeal the Hatch Act. It eases some of the restrictions ... employees of the government have fewer rights than those living under that government.''

But Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said the bill was supported only by labor's ''soft money warriors'' who want a ''private preserve in which union members can solicit contributions from other union members'' with the money going into the campaign war chests of Democratic candidates.

''This is a political bill brought to us for partisan reason and with partisan timing,'' McConnell said.

The bill would have allowed federal employees, on their own time, to take part in political activities, such as working in campaigns or voter registration drives, or serving as delegates to nominating conventions.

They would have been allowed to hold office in a political party, but could not run in a partisan election for public office.

The bill would have prohibited federal employees from using their official positions to influence an election outcome, and would have restricted their fund-raising efforts by allowing workers to solicit contributions only from members of their own unions - not from workers in other government agencies or from the general public.

Bush vetoed the bill Friday, saying the Hatch Act was intended ''to protect federal employees from political pressure and preserve the impartial, evenhanded conduct of government business.''

Bush said lifting the restrictions on partisan political activity ''would inevitably lead to repoliticizing the federal work force.''

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., argued that 41 states with ''baby'' Hatch Acts have liberalized their laws ''and they haven't had any problems.''

''The president's fears of coercion are totally unfounded,'' he said. ''The opportunities for coercion are there now and they haven't happened. The bill would not require them (federal employees) to undertake any political activity.''

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (JUNE 21) UPI - Hungary took a bold step toward establishing a real market economy Thursday with the opening of the first stock exchange in Eastern Europe.

The market wasn't exactly bullish. Only 62 share deals were struck as young men in crisp business suits worked computer terminals while Hungarian and foreign visitors scanned the action. But IBUSZ, Hungary's largest travel agency, marked an auspicious beginning with its announced sale of $625,000 worth of stocks a few weeks ago.

The blue chip agency had offered stocks with a nominal value equal to $15 for the equivalent of $76, but they were oversubscribed 23 times in Budapest and at the Vienna exchange. Those who subscribed were happy to see their stocks trading at $94 soon after the opening.

The Hungarian news agency MTI said business got off to a good start with demand particularly hefty for Ibusz shares and OKHB papers. IBUSZ was also listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange, making it the first East European company on a Western bourse.

Forty-one joint stock companies founded the new Hungarian stock exchange with initial capital of more than $3 million. Each founder contributed $46,000 while the National Bank has provided $330,000 in cash and assets. The National Development Bank provided the premises in downtown Budapest.

The new Hungarian stock exchange is a self-regulated and self-governing institution established by joint-stock companies that are authorized to trade in securities. State-owned companies are barred from being members.

Stock exchange chairman Lajos Bokros, 36, who is also managing director for the National Bank and a Socialist Party Member of Parliament, said he believed the stock exchange would help boost the Hungarian economy. He said Hungary's former ruling Communist Party, now calling itself socialist "cannot afford to be against the market and private property."

However, managing director Ilona Hardy voiced concern over what she described as the negative attitude of the coalition government, led by the Democratic Forum, toward the stock exchange.

"The problem today is that there is a heavy income tax on dividends, and neither losses on stocks or money invested in them can be written off," she said. "Under such conditions nobody will really be interested in investing money in stocks."

Zsigmund Jaray, former deputy finance minister who is now working for a brokerage in London, helped set up the stock exchange. "Three years ago I didn't even dare to dream about a Hungarian stock exchange," he said.

The first Hungarian stock exchange opened in January 1864. It had grown out of a grain market founded by the Pest affiliate of Lloyds of London to stimulate trade in Pest, which was then a separate town across the Danube from Buda.

The ax fell on the stock exchange in 1947 when Hungarian banks were nationalized. It ceased to operate in its impressive headqurters on Liberty Square in 1948. The building is now occupied by Hungarian television.

The first step towards its resurrection was taken in 1983 by a group of banking experts who could not accept the Marxist view that it the market was a perpetrator of capitalist exploitation.

The first bonds for state-owned companies were issued that year, but they never became successful because the booming inflation rate, caused by the failure of previous government reform efforts.

Five year later, in January 1988, the first "brokers day" was held - a sort of pre-stock exchange - and they became a regular feature, with about 30 dealers meeting three times a week to exchange perhaps a dozen stocks.

Now there are almost 350 joint-stock companies in Hungary eligible to be listed on the exchange and their aggregate basic capital amounts to more than $3 billion.

The government also is trying to find ways to privatize the state sector, which still dominates 90 percent of the economy, and the stock exchange may eventually help in evaluating these companies.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - A jury of 10 men and two women selected Thursday will decide the fate of three youths accused of gang-raping a woman jogger beating her and leaving her for dead in a moonlit Central Park.

One of the women is a secretary at the United Nations, the other answers telephones at her brother's 7-Eleven store.

Jury selection continued Thursday afternoon at state Supreme Court in Manhattan as attorneys selected four alternate jurors. If the process goes smoothly, opening statements in the rape and attempted murder trial could begin Monday.

The first three youths to go to trial for the April 19, 1989, attack on the 29-year-old investment banker are Antron McCray, 16, Yusef Salaam, 16, and Raymond Santana, 15.

Six youths were indicted in the gang rape. The remaining three will be tried at a later date.

During jury selection, the prosecutor gave the strongest hint yet that the woman jogger, who does not remember the attack, will testify against her accused assailants.

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer asked prospective jurors if they would feel negatively about a witness who could not recall all the details of an incident.

As a result of the beating, the woman lost three-quarters of her blood and doctors initially described her life as ''hanging by a thread.'' She languished for two weeks in a coma with two skull fractures and residual pnuemonia.

Although she has had a recovery doctors describe as ''miraculous,'' she still battles double vision. She is running again but sources say her gait is irregular as a result of her injuries.

She has returned to her job at Salomon Brothers, where she was promoted to vice president earlier this year.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - United Airlines union leaders have approached Boeing Co. and General Electric Co. as possible investors in an employee buyout effort which is under deadline pressure, the Wall Street Journal reported Thursday.

Officers of UAL Corp. unions seeking a $4.38 billion buyout had no comment on the report, which said labor could offer the corporations preferred-supplier status on a huge, upcoming aircraft and jet engine order.

Seattle-based Boeing is in heated competition for the $15 billion United order, while one model under consideration would use engines made by GE, based in Fairfield, Conn.

The Journal said UAL unions seek up to $1 billion in financing from the two companies, reducing to $2.5-$3 billion what they would have to get from banks. The unions face an Aug. 9 finance arrangements deadline.

The paper said the UAL buyout group sought partial nonbank financing because the current economic climate has made lining up bank funding difficult. Banks also are wary of the unions taking control of the UAL board after the buyout.

The failure of an earlier UAL buyout consortium to line up commitments from bank financiers triggered the Oct. 13 stock market break. UAL stock was up 50 cents to $156.50 in trading midday Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange, but remained below the $201 a share level indicated by the buyout.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Mayor Marion Barry's lawyer Thursday pressed his attack on the credibility of the star witness in Barry's drug and perjury trial, grilling convicted drug dealer Charles Lewis about the deal he cut with government prosecutors.

Defense lawyer R. Kenneth Mundy spent the morning trying to whittle away at Lewis's testimony, steering clear of Lewis's claims that he frequently used cocaine with the mayor, but trying to show inconsistencies in other statements.

Lewis, a former city worker and native of the Virgin Islands, was in his third day of testimony.

Lewis testified Tuesday he used drugs with Marlene Johnson, chairwoman of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, a week before Barry visited the Virgin Islands in June 1986.

Under cross examination Thursday, Lewis acknowledged he had used drugs with Johnson on some previous occasion, but said it was not the week before Barry arrived.

Johnson has denied any drug use with Lewis.

''Charles Lewis is lying,'' she said.

Lewis's testimony is part of a plea agreement in which 14 felony charges against him were dropped, including seven counts of perjury.

Mundy was trying to establish doubt in jurors minds about anything Lewis has said.

''My client has given no ground during his testimony, he's been cool, calm and collected,'' Lewis's attorney, Mark Shaffer, said outside court Thursday.

Of Mundy's sharp, pointed questioning, he said: ''His problem is he's dealing with a truthful witness.''

Lewis, who could have faced more than 150 years in prison had he been tried and convicted on all counts, was released from federal prison this month but faces a sentence of up to 20 years on a separate drug conviction in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Lewis testified that on four different days in December 1988 he smoked crack with Barry in the bathroom of a Ramada Inn in downtown Washington. He said the two plotted together to cover up their drug use when they discovered police were investigating.

Barry is charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine use and one misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. If convicted he faces a maximum 26 years in prison and $1.85 million in fines.

At least seven of the 14 counts against Barry, including all three felony perjury charges, directly involve Lewis.

Lewis originally told a grand jury that he and Barry did not use drugs but later changed his story.

Mundy spent hours confronting Lewis about specific places and dates he used in earlier testimony.

After dismissing the jury, Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson told Mundy: ''I fail to see the reason behind the line of questioning.''

Mundy said he is trying to prove that Lewis - not Barry - was involved in a drug conspiracy.

''One of the defenses I can make to that is that this is not a conspiracy involving Barry but a conspiracy involving Charles Lewis,'' Mundy said.

Jackson allowed Mundy to continue the questioning.

Barry, wearing a red rose on a tan suit Thursday, seemed upbeat.

''The canaries are still here,'' Barry told reporters, using the term to refer to prosecution witnesses. ''We're going to try to shoot a few.''

Lewis became the focus of a police investigation Dec. 22, 1988, after a Ramada Inn maid told police he had offered her cocaine in exchange for sex. A police probe of Lewis was aborted when Barry was seen entering the hotel room.

The grand jury probe that led to Barry's drug arrest in an FBI sting five months ago began with an investigation of the Ramada Inn incident. Barry was arrested Jan. 18 at another city hotel, the Vista International, after the FBI allegedly videotaped him smoking crack cocaine.

The court released documents Thursday showing Judge Jackson had granted a government motion that information about the physiological effects of crack cocaine not be allowed as evidence.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela, symbol of black fortitude and resistance, swapped a prison cell of nearly three decades for all the world's stage and has moved from being a faceless martyr to a living icon.

Unflinchingly principled behind bars and, as a free man, equally determined before often skeptical or hostile audiences, Mandela at home and abroad has preached the gospel of resilience in the face of oppression displaying the will to fight on.

He brought the African National Congress to first-ever talks with the white minority government, giving the once-outlawed guerrilla-backed movement the status of a parliamentary opposition and imbuing blacks with pride and hope.

But while always noting the positive efforts of the reformist President Frederik de Klerk, he has never yielded on the view that only an end to all segregation and full political rights for blacks in South Africa's highest councils will be enough.

Mandela has also bound together scattered and bickering black leadership, shrugging off rivals with patient explanations and rousing crowds with driving rhetoric.

He has cajoled businessmen wary of his opposition to the free market, wooed politicians with his vision for the future, and stirred passion in growing legions of supporters.

''We believe in the right of our people to what is theirs. And these rights must be addressed, as painful as that my be,'' he told a mass rally in March 1990.

But Mandela has on the way to public fame evoked hatred among South Africa's right wing and mistrust among those cautious of the ANC's historic links to the traditional supporters of guerrillas worldwide - the Palestine Liberational Organization and Libya. These links have failed to damage the man.

Mandela has had little chance to hone his statesman's skills. His budding public life was cut short Aug. 5, 1962, when he was imprisoned and later sentenced to life at the end of a landmark trial with eight other senior leaders of the African National Congress for plotting the violent overthrow of the state. The sentence silenced the eloquent voice of a patient lawyer who turned his followers to violent underground opposition against apartheid only after decades of peaceful protest had failed to dent the system.

Until his unconditional release by de Klerk Feb. 11, 1990, an entire generation of black South Africans had neither heard him speak, nor seen him, nor basked in his presence, relying since 1989 on a color portrait sketched from recollections of his visitors and decades-old photographs.

But when Mandela the legend had to be tested against Mandela the man, he did not disappoint black South Africa, and has swept up the world.

Just hours after walking through the gates of the Victor Verster prison farm, where as its most honored captive he had occupied a private bungalow Mandela exhorted more than 50,000 supporters in the heart of nearby Cape Town to continue the fight where he had left off decades before.

The ANC would not abandon its 29-year armed struggle in the face of continuing apartheid, would not abandon its belief in socialist principles would not abandon its calls on foreign governments to maintain pressure on Pretoria, and would not abandon its ultimate demand for one-man-one-vote in a non-racial and unitary state, he insisted.

''We did not come this far to fail now,'' he called out over the mass, his voice hoarse from years of quiet talk.

Mandela gave notice he had not abandoned a single platform which originally saw him jailed and then vilified by ensuing white leaders.

In 1985, turning down an offer of freedom in exchange for renouncing violence, he replied that violence had been spawned by the state and in a message carried by daughter Zindzi added, ''I can not sell my birthright, nor am I prepared to sell the birthright of the people to be free.''

TOKYO (JUNE 21) UPI - The U.S. Navy Thursday said it recovered the bodies of two sailors who had been listed as missing after two explosions and a fire crippled the aircraft carrier Midway off the coast of Japan.

''Yesterday, two Midway crew members were killed and nine others were seriously injured when an explosion occurred at approximately 12:30 p.m. '' said Rear Adm. Lyle Bull, commander of the 7th Fleet battle force, at a news conference aboard the Midway.

The Midway limped back to its home port in Tokyo Bay under its own power Thursday afternoon, one day after two explosions and a fire rocked the 45-year-old ship during maneuvers 125 miles off the coast of Japan.

''Today, the bodies of the two deceased crew members were airlifted ashore at approximately 1 p.m.,'' Bull said. ''I would like to express sincerest gratitude to two heroic young men who perished in the line of duty.''

In Washington, Navy spokesman Lt. James Wood identified the two dead sailors as Seamen Ulric Patrick Johnson, 20, of Martinez, Calif., who worked in the carrier's mess hall, and Seaman Jeffrey Allan Vierra, 20, of Nevada City, Calif., an engineer.

Sixteen sailors were injured, including nine who were seriously burned and airlifted to Tokyo area hospitals, said Petty Officer 2nd Class Frank Mowry of the Yokosuka Public Affairs Office, the Midway's home port. The nine were in serious but stable condition, he said.

Bull said the cause of the explosions was under investigation.

''Let me assure all of those present here today, the Midway is safe and seaworthy in all respects,'' Bull said.

The Midway is the oldest aircraft carrier in the U.S. fleet of 14 and was to retire next year, but the fire and explosions may speed up plans for its decommissioning, the Kyodo News Service reported.

The Midway was conducting routine flight operations at noon Wednesday northeast of Tokyo in the Pacific Ocean when a fire erupted in an emergency equipment storeroom three decks below the flight deck, said Mowry.

''An explosion occurred at approximately 12:30 pm.,'' Bull said. ''The Midway's damage control teams responded immediately.

''A second explosion occurred at 1:15 p.m.,'' he said. ''The damage control teams secured the area and set fire boundaries at approximately 1:50 p.m.,'' he said.

He said the fire forced the damage control crew to slowly cool the area with water and then foam. The fire was extinguished shortly after midnight nearly 12 hours after it began.

The storeroom where the explosions occurred contained emergency equipment for fighting fires, but no ammunition or explosives, Mowry said.

Seven injured crew members suffered minor injuries and were treated aboard the Midway.

A mobile burn unit from a U.S. Army medical center near San Antonio, Texas was being flown to Japan to pick up the four most severely burned sailors and return them to the United States, Mowry said.

The city of Yokosuka, the Tokyo suburb where the Midway is based, demanded that Japan verify the safety of the ship before it was permitted to return to port. Concern centered on the possibility of an accidental detonation of a nuclear weapon aboard the ship, which is capable of carrying nuclear weapons.

''We haven't had any assurances yet,'' said Kenji Shindo, director of the city's base relations department.

The Japan Council Against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs issued a statement saying, ''If the explosion had led to an explosion of nuclear weapons it would have caused a major disaster.''

The Navy maintained its policy of refusing to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear weapons on any of its vessels.

Mowry said there was no danger of a nuclear accident aboard the 51,000-ton ship because the fire was far from any weapons.

The damage to the Midway may force the cancellation of an eight-day special U.S.-Japan naval exercise that was to have started Wednesday, U.S. and Japanese military officials said.

The accident follows a string of Navy disasters last year. At least 65 people died in 10 incidents worldwide that began with the April 19 explosion aboard the battleship USS Iowa that killed 47 sailors.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., suffered a separated pelvis during a horse riding accident at his New Mexico ranch, the FDIC said Thursday.

Seidman underwent surgery late Wednesday and is in satisfactory condition, the agency said.

The accident happened at Seidman's New Mexico ranch, where he was making an overnight visit before returning to Washington. Seidman's accident forced him to miss an appearance before the Senate Banking Committee.

Seidman was in New Mexico to deliver a speech to the New Mexico Bankers Association and to participate in an FDIC management conference in Santa Fe.

ST. LOUIS (JUNE 21) UPI - McDonnell Douglas Corp. could lay off 4,000 employees at its St. Louis plant, a union official said Thursday. Published reports indicated 7,000 to 8,000 people could be laid off company-wide.

The aerospace giant announced Wednesday across-the-board layoffs among its 127,000 employees were as part of efforts to cut $700 million in annual costs. The measures are necessary as McDonnell Douglas, the nation's largest military contractor, copes with defense spending reductions, the company said.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, quoting unnamed sources at the company and in Washington, reported Thursday the company probably would lay off 7,000 to 8,000 people nationally. A company spokesman could not be reached for comment Thursday to confirm the figures.

In St. Louis, McDonnell Douglas management indicated to the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, the plant's largest union that about 4,000 could be laid off.

"What ramification and effect it will have on our bargaining unit has not been disclosed by the company at this time," Michael Schoen, assistant directing business representative for IAM District 867, said in a statement.

"As we, the union, view the situation today, we do not see the layoffs affecting us in any great number. In fact, there there may be no impact on our bargaining unit at all." The IAM represents more than 12,000 of the 40,500 workers in St. Louis.

A company spokesman said Wednesday the layoffs would affect all levels of employees from management to blue collar workers and cover the company's passenger jet plant in Long Beach, Calif.

However, the Post-Dispatch said the greatest impact from layoffs was expected in the company's salaried and administrative ranks, rather than on its production lines.

The company's huge Douglas Aircraft assembly plant in Long Beach, Calif., has been struggling with major production problems in its military and commercial projects this year.

But job cuts would come at a time when order books for commercial planes are bulging, with more than $60 billion in orders. McDonnell Douglas previously announced plans to lay off 4,000 Douglas Aircraft workers.

In 1989, the company reported earnings of $219 million on revenues of $14.6 billion, compared with earnings of $350 million on revenues of $14.4 billion in 1988.

First-quarter earnings were $2 million on revenues of $3.8 billion, compared with a loss of $10 million on revenues of $3.2 billion in the 1989 quarter.

EAST BERLIN (JUNE 21) UPI - Thousands of camera-carrying tourists, soldiers and Berliners gathered Thursday at Checkpoint Charlie for a last look at the small Western military barracks at the foot of the Berlin Wall once the scene of a tense standoff between Soviet and U.S. tanks.

''It's awesome,'' said Paul Bagoy, 21, a U.S. military policeman, as he watched preparations for Friday's removal of the barracks at a ceremony due to be attended by Secretary of State James Baker and other dignitaries.

''It's great to be part of this,'' said Bagoy, standing below a sign, in French, German, English and Russian, that states: ''You are now entering the American sector.''

Above him, the U.S. flag fluttered for the last time above the small outpost, manned by U.S., British and French military personnel.

The barracks were never designated as a border crossing. Bagoy's job, as well as that of his Western colleagues, was to check the movement of military personnel traveling into the city's eastern sector.

''The only reason we were here is because they put up the border,'' he said, pointing to the East German border guards, who have long stopped the strict checks that were the rule before the ouster of the Communist Party government last fall.

On Thursday, they only stamped the passports of souvenir hunters eager to have the East German hammer and compass inked into their travel documents.

''The wall is coming down soon, the border is going and East Germany is virtually history,'' said one border official, smiling.

''When I started here two and a half years ago, I learned the word 'never'. I thought the wall would never come down,'' said Staff Sgt. Nathaniel Brown, another MP.

''I'm excited,'' he said, while filming the scene on his video camera.

Officials said thousands of Berliners, foreign tourists and military personnel converged at the checkpoint Thursday. Many bought souvenirs from curbside vendors - East German military flags and uniforms, Soviet medals and pieces of the wall.

On Friday, several foreign ministers attending German unification negotiations are to attend a ceremony to mark the removal of the barracks.

U.S. officials said Baker and the foreign ministers from France, Britain and the two German states were likely to be present but it was not immediately clear if Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze would attend.

U.S. and Soviet troops and tanks faced each other in a nervous 16-hour standoff a few weeks after Soviet-backed East German troops built the wall on Aug. 13, 1961.

The standoff began when East German border guards tried to bar American diplomats and soldiers from entering East Berlin.

The Americans sent 10 tanks to the border in a show of U.S. determination to keep its right of access to East Berlin and the Soviets countered with 10 of their own.

After 16 hours the Soviets withdrew and the American tanks left soon afterwards.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The United States posted a $42.5 billion budget deficit in May on income tax payments after posting a $41.8 billion surplus in April, the Treasury Department said Thursday. Private analysts had expected a deficit of $37 billion.

For the fiscal year to date, the federal government is running a $151.7 billion budget deficit, as against a deficit of $113.2 billion for the comparable period in fiscal 1989, the Treasury Department said. April's huge surplus, which was revised down from $42.5 billion, was attributed mainly to income tax returns.

GALVESTON, Texas (JUNE 21) UPI - A Norwegian ship Thursday was pumping the remaining crude off the Mega Borg, and an oil slick from the battered tanker moved farther offshore, the Coast Guard said.

''Everything is going well. They are now at full pump capacity, approximately 600,000 barrels per hour,'' Chief Petty Officer Jerry Snyder said Thursday of the cargo transfer or lightering.

''They anticipate that the operation will take five days to complete,'' he added.

Coast Guard Lt. Bob Hennessy said the 742-foot tanker Janus, which has a cargo capacity of 40,482 gross tons, arrived on the scene Wednesday. A second vessel, the Atlantus, was scheduled slated to take over for the Janus on Saturday.

The Atlantis is a German 784-foot tanker with a cargo capacity of 45,388 gross tons.

Workers earlier pumped volatile fumes out of the Mega Borg's cargo tanks, a job that had to be completed before the process of offloading the remaining crude onto smaller ships could begin.

The Coast Guard agreed that everything was ready for the lightering process, and the salvage master decided started the process at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, Snyder said.

The Mega Borg has been anchored 57 miles off the Texas coast since it was rocked by a series of explosions that began June 8, killing two men. Two others were missing and presumed dead.

The blasts tore open part of the vessel and dumped 3.9 million gallons of light crude oil into the Gulf of Mexico over nine days.

Most of the oil burned off in a fire that raged for a week, and 463,000 gallons have been collected by skimming vessels. An oil slick splintered over 30 miles has moved toward High Island but then stalled 7-10 miles offshore before seaward winds helped push it farther away from the coast.

Coast Guard flyovers indicated the leading edge of the sheen was 18 miles offshore Thursday.

''It's breaking up more because there is a 2- to 3-foot chop,'' Snyder said. ''The oil is not encroaching.''

''It is dissipating more each day. The oil that is heaviest is still being skimmed out there, although we are having a hard time finding that. Most of it is sheen and cannot be picked up and will have to dissipate on its own.''

Federal and state officials announced agreements Wednesday under which the Norwegian companies will pay $333,700 for environmental studies on the extent of oil spill damage in the gulf.

Part of the cost also will be paid by Elf Aquitaine Group, a Paris company that owns the tanker's cargo.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Supreme Court ruled Thursday that a warrant is not needed to seach a home if police believe that the person inviting them in has the authority to do so.

The court, in a 6-3 ruling by Justice Antonin Scalia, upheld the warrantless search of Edward Rodriguez' apartment in Chicago. The search turned up illegal drugs.

However, the charges were dismissed on a ruling that police should have had a warrant to search his apartment as provided by the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution.

Police argued that they did not need a warrant as they were invited in the apartment by Rodriguez' girlfriend, who they believed also lived in the apartment. Evidence presented at court showed she did not live in the apartment.

Nonetheless, the court sided with the police.

Scalia said the police had a reasonable belief that the woman, Gail Fischer, lived in the apartment and had the right to invite them in.

In dissent, Justice Thurgood Marshall, joined by Justices William Brennan and John Paul Stevens, said that ''by allowing a person to be subjected to a warrantless search in his home without his consent and without exigency, the majority has taken away some of the liberty that the Fourth Amendment was designed to protect.

CAIRO, EGYPT (JUNE 21) UPI - Leaders of 46 African states will gather this weekend to discuss water shortages and other water-related problems that a U.S. expert believes will ''severely'' affect 40 percent of the continent's population by the year 2000.

Egypt's Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Washington-based Global Water Policy and Technology Summits, which has received funding from the U.S. government, are hosting the four-day summit to begin Sunday.

One of the primary aims of the summit, according to Global Water Policy Director Joyce Starr, is to get African governments talking to each other.

In addition to problems of water scarcity and pollution, countries along the River Nile basin also face potential conflict over access to Nile waters.

Egyptian government officials have made it clear they will regard any attempt to divert the Nile as a cause for war.

Ethiopia, which has been accused by Arab states of receiving Israeli technical help to dam the Nile and thus restrict the flow of water to Egypt, plans to send a delegation to the summit.

Turkey, Syria and Iraq are also engaged in a war of words over water, which experts believe could lead to a future conflict.

Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi's attempt to turn his desert country green by exploiting water resevoirs in the south has failed its goal. Experts hope to discuss the project when the Libyan delegation arrives at the summit.

Starr said the Cairo summit on water - a commodity expected to overshadow oil by the year 2000 as the most precious commodity - aims at getting African decision makers together and to produce a first Africa Water Declaration.

''In Africa alone, 250 million people - about 40 percent of the population - will die or be severely affected by water shortages and other water-related problems by the turn of the century,'' she said.

The emphasis in the future will be on moving away from big, expensive projects such as Egypt's Aswan Dam, and concentrating instead on implementing small-scale water management techniques, she said.

''We hope dialogue will help confront issues kept until now under the carpet,'' Starr told reporters in Cairo. ''When the day is done, we need political cooperation.

Starr will co-host a Middle East water summit with Turkish President Turgut Ozal in Istanbul in October 1991, and there are plans for more water summits in Latin America and Eastern Europe.

Africa and other parts of the developing world are not the only regions threatened with severe water shortages. Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union for example have also been plagued by serious water scarcity and contamination problems, Starr said.

FRESNO, CA (JUNE 21) UPI - A Laotian refugee family's belief that their son was born disabled because of an ancestor's mistakes has come into conflict with a judge's order that the disabilities be surgically corrected, officials said Thursday.

A Fresno County Superior Court judge ordered the surgery, ruling that improving 6-year-old Kou Xiong's condition is more important than his Hmong parents' religious beliefs.

He was upheld by Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in a decision made public Wednesday that rejected the family's appeal to postpone the surgery.

Ger Xiong and Houa Vue believe bad things will happen to their family if surgery is performed to correct their son's twisted feet and deformed hip. Traditional Hmong spiritual leaders told them the disabilities were God's way of atoning for an ancestor's mistakes and that surgery would leave them open to further retaliation.

Dr. Brian Shaw, a pediatric surgeon who petitioned the court to order the surgery, said it may be impossible to find a medical facility that will allow the surgery unless the parents agree not to sue.

Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco has already refused to host the operation unless the parents change their minds, Shaw said.

''I can guarantee that if there's the least dissatisfaction with the result of the surgery or if the family's house burns down within 10 years of the surgery, there will be a lawsuit,'' Shaw said.

Fresno County Social Services Department officials said they may be unable to find a doctor or hospital willing to operate on the Southeast Asian Hmong boy because of his parents' objections.

''We're certainly not going to do anything that will be detrimental to the child,'' an agency spokeswoman said. ''We still feel the surgery will be best for the boy because medical experts have said he will end up crippled for life and confined to a wheelchair if the procedure is not done.

''However, we also have to continue to consider the child's relationship with his family and the possibility that medical authorities will refuse to do the surgery unless the parents agree. We most likely will continue to try to convince the parents that surgery is best for their son.''

Joe Reich, the attorney representing the Xiongs, said the Social Services Department could continue to look for a hospital that will allow the surgery or decide to leave the family alone.

''I really don't think they will be able to convince the mother and father to agree to the surgery,'' Reich said.

ATLANTA (JUNE 21) UPI - A life-threatening pregnancy complication in which the fetus develops outside the womb nearly quadrupled in the past 20 years in the United States, but the death rate dropped sharply, the government reported Thursday.

The occurrence of ectopic pregnancies, in which an egg develops most commonly in the fallopian tube, rose from 4.5 per 1,000 pregnancies in 1970 to 16.8 per 1,000 in 1987, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said.

The death rate, however, declined a dramatic 90 percent from 1970 to 1987, with 35.5 per 10,000 cases ending in death in 1970 and 3.4 per 10,000 resulting in death in 1987, the CDC said. Thirty women died from the condition in 1987; 36 died in 1986, the report said.

Blacks and women over 30 were at greatest risk of having an ectopic pregnancy, with blacks recording a 40 percent higher risk of being stricken than whites in 1987, the latest year for which figures are available, the CDC said.

In addition, the risk of death from the condition for blacks and other minorities was nearly twice that for whites, the report said.

CDC epidemiologists said blacks and other minorities may be at a higher risk of death from the condition because of reduced access to health care and lower awareness about when they become pregant.

''Until risk factors that lead to ectopic pregnancy are established and controlled, early detection will be the most effective means of reducing the morbidity and mortality associated with this condition,'' the report advised. ''All women should be aware of the signs and symptoms of ectopic pregnancy so that they can enter the prenatal care system as early as possible.''

Women living in the South were the most vulnerable to the condition in 1987 while those in the Northeast were at the lowest risk, the CDC said. The risk of dying from it was lowest in the West and highest in the South.

In general, detecting ectopic pregnancy is difficult, with the first symptoms often being upper and lower abdominal pain, said Melissa Adams, a CDC epidemiologist.

Unless doctors intervene surgically, the tube can burst, frequently leading to serious medical complications, she said. In all cases the pregnancy is lost.

The federal health agency said a higher occurrence of sexually transmitted diseases, particularly gonorrhea and chlamydia, is partially to blame for the overall upsurge in ectopics the past two decades.

In fact, a study in this week's Journal of the American Medical Association found that 306 women who had ectopic pregancies were more than twice as likely as 266 women who had normal pregnancies to have had a chlamydial infection.

Ectopic pregnancies accounted for 11 percent of maternal deaths, the study said.

The increase also led to a greater number of women being hospitalized for the condition. About 88,000 women were hospitalized nationwide for the condition in 1987, an increase of 19 percent over the previous year, the CDC said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Congressional Democrats rejected a $51 billion deficit reduction plan proposed by President Bush Thursday as ''not a good start'' and one negotiator said Bush must submit a better proposal before serious bargaining can begin.

''I would not judge it to be an adequate proposal,'' House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., told reporters, echoing the reaction of other Democratic budget negotiators. ''I'm disappointed it isn't more extensive.''

But Foley said he sees the plan, offered Wednesday at the bipartisan budget talks by Bush budget director Richard Darman, as ''the beginning of a process of greater specificity'' from the administration.

''It's not a good start,'' House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who serves as chairman of the budget talks, said of Bush's plan. ''I'm worried that it's far short of where it needs to be.''

Budget negotiators met Thursday to discuss the new Bush plan. Democrats, who are pushing for much larger savings than the administration has proposed, have said no decision has been made on when they might present a counter-offer.

But Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., House Budget Committee chairman, said, ''At some point we're going to have to respond.''

Panetta called the latest Bush proposal ''an important step'' but said, ''The question is whether or not it can begin the process of give-and-take.''

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., told reporters heading into Thursday's negotiating session that Bush's plan does not satisfy Democratic demands that the president outline his solutions to the deficit problem before Democrats do.

''In my view, this is a plan from which serious negotiations cannot spring '' Sasser said of Bush's proposal. ''If they want negotiation, they're going to have to introduce a new and serious proposal.''

The Bush plan - the first deficit reduction plan to be offered after five weeks of preliminary talks - calls for $50.7 billion in deficit reductions in fiscal year 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and $444.2 billion in savings over five years, according to a copy of the proposal given to reporters.

The $1.23 trillion budget Bush submitted in January called for about $39 billion in savings next year and $291 billion in savings over five years.

Gephardt and other Democrats have pushed for greater savings, particularly over the longer haul - between $500 billion and $600 billion over five years.

Bush's plan achieves added savings mainly by cutting another $4.2 billion from domestic programs and another $2.9 billion from so-called entitlement programs, such as Medicare and farm programs - up to $17.1 billion from Bush's January proposal to reduce entitlements by $14.2 billion.

The plan would cut military spending by $5.9 billion - nearly double the $3.2 billion cut Bush proposed in January but far short of the $13 billion Pentagon cut endorsed by the Senate Budget Committee or the the $11.5 billion cut endorsed by the full House as part of its budget plan.

Bush's proposal contains no significant new revenues beyond the roughly $20.5 billion in taxes and user fees Bush proposed in January - just $500 million in additional user fees.

The Supreme Court says political beliefs have NO place in government hiring. News reports from Iran say the death toll has reached at least two-thousand in an earthquake that devastated several towns today. U-S officials measured the quake at seven-point-seven on the Richter scale, one of the strongest on record in the area. It was centered in the Caspian Sea, 200 miles northwest of Tehran. The hardest hit area was Zanjan province, where Iran state radio says at least 16-hundredthousand were hurt.

CHICAGO (JUNE 21) UPI - Grain and soybean futures made session highs late Thursday and were mostly higher at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Widespread selling kept the market on the defensive during the morning, but when the selling interest faded, prices edged higher.

Trading was choppy throughout the day.

Higher basis levels contributed to the strength in soybeans along with the lack of farmer selling. However, the prospect of favorable growing conditions for several days limited the gains.

July corn was pressured by the weakness in cash prices, but the rest of the corn ended the day with moderate gains. The volume was rather light.

Wheat was higher across the board in choppy trading. Harvest delays were supportive, but there was continued uncertainty over weather-related damage to the soft red wheat crop.

The lack of export business limited gains in both corn and wheat.

At the close, corn was off 1/4 to up 3, soybeans up 4 1/2 to 6, wheat up 2 to 3 3/4 and oats up 1/4 to off 3/4 cent.

MOSCOW (JUNE 21) UPI - The 200-year-old prison in the Ukraine where five days of riots left five people dead was holding twice as many inmates as its capacity, the official Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Thursday.

Pravda said a total of five people died in the riots at the Dnepropetrovsk prison that ended Tuesday, one more than officials at the scene reported at the time. Two of the dead were killed by guards, one died from an overdose and two may have committed suicide, the paper said.

The Pravda report confirmed prisoners' complaints about squalid conditions at the prison, built by Catherine the Great in the late 1700s with additions in 1906 and 1910.

''The conditions were not in keeping with present hygenic standards and the prison housed twice as many people as it was designed to hold,'' Pravda said.

Local reporters said the riots at the prison began a week ago when a guard tried to take a radio from a cell overcrowded with 40 prisoners. In addition to overcrowding, prisoners complained of bad food, cockroaches ''the size of horses'' and limited visits from relatives.

The Pravda report Thursday added that convicts on death row were kept with other prisoners, including those still awaiting trial. Juveniles were housed with adults and often abused, the report said.

''The patience of those kept in prison wore thin and they revolted, smashing everything around,'' Pravda said.

An Interior Ministry official told United Press International Tuesday authorities were concerned about an ''epidemic'' of prison riots erupting over poor conditions. Pravda said Thursday prosecutors are afraid the uprisings will continue until changes are made in the penal system.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Thursday the nation is not in the midst of a credit crunch but agreed that some borrowers in certain parts of the country, namely New England, are having trouble obtaining credit.

Asked if a nationwide credit crunch existed, Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee: "The answer is no, not yet. The evidence we see today does not suggest that particular phenomenon."

"Certain sectors or individual borrowers appear to be having trouble obtaining credit, but these specific difficulties are largely consistent with lenders' and regulators' reactions to shifting risks," Greenpan said.

"Nonetheless, with the exception, perhaps, of the troublesome situation in the New England region, credit availability more broadly appears not to be significantly impaired," he said.

Greenspan said lenders have tightened their credit standards in certain sectors of the country, but he emphasized that the squeeze has not spread beyond areas already suffering soft real estate markets.

"Of course, anecdotal reports suggest that some bankers and their regulators have become overly cautious and have thereby exacerbated the very problem they have been trying to avoid," he said.

Greenspan's testimony contradicted statements made last week by Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp that a credit crunch exists and could hamper the economy. "My concern about this situation is that it is a very complex process and individuals can choose words differntly to describe it," Greenspan said.

The Fed chairman said that the economy is expected to continue its modest growth rate and that there appears to be enough credit available to "fuel this growth."

Some members of panel suggested heightened regulatory examination of banks'real estate lending practices has forced bankers to deny money to creditworthy customers.

"The current approach, whether justified or not, is creating a spiraling negative impact on our jobs," Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said, adding that employment in the Northeast dropped by 70,000 jobs last year. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said the credit crunch in New England is spreading from real estate lending to retailing and other commercial areas.

Greenspan said some increased lending caution "unquestionably is prudent" given weakened real estate markets in various parts of the country. "To date, however, whatever overreaction that may have occurred does not appear to have been widespread, and access to credit has not been reduced to an extent that has had a significant damping influence on the American economy overall," he said.

Comptroller of the Currency Robert Clarke told the panel his agency has not changed its bank supervisory policies but noted that in many cases "the environment in which bank examinations are conducted has changed."

"We haven't told bankers not to make loans and we haven't told them to cut off credit from good customers," Clarke said. "We have reminded them to take care in making loans and, where necessary, we have required banks to recognize weaknesses in their portfolios and management systems."

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 21) UPI - Further economic reforms were postponed Thursday during what was believed to be the outgoing government's last session, but minor measures on currency exchange and tourism were approved.

Sources close to Civic Forum, which led the November revolution ending 42 years of Communist rule, said a new government could be named as early as Friday or Monday.

Negotiations, meanwhile, continued in the capital of the Slovak republic, Bratislava, between the Civic Forum's sister party Public Against Violence and the Christian Democratic Movement on forming a new government.

The pro-democracy Civic Forum and Public Against violence together won 170 of 300 parliamentary seats in elections this month, the first multi-party balloting in 44 years. But they seek broader support to counter the second-place Communist Party and to pass essential economic and constitutional reforms, which require a three-fifths majority vote for approval.

Deputy Prime Minister Vaclav Vales told a news conference after the government session Thursday that further essential decisions on economic reform and privatization would be left for the new government.

The government also decided to close unprofitable iron mines in Slovakia, and adopted a measure to raise the minimum age for miners from 18 to 21.

To cope with an expected influx of tourists this summer, requirements to exchange a minimum amount of hard currency for Czech currency at the official rate - far below what the free or black markets offer - will be abolished for tourists from countries with visa-free travel to Czechoslovakia.

U.S. and Canadian citizens no longer need visas to visit Czechoslovakia, but British subjects will continue to require them.

New currency exchange counters will be opened in post offices and department stores, and the government asked Parliament to adopt tougher laws against black market money changing.

Leaflets explaining currency rules will be given to tourists at all border crossings and airports.

Government spokesman Zdenek Fiala said he expected visas will no longer be required of West Germans after July 1. France is now studying dropping visas for Czechoslovaks.

The government also canceled long-ignored Communist-era laws Thursday requiring citizens to report their contacts with foreigners and restricting where visitors can take photographs.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Police found a note with astrological symbols near a man who was shot and critically wounded in Central Park early Thursday and sources said they were investigating whether the attack was linked to the ''Zodiac gunman'' suspected in three other shootings.

The gunman has written cryptic letters with similar symbols to two news organizations, claiming responsibility for three shootings on the Brooklyn-Queens border Since March 8. Another note was found at the scene of one of the shootings.

All three shootings have been on Thursdays in the early morning hours.

Police Thursday found a note near the unidentified man, who was critically wounded near the Central Park Bandshell, said a police source. The source said the note was similar to the letters police believe were written by the gunman.

''We're trying to determine if it's related to the Zodiac,'' said the source. ''We're trying to determine if it's the same note writer.''

The contents of the new note, which was weighted down with a rock, were not disclosed, but the source said it contained astrological symbols.

The gunman's letter to the New York Post was published in that newspaper Tuesday and shown on television on Wednesday.

The latest victim, who was believed to be in his 20s, was found about 5:15 a.m. with a gunshot wound to his chest and was taken to New York Hospital, where a spokeswoman said he underwent surgery and was listed in critical condition.

The Central Park attack differs from the earlier three shootings in several ways. All three earlier victims were shot in the back or side, all were walking on the street in a six-block area in East New York or Woddhaven and all were light-skinned Hispanics or whites. The man shot Thursday was black.

Chief of Detectives Joseph Borrelli had speculated Wednesday that the gunman may have satisfied his lust for publicity and could simply disappear, although earlier he had said police feared the gunman would strike again.

A psychological profile was based on letters he wrote to the New York Post and the CBS News program ''60 Minutes'' and a note found at the scene of the third shooting, information from detectives and statements from the victims.

The gunman's victims all were seriously wounded and all but one, identified in Wednesday's editions of the New York Post as Joseph Proce, 78, have been released from the hospital.

The letters begin ''This is the Zodiac,'' and have a Celtic cross - a circle with a cross over it - and another circle with three astrological symbols in pie-shaped wedges.

The letter continues with the message: ''The 12 sign will die when the belts in the heaven are seen.''

The single-page letters listed the dates and times of the three shootings, described the victims and detailed where they had been shot. The letters also said, ''No more games pigs,'' and were signed ''Faust,'' apparently after the Medieval figure who sold his soul to the devil in exchange for knowledge and power.

DETROIT (JUNE 21) UPI - A Wayne County Circuit Court jury Thursday found Lawrence DeLisle guilty of four counts of first-degree murder in the drowning of his four children last summer.

Jurors agreed with the prosecution's contention that DeLisle deliberately drove the family station wagon off a dead-end street into the Detroit River last Aug. 3.

DeLisle, 29, who maintained a leg cramp made it impossible for him to stop the car, also was convicted of attempting to murder his wife, Suzanne, 32, who steadfastly supported DeLisle's version of what happened.

The jury of six men and six women returned its verdict shortly before 2:30 p.m. after three days of deliberations. On Wednesday, jurors asked to have portions of Suzanne DeLisle's testimony read to them.

Under Michigan law, first-degree murder carries a mandatory sentence of life in prison with no chance of parole.

During the trial, the prosecution alleged that DeLisle, beset by financial and emotional problems, drove into the river in a planned murder-suicide. The defense contended that DeLisle suffered a leg cramp and that the accelerator of the 1977 station wagon stuck.

DeLisle and his wife both escaped after the car plunged into the river, but the couple's four children, Bryan, 8; Melissa, 4; Kathryn, 2; and Emily, 8 months, all drowned.

DeLisle did not testify in his trial.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Standard & Poor's said Thursday a planned refinancing of RJR Nabisco Holdings Corp. would not upgrade ratings on junk bonds of the heavily indebted food-and-tobacco giant.

Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., the leveraged buyout firm that took RJR Nabisco private in a record $24.9 billion transaction last year, said Wednesday it would inject the company with about $1.7 billion in equity. At the same time, RJR Nabisco said it was considering retiring a "significant amount" of its poorest-performing high-yield bonds.

RJR Nabisco's announcement followed a report in The Wall Street Journal which said the company and KKR had initiated a $5.3 billion refinancing effort aimed at retiring more than $4 billion of $6 billion in RJR Nabisco's lowest-rated junk bonds.

Referring to the article, Standard & Poor's said "this plan would not result in a rating upgrade" of the company's "double-B" senior debt and "single-B-plus" subordinated debt. Bonds rated "B" or lower are considered speculative.

"The increased near-term requirement for cash interest and preferred dividends would largely offset the longer term benefits of a reduced but still quite sizable total debt and interest burden," S&P said. RJR Nabisco's junk bonds slipped Thursday as investors took profits after a sharp run-up in the issues the day before.

Before news of a refinancing emerged, the notes - which must be reset by next April to make them trade at their face value - were trading at such depressed prices that the company faced the prospect of fixing the interest rates at exorbitant yields to make the notes trade at par.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The recent rash of oil spills highlight the need for federal legislation, ratification of international treaties and more money for Coast Guard operations, lawmakers and Coast Guard officials said Thursday.

Members of the House Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation used the hearing on the growing incidence of spills to urge an end to the deadlock that has stalled major legislation on the issue since last year.

''The recent rash of oil spills in our waters underscores the need for moving expeditiously to complete our work on this legislation so that the work of preventing oil spills in our nation's waters can begin,'' said subcommittee Chairman Billy Tauzin, D-La.

House and Senate conferees are currently trying to work out a compromise on the legislation that would improve and expand federal spill cleanup capabilities, establish a $1 billion cleanup fund through an oil tax and establish guidelines for industry liability.

The key sticking point in the bill is a provision in the House version requiring ratification of 1984 international treaties, or ''protocols,'' establishing liability limits for foreign tankers involved in spills and an international cleanup fund. The Senate, which must ratify any international treaty, has objected to the liability limit on grounds it would override state laws on industry liability.

Coast Guard Commandant Adm. William Kime told the panel the recent spill from the Norwegian tanker Mega Borg, which was crippled by explosion and fire in the Gulf of Mexico, points to the need for ratification of the international treaties so that liability and cooperation standards would be set for dealing with foreign vessels.

''Most of the oil that comes to the United States comes in foreign flag vessels,'' Kime said. ''As much as we need to work to improve our domestic safety and response systems, we need also to do the same internationally.''

Several other maritime nations have aleady ratified the protocols, but Kime said, ''if we do not ratify, these protocols will fail. They will not come into force internationally.''

Rep. Robert Davis, R-Mich., the subcommittee's ranking Republican, said ''a global solution to oil pollution'' is needed. ''We are addressing other environmental problems internationally, such as global warming and acid rain, and I believe that oil pollution is an environmental problem that is just as serious.''

Kime outlined the Coast Guard's handling of the Mega Borg fire and spill, as well as recent oil spills in New York Harbor and in Buzzards Bay, Mass. and said the maritime service needs greater funding to both prevent and respond quickly to such accidents.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 21) UPI - Following an arrest-filled opening day, the 6th International AIDS Conference settled down to business Thursday with scientists urging early treatment of people infected with the AIDS virus.

Top researchers presented new evidence that treating people infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus or HIV even before they get sick appears to be the best way to slow progression of the deadly disease.

''We have to come to the conclusion based on the armamentarium of drugs we currently have ... that the greatest advantage in treatment of HIV infection has to occur with early intervention,'' said Margaret Fischl of the University of Miami Medical School.

Fischl presented results supporting earlier work that showed giving the drug zidovudine or AZT to HIV-infected people with slightly depressed immune systems but no signs of AIDS can slow their progression to acquired immune deficiency syndrome. It can take 10 years or more from the time someone is infected with HIV until he or she develops AIDS.

Dr. Luc Montagnier, a discoverer of the AIDS virus, meanwhile, reported an unusual microbe may act as an important factor spurring AIDS progression and antibiotics attacking the microbe appear to help some patients.

The French researchers presented findings suggesting a very small, primitive microogranism called a mycoplasma may increase the cell-killing power of the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus and thereby lead to AIDS patients' decline and ultimate death.

Montagnier emphasized the work does not contradict past findings that HIV is the cause of acquired immune deficiency syndrome but may help explain why some people get sick quicker than others.

A study of about 300 HIV-infected patients with no signs of AIDS, but with slightly depressed levels of key immune cells called T-4 helper cells, showed those patients who started AZT early progressed to AIDS less quickly than similar patients whose AZT treatment was started a year later Fischl said.

Also, the benefits of AZT treatment appeared to last longer in the group that received AZT the earliest, Fischl said.

AZT is the only government-approved AIDS drug to directly fight the AIDS virus.

One major concern with AZT and other experimental AIDS drugs is the risk of patients developing strains of the AIDS virus resistant to the drug.

''Many of you may see resistance as something depressing, but it is something we must not ignore,'' said Brendan Larder, a scientist with Burroughs-Wellcome Co., the maker of AZT.

Larder, who has previously reported that AZT-resistant strains of the virus show up in AIDS patients after about six months of treatment, said new findings indicate the resistance problem may be less severe if drug treatment is started earlier in the course of the disease.

A study of 18 HIV-infected people in Holland showed those who received AZT before they developed AIDS symptoms did not develop resistant viral strains until two years of treatment. In addition, those strains were only partially resistant to the AIDS drug, he said.

So far, no one knows what impact the drug-resistant strains have on a patient's condition or if they can be passed on to other people, Larder said.

One bright spot in the resistance picture is that AZT-resistant HIV obtained from patients does not appear to have developed cross-resistance to similar AIDS drugs like dideoxyniosine or DDI.

''It is likely combination therapy will prevent clinically resistant strains of HIV (ones that harm a patient's condition) from emerging,'' Larder said.

In a study presented at the AIDS meeting, researchers reported results showing one such combination - AZT with dideoxycytidine or DDC - can reduce AIDS symptoms while also cutting down the toxic side effects of each drug.

''This is the first major trial to test combinations of anti-HIV drugs in an alternating manner,'' said Dr. Thomas Merigan of Stanford University, a co-author of the study.

Researchers gave 131 people with AIDS or a related condition known as ARC for AIDS-related complex four different regimens that alternated AZT with either a high or low dose of DDC, which is made by Hoffman-La Roche of Nutley, N.J. In some groups, the drugs were alternated every week, in others every month.

The South African leader is in the second day of his U-S tour.

BOSTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Three protesters who blocked the view of a controversial photograph of a crucifix submerged in urine pleaded innocent Thursday to charges they trespassed at the art gallery where it was on display.

Police arrested Mary Kelleher, 28, of Newton, John McCarthy, 37, of Waltham, and Catherine Wommack, 55, of Boston, at the Robert Klein Gallery Wednesday as they stood clutching rosary beads with their backs to Andres Serrano's photograph, ''Piss Christ.''

The defendants, who spent Wednesday night in Boston jails, were freed on personal recognizance following their arraignment in Boston Muncipal Court.

The photograph was singled out along with works by the late Robert Mapplethorpe by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and other conservatives objecting to federal funding for art exhibitions which they considered obscene.

Gallery officials said the protest began Tuesday when five people came to the South Street gallery and stood around the photograph. The group stayed for two hours until gallery closed, officials said.

''They seemed to be praying. They didn't say anything. They basically blocked the view of the photograph,'' said Michael Freed, the gallery's associate director.

''We asked them who they were. They didn't respond to questions,'' he said.

When three of the five protesters showed up again at the gallery on Wednesday, Freed asked them to leave.

''We told them they were trespassing and asked them to leave. We gave them a warning. When they wouldn't cooperate, we called the police,'' he said.

Freed said while the three had a right to protest, they had no right to prevent other people from seeing the photograph.

''Our goal is to allow people who come into our gallery access to art. We want to give people a chance to see what's going on,'' he said.

''Piss Christ'' is only one of the controversial works on display in the gallery show entitled ''Provocations: Challenging Contemporary Photographs.''

Freed said the show touches on political and sexual themes and is intended to support artists who face censorship.

The ''Provocation'' show, seen by about 1,500 to date, opened May 12 and will run at the Klein until June 30. The Mapplethorpe exhibit is slated to open at Boston's Insitute for Contemporary Art in August.

The three protesters were due back in court July 20.

PASADENA, TX (JUNE 21) UPI - The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union Thursday unveiled a videotape containing footage from petrochemical explosions and outlining a seven-point plan for improved safety standards.

The film, which premiered at the union's Local 4-367 hall, fiercely attacks Phillips Petroleum and the entire refining and petrochemical industry for what OCAW calls unsafe operating and maintenance practices. Phillips' Pasadena chemical complex was the site of an Oct. 23, 1989, blast that killed 23 people and injured more than 130.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration fined Phillips $5.6 million and contractor Fish Engineering & Construction $729,600 for safety violations. Phillips is appealing the fines.

Phillips spokesman declined comment on the film, saying they had not seen it. They reiterated the company's earlier claim the disaster occurred because of a single, isolated departure from clearly established procedure.

The 34-minute film, entitled "Out of Control," is narrated by consumer advocate Ralph Nader. It features a number of explosions, including the Phillips blast, and interviews with workers at plants nationwide.

"More than a dozen fatal accidents, claiming the lives of oil union workers in refineries and petrochemical plants over the last five years, have been documented," said Bob Wages, OCAW vice president.

"These accidents claimed more than 60 lives while injuring more than 200 workers, many the victims of extensive burns," Wages said. "These numbers grossly understate the actual rate of injury and death in the industry." The figures do not reflect explosions and fires involving non-union workers or in which there are injuries but no deaths, he said.

OCAW claims that plant tragedies stem in large part from the use of many outside contractors for preventive maintenance and from inadequate maintenance.

OCAW also blames inadequate training for workers assigned to emergency response crews, inadequate evacuation procedures and protective equipment and the lack of updated process control features.

"The notion that these accidents are a result of acts of God just won't wash and the term 'human error' is just another form of blame shifting. The problem is corporate error - not human error," Wages said.

The film's script said up to 40,000 temporary contract maintenance workers are employed on a day-to-day basis in petrochemical plants. "A lot of time they'll just hire school kids and put them on the job," said an ex-contract worker in the film. "You think you have a millwright with you or a pipefitter, and all you've got is a high school kid. They just want to save money."

He said contract workers move from job to job without being trained on hydrocarbons, high pressures or toxics. "Most of them don't even tell you what kind of chemicals you will be working with or around ... sometimes a kid will say, 'What did I step in? Or what's that smell?' They don't even know," the former contract worker said. The film ends with demands that the petrochemical industry:

- make public all hazard and risk assessments prepared by the industry and insurance companies.
- give workers authorization to inspect, monitor, verify and even halt any process that presents an imminent threat to life and health.
- give all workers the right to refuse unsafe work without threat of intimidation or retaliation by employers.
- treat as criminal acts incidents of corporate concealment, reckless endangerment or attempts to silence whistleblowers.
- implement new laws requiring stringent training, maintenance and operating procedures, honest record-keeping and state-of-the-art engineering design and process controls.
- require businesses to insure workers against the loss of all wages arising from the destruction or condemnation of a facility.
- subject contract workers to the same standards as regular employees, including training, safety, experience requirements, health monitoring and record keeping.

MOSCOW (JUNE 21) UPI - Old-style conservative Communists moved to consolidate control of a separate Russian branch of the party Thursday by nominating a largely hard-line slate of candidates to lead the new organization.

The nominations came after three days of harsh criticism of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev for letting the party's power erode under his glasnost and perestroika reforms.

The leading candidates to head the Russian party seemed to be Alexander Melnikov, a party boss from Kemerovo who is a protege of Gorbachev's chief conservative rival Yegor Ligachev, and Ivan Polozkov, known for his hostility to fledgling cooperatives and other independent businesses.

But Valentin Kuptsov, a more moderate candidate who leads the party organization in Vologda, 300 miles north of Moscow, also was given a good chance.

In speeches Thursday seeking the Russian party post, Polozkov and Melnikov moderated their earlier violent criticism of the national leadership headed by Gorbachev.

Melnikov, who on Tuesday called for Gorbachev's resignation along with the rest of the Politburo and the party's Central Committee, said he was just giving the opinion of party members in his district and it could be good for the Soviet leader to hear it.

''Mikhail Sergeevich Gorbachev is our recognized leader, and we need to protect him in every way, including through such forms as criticism,'' said Melnikov.

Polozkov did not repeat his accusations of a crisis in the party leadership, saying, ''We have to stop as quickly as possible the constant talking fest we've been drowning in for the past two years and turn to real work.''

Conservatives are hoping that the new head of the Russian party, likely to be chosen Friday, will lead the charge against Gorbachev's policies at the crucial Communist Party Congress in early July.

The Russian republic previously did not have its own separate Communist Party branch, but Communists from the Soviet Union's largest republic dominate the national party and control its leadership.

Critics of the new Russian party, officially formed by a vote of delegates to a constituent congress Wednesday, fear its conservatives will dominate next month's national Party Congress and turn it away from reforms.

Other candidates to the lead the Russian party were Oleg Sheinin, the party boss from Krasnoyarsk; Oleg Lobov, second sectretary of the Armenian Communist Party, and Nikolai Polovodov, a worker from Leningrad.

Vladimir Lysenko, a candidate from the radical Democratic Platform group that wants the party to change its name and renounce communism as a goal, was given minimal chances.

Gorbachev, hit by three days of sharp attacks on his reforms, accused his conservative critics of slander Thursday for saying that the party was left out of the discussion of his economic plan.

In a broadside against the Soviet president Wednesday, Politburo arch-conservative Ligachev told the Russian Communist Party Congress Gorbachev had shirked his duties as head of the party and had not consulted it about the unification of Germany, the changes in Eastern Europe and the transfer to a market economy.

Gorbachev did not mention Ligachev by name Thursday, but made sarcastic reference to the accusations that he was sneaking decisions past the party.

''I see that the phonograph record is stuck, so to speak, and this keeps coming up,'' he said.

''This (market reform) was discussed by the Supreme Soviet, by the entire public,'' Gorbachev said. ''The whole Politburo participated.

''To think that this idea, this program, came out of nowhere, that someone thought it up and came out with it in a nightime coup with the aim of knocking the country off course - that is slander.''

But Boris Gidaspov, the powerful party first secretary of Leningrad, told a news conference Thursday, ''Unfortunately, there were no serious consultations.''

''In general, I consider such criticism (of Gorbachev) fair,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Citing rising tensions in the Middle East, the State Department urged caution for Americans traveling abroad, especially in the Middle East.

Spokesman Richard Boucher said, ''In view of the rising tensions in the Middle East, the Department of State recommends that American citizens traveling abroad and particularly in the Middle East exercise extra caution.''

He said that the pattern of the threat has been developing over the past few weeks, but it is possible that President Bush's decision announced Wednesday to suspend the U.S. dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization will add to the threat.

The department issued a warning May 31, also warning Americans abroad of threats from terrorist groups to Americans and U.S. interests.

Boucher did not give any specific suggestions for how Americans could exercise special caution.

ANCHORAGE, AK (UPI) - The Environmental Protection Agency has cited Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. for violating the Clean Air Act, a move state officials said Thursday will bolster their case against operators of the trans-Alaska pipeline.

The EPA alleges the pipeline company made changes in operations at its Valdez terminal and along the 800-mile pipeline without first obtaining the necessary state permits. Failure to correct the problems within 30 days could result in fines of up to $25,000 a day, according to the EPA citation.

The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation earlier this week notified Alyeska that its facilities were emitting "considerably more air pollution than previously expected." The state's findings came after a two-year environmental review of the pipeline operation. The EPA also was involved in the review.

The EPA citation, delivered to Alyeska earlier this week but just announced on Thursday, will only strengthen the state's allegations, said Len Verrelli, head of the state's air quality management program.

"It prevents Alyeska from pulling an end run," he said of the federal citation. "It gives us the assurance that what we've been doing all along was correct."

Verrelli has said the increased air pollution does not pose a serious health threat. Elements being released include sulfur dioxide, volatile organic compounds and oxides of nitrogen.

State officials say the pipeline company has so far cooperated with the investigation. Alyeska maintains that the changes it made at the port and along the pipeline do not require state approval.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Despite serious iregularities that gave the ruling Socialist Party an advantage, the State Department said Thursday the parliamentary elections in Bulgaria last week were essentially free and fair.

The assessment by the State Department raises the possibility that the Bulgarian government will become eligible for economic assistance from the United States, if the irregularities in the election process are investigated and corrected in time for local elections this year.

Spokesman Richard Boucher said, ''We congratulate the people of Bulgaria on having concluded their first multi-party election in over 40 years. Through their courage and determination they have put Bulgaria on the road to democracy, which will produce tangible benefits of freedom.''

U.S. election observers, however, saw serious shortcomings, Boucher said, including the overwhelming imbalance of resources, such as newsprint supplies abd access to broadcasting as well as ''widespread intimidation, particularly by local officials, a situation for which the ruling Bulgarian Socialist Party and the government must bear responsibility.''

''Despite these shortcomings, Bouch said, ''the major political parties have agreed to accept the election results and take their places in the new assembly.''

He said the the U.S. government wants all the irregularities to be investigated promptly and ''those guilty of intentional misconduct be held accountable.''

He added that the Socialist-led government bears the responsibility for seeing that no reprisals are taken against Bulgarians for their political views and actions.

TEHRAN, IRAN (JUNE 21) UPI - A powerful earthquake rocked northern Iran early Thursday, killing more than 10,000 people and injuring an estimated 13,000 others, official reports said. Thousands were still buried under the debris.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., measured the temblor at 7.7 on the Richter scale, one of the strongest ever recorded in the quake-prone area. An Iranian reading measured the quake at 7.3.

The state-owned Islamic Republic News Agency said the death toll in the quake ''has exceeded 10,000'' and many thousands injured were injured. Bad weather marred relief and rescue operations in the mountainous areas.

It was the worst quake to hit Iran since Sept. 16, 1978, when 25,000 people died.

Sadreddin Sadr of Iran's Red Crescent, said in an interview on CNN that 100,000 people were reported homeless.

President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani summoned his Cabinet ministers for an emergency session late Thursday, the official news agency said.

Television footage aired in Tehran showed desolate flattened villages with a few dazed children wandering about among huge boulders. Some houses appeared to have sunk deep into the earth. Adults were not in sight.

Tehran state television said thousands were believed buried under the debris.

In Gilan province, the death toll was put at nearly 2,000 with an additional 7,000 injured.

Confusing reports emerged from Zanjan province.

One report on the state radio said 1,500 people were killed and 3,000 injured in Zanjan city, 175 miles northwest of Tehran. An earlier report said 1,000 people were killed and 3,000 injured in Ab-bar, a village in Zanjan province.

Irna said 90 percent of the town of Roudbar was devastated in the quake, and other reports said more than 112 villages were either destroyed or heavily damaged.

The quake, which struck at 12.31 a.m., caught people in their beds and flattened several villages in the Alborz mountains northwest of Tehran, the news agency said.

TV crews apparently got to the villages by helicopter before relief workers had arrived, but officials said relief operations were under way. The agency said helicopters with medicine and relief teams flew to hard-to-reach points in the Alborz Mountains to evacuate the injured.

The U.N. Disaster and Relief Organization said the Iranian government needed international assistance.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said ''We're saddened at the loss of life,'' and added the United States had sent a message to Rafsanjani offering ''appropriate assistance'' if it is requested.

''Rescue workers are continuing search for those trapped under the rubble '' the news agency said. ''An air bridge has been set up between Tehran and the quake-stricken areas for transfer of the wounded to hospitals in the capital.''

But ''because of bad weather, rescue helicopters have difficulty reaching the affected areas,'' it said.

Central relief headquarters in Tehran put out an urgent call for non-perishable foodstuffs, tents, blankets, electric generators and heavy trucks and bulldozers.

IRNA said the military put all its resources, including planes, helicopters, hospitals and rescue squads, at the disposal of relief headquarters. It said ''scores of injured'' were still arriving at Tehran hospitals Thursday night.

A resident of Rasht on the Caspian coast reached by telephone from Tehran said 300 to 400 people were feared killed there. He said people stayed in the streets all night, afraid to go back inside because of possible aftershocks.

Rafsanjani announced a nationwide state of mourning and set up relief headquarters in the presidential palace in Tehran, but officials said reporters were not being allowed into the stricken areas immediately.

A Swedish diplomat in Tehran told the British Broadcasting Corp. he was awakened by the sound of a glass chandelier rattling in his bedroom. ''My bed was shaking and the chest of drawers was making a bit of noise,'' he said.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Nynex Mobile Communications Co. Thursday released a survey predicting that up to 31 million Americans will be using cellular telephones by 1995.

"By 1995, it is possible that as many as 31 million Americans will be using cellular telephones," said the survey, done by the research firm Yankelovich Clancy Shulman for Nynex Mobile, a division of Nynex Corp.

"Industry estimates indicate that more than 4 million people are already using cellular phones, just six years after the technology was first introduced," said the survey on "Cellular Lifestyles and Attitudes."

One out of five Americans polled said he or she would "seriously consider" purchasing a cellular telephone in the near future, according to the nationwide survey conducted among 600 cellular telephone users and 1,026 non-users. Those surveyed had a minimum household income of $25,000 a year.

"Americans are realizing that cellular telephones can make a significant impact in their business and personal lives," said Charles Many, Nynex Mobile's president.

Of the estimated four million cellular phones in use today in the United States, 86 percent were bought in the past two years and 72 percent are for business purposes, the survey said.

Of all the cellular telephones in use, the car version is the most popular representing 86 percent of the market, while the more recent portable telephones represent 20 percent. Some users own both a car and a portable telephone.

Nynex Mobile is the leading provider of cellular telephone service in the Northeast, with the bulk of its 250,000 customers in the greater New York area.

The main U.S. manufacturers of cellular telephones are Motorola Inc. and American Telegraph & Telephone Co. "The one thing you will see in the near future is AT&T's push in that area," Many said. "AT&T was disenchanted with the slow start for the cellular telephone market in the mid-'80s. But now, it is one of the fastest growing areas in communications."

Most cellular telephone users today are married men, aged 35 to 44, who graduated from college and are working in sales or middle management. But the survey said the fastest-growing segment among future users will be women and projected that 11.3 million women will be buying cellular phones in the near future, citing safety over business as the main reason for the purchase.

More than 95 percent of the 600 users polled said that using mobile phones has improved their lives, with 74 percent feeling more secure with a mobile phone in their car and 75 percent saying it makes them more productive in their work.

Nynex Mobile's Many predicted that as cellular telephones become more and more part of life, telephone companies will no longer assign a number to a telephone outlet but to a caller, who could be reached at any time through his personal number.

"We are moving from a car phone business to a personal telephone business, where you can contact anyone, at any time, anywhere with a telephone number assigned to a person and no longer to a place," he said.

He also predicted that cellular phones will move to the "walk-around market," with extremely light sets powered by pocket-sized high-tech batteries allowing users to make calls from any location instead of having to locate a public payphone.

"The main reason why people do not want to use public telephones in New York is not because they often are out of order but for health reasons. People are afraid of catching a disease, or AIDS," Many said. "The walk-around market will be the next step."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The House Appropriations Committee approved a compromise $15.8 billion foreign aid bill Thursday as Democrats retreated in their battle to reduce President Bush's request for military assistance.

In all, the bill approved by a voice vote with White House support provides $9.7 billion in economic aid, $5.3 billion in military money and nearly $800 million in export assistance.

The panel's foreign operations subcommittee last week had pared $526 million from Bush's nearly $1.9 billion request for military aid to countries outside the Middle East, saying the Cold War was over and it was time to shift the money to Eastern Europe, Africa and developmental programs.

But the full committee restored $144 million of the military assistance to U.S. allies, while also adding $50 million for the World Bank and cutting some of the aid for Eastern Europe and developmental programs.

Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., led liberal opposition to the changes, which he said left him ''very much disturbed.'' But Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., said the compromise was necessary to gain administration support.

However, a major obstacle remained - a provision in the bill halving Bush's request for $85 million in military aid for El Salvador, with conditions under which the money could be restored or eliminated entirely.

House leaders and the administration, to push the bill along, had agreed that any challenge to the El Salvador provision would be made when the bill reaches the House floor, tentatively scheduled for next Wednesday.

Edwards said Bush would veto the bill if it includes the El Salvador military aid cut, and added that he hoped House negotiators and the White House could reach a compromise during talks on the issue resuming this week.

Yates said liberals might mount a floor challenge if their negotiators give up too much on El Salvador. The House voted 250-163 in May for an amendment making the same cut, but the bill containing the provision was defeated.

Other questions left for floor consideration included whether to continue a ban on aid to the U.N. Population Fund because of its activities in China and whether to fund groups that offer abortion services.

Despite the changes made by the full committee, the bill still includes nearly $240 million more than the administration requested for sub-Saharan Africa and nearly $200 million more for Eastern European initiatives.

Much of the $144 million in restored military aid would benefit Portugal, Greece and Turkey. The committee increased the limits on military aid for Portugal by $5 million to $95 million, for Greece by $21 million to $301 million and for Turkey by $30 million to $430 million.

Both the subcomittee and committee voted to give the administration its entire request for Israel and Egypt. Israel would get $1.8 billion in military aid and $1.2 billion in economic assitance while Egypt would receive $1.3 billion in military aid and $800 in economic help.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Iranian news reports say the death toll has topped 37-hundred in a strong earthquake in northwestern Iran today. The U-S Geological Survey in California measured the temblor at seven-point-seven on the Richter scale, one of the strongest ever recorded in the quake-prone area. The earthquake flattened towns and triggered mudslides.

House Speaker Thomas Foley and House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt today said the new White House debt-reduction plan does NOT go far enough. The Democratic leaders want to see sources of new revenue and deeper cuts in the military. House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta says the Bush administration plan- his word now- ''stinks.''

The Supreme Court ruled today that a person's political affiliation may NOT be a part of any government promotions, transfers or hirings. The director of the Voting Rights Project for the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law called the ruling a ''death knell'' for political patronage.

The Senate today voted to uphold the president's veto of a bill that would have allowed federal employees to be active in party politics. The Senate fell two votes short of overturning a Bush veto of the bill aimed at altering the Hatch Act. A White House spokesman says the bill ''would have politicized the Civil Service.''

South African leader Nelson Mandela is criticizing those who think sanctions against his homeland should be lifted because of recent government reforms. Mandela said in New York City today that removing the sanctions now would be a serious political error with harmful effects.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 21) UPI - A growing number of homes with two or more videocassette recorders has led to an increase in the practice of illegally copying videotapes, costing the industry more than $500 million a year, a survey said Thursday.

"The survey showed that growth in multiple VCR households is the primary factor driving home copying activity," said Bill Krepick, vice president of Macrovision Corp., which released the study.

The survey of 1,000 VCR owners, conducted by the New York research firm of Schulman, Ronca and Bucuvalas Inc., found that five percent of all households with VCRs have at least two of the machines hooked up back-to-back for copying.

Macrovision, based in Mountain View, Calif., is one of the leaders in producing anti-copying technology for the video industry. "Consumers freely admit that if they are prevented from copying a title, in 39 percent of the cases, they would purchase the pre-recorded videocassette," Krepick said.

But Robert Alexander, president of video industry consultants Alexander & Associates in New York, said that he believes the incidence of home copying is less than two percent among VCR owners.

"Right now, you really have to want to copy," Alexander said. "You have to get a lot of equipment to do it, so you must know that you're doing something illegal, and I don't think many people are comfortable with that."

Additionally, Alexander said, movie studios have been slashing prices for videos, with new titles usually retailing for less than $20 a copy. "Most consumers would rather have a new copy rather than a copied one," he said.

However, Alexander said, the advent of dual-deck VCRs may produce an increase in home copying. "The dual-deck machines are an invitation to copy illegally," he said.

The Soviet leader conceded that his method of introducing higher bread prices set off panic buying across the country. But he said criticism of his plan is repeating like a broken recording.

MEXICO CITY (JUNE 21) UPI - The Mexican state-owned oil company, Pemex, announced Thursday it was increasing its prices for heavy crude and lowering the price of its light crude in the United States and Europe.

Heavy ''Maya'' crude in the United States was increased by 20 cents a barrel to $9.31 and in Europe by 10 cents to $8.90 a barrel.

Light ''Isthmus'' crude in United States dropped 20 cents a barrel to $12.58 and in Europe 10 cents a barrel to $13.11.

Prices for extra light ''Olmeca'' crude will remain at $14.17 a barrel.

The new prices will go into effect July 1, a Pemex spokesman said.

Mexico's Foreign Petroleum Trade Committee said the average price of Mexican crude (all three crudes in Europe, the United States and the Far East) dropped from $17.46 a barrel in December, to $12.02 a barrel in the first half of June, 1990.

The drop cost Mexico, the world's fourth largest producer, about $1 billion in oil revenues in the first five months of the year.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The World Bank Thursday announced $300 million in loans to help Hungary reform its economy.

The Central European country's drive to stimulate growth and establish a competitive market economy is being supported by a $200 million structural adjustment loan from the multilateral organization.

The core of the Hungarian program is the improvement in the performance of enterprises, including ownership reforms to transform state companies into modern corporations and to promote their privatization, the bank said.

A second World Bank loan for $100 million will help the country increase foreign-exchange earnings through a project aimed at boosting production of agricultural goods for export.

Funds from the loan will be channeled to commercial banks through the National Bank of Hungary and relent to agricultural enterprises to finance improvements in agro-processing facilities, marketing operations and equipment needed to increase production of crops and livestock.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (JUNE 21) UPI - Further economic reforms were postponed Thursday during what was believed to be the outgoing government's last session, but minor measures on currency exchange and tourism were approved.

Sources close to Civic Forum, which led the November revolution ending 42 years of Communist rule, said a new government could be named as early as Friday or Monday.

Negotiations, meanwhile, continued in the capital of the Slovak republic of Bratislava between Civic Forum's sister Public Against Violence party and the Christian Democratic Movement on forming a new government.

The pro-democracy Civic Forum and Public Against Violence together won 170 of 300 parliamentary seats in elections this month, the first multi-party balloting in 44 years. But they seek broader support to counter the second-place Communist Party and to pass essential economic and constitutional reforms, which require a three-fifths majority vote for approval.

Deputy Prime Minister Vaclav Vales told a news conference after the government session Thursday that further essential decisions on economic reform and privatization would be left for the new government.

The government also decided to close unprofitable iron mines in Slovakia and adopted a measure to raise the minimum age for miners from 18 to 21.

To cope with an expected influx of tourists this summer, requirements to exchange a minimum amount of hard currency for Czech currency at the official rate - far below what the free or black markets offer - will be abolished for tourists from countries with visa-free travel to Czechoslovakia.

U.S. and Canadian citizens no longer need visas to visit Czechoslovakia, but British subjects will continue to require them.

New currency exchange counters will be opened in post offices and department stores, and the government asked Parliament to adopt tougher laws against black market money changing.

Leaflets explaining currency rules will be given to tourists at all border crossings and airports.

Government spokesman Zdenek Fiala said he expected visas will no longer be required of West Germans after July 1. France is now studying dropping visas for Czechoslovaks.

The government also canceled long-ignored Communist-era laws Thursday requiring citizens to report their contacts with foreigners and restricting where visitors can take photographs.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - The U.S. government's upward revision of first-quarter gross national product figures was mostly dismissed by currency dealers in New York trading Thursday, leaving the dollar mixed to lower.

Foreign exchange dealers said the market tried to sustain the dollar's gains from the earlier Tokyo session, when it benefited from an institutional move out of yen and into higher-yielding European units.

But the dollar bulls failed to make any headway against the German mark and the U.S. currency ended lower against some European units.

"We made a run for the upside today and (the dollar) is just not bid," said Chemical Bank vice president Linda McLaughlin. "Now we're going to need some kind of catalyst to initiate a move on the downside."

The Commerce Department upwardly revised its earlier estimate of the gross national product in the first three months of 1990, saying the economy grew by 1.9 percent. The earlier estimate was 1.3 percent growth.

In late New York trading the dollar was quoted at 1.6760 West German marks down from 1.6780 late Wednesday. But it posted a solid gain on the Japanese unit, ending at 154.65 yen against 153.97.

Economist Jim Merrill of the McCarthy, Crisanti & Maffei investment bank said markets don't get too worked up over GNP revisions, and that in any case gains were from overseas, rather than domestic, corporate earnings.

But he said GNP inflation gauges are down and data tended to confirm that the Federal Reserve won't hurry to lower short-term interest rates - both factors which tend to support the dollar in currency markets.

On the other hand, Merrill said, the German, British and Japanese currencies all have reasons to rally in the next few months, while only a "wildcard" like Soviet instability is likely to boost the dollar.

Other dollar rates: 1.4130 Swiss francs, up from 1.4125; 5.6270 French francs, down from 5.6400; and 1,228.30 Italian lire, off from 1,231. The British pound slipped to $1.7210 from $1.7215.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly lower against the European currencies on a quiet trading day dominated by pound sterling developments. Analysts said the dollar showed little reaction to the U.S. GNP figure.

In London, sterling was active and held its early gains, closing higher at $1.7240 compared with $1.7215 Wednesday. Dealers said the pound got an early boost from foreign funds inflows intended to take advantage of Britain's high interest rates.

British Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major's alternative proposals to European Community plans for a Europe-wide currency had little impact. Traders said the project had little short-term relevance.

Wednesday night Major countered proposals by EC chief Jacques Delors, saying a European Monetary Fund, rather than a European Central Bank, should be set up. He also said European Currency Units, or ECUs, should continue to be used alongside national monies rather than supplanting them. The market positioned itself for Friday's U.K. trade figures.

In Frankfurt, the dollar slipped to 1.6800 marks against 1.6815 Wednesday, and also eased in Zurich to 1.4155 Swiss francs against 1.4185.

The U.S. unit was higher in Paris and Milan, at 5.6485 francs against 5.6395, and at 1,233 lire against 1,230.70 at close Wednesday. In Brussels it closed down at 34.46 Belgian francs from 34.50.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar closed higher at 154.60 yen against 153.98 Wednesday. Analysts said the U.S. unit gained on trade between some European currencies and the yen as a cross-trading intermediary.

Gold was up in Zurich at $350.50 an ounce against $347. It also moved up in London to $350 an ounce from $348 Wednesday.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $350.25 an ounce, up from $350 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $350.70 an ounce, up from $350.50 the previous session.

Silver closed unchanged in Zurich at $4.85 an ounce, and was higher in London at $4.86 an ounce compared with $4.82.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.845 an ounce, down slightly from $4.85. The Comex settled silver at $4.824 an ounce, down from $4.832.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Assets of the nation's 512 money market mutual funds increased $1.29 billion to $385.40 billion for the week ended Wednesday, the Washington-based Investment Company Institute reported Thursday.

The institute said broker-dealer fund assets increased $296.3 million to $159.53 billion, assets of general purpose funds rose $567.9 million to $133.85 billion and institutional fund assets increased $425.9 million to $92.02 billion.

"The recent pattern of changes in yield relationships favoring money market fund portfolios continued as yields on short-term certificates of deposit remained stable and yields on money market funds inched up," said Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the institute. "In response to these changes, assets of money markets funds posted another week of solid gains."

The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization of Holliston, Mass., said Wednesday average seven-day simple yields rose to 7.67 percent from 7.65 percent and 30-day simple yields fell to 7.67 percent from 7.68 percent. The average maturity of fund portfolios lengthened to 44 days.

The Bank Rate Monitor of North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money market deposit accounts, 6.01, down from 6.02; Super-Now accounts, 4.99 percent, down from 5.00; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.70 percent, down from 7.71; one-year CDs, 7.84 percent, down from 7.86; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.84 percent, down from 7.86; and five-year CDs, 7.91 percent, off from 7.92.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.47 percent down from 8.52.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage in the latest week was unchanged at 9.77 percent, while the average rate for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage was 9.96 percent, up from 9.94.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was 12.27 percent, up from 12.26 percent.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Doro Bush LeBlond, the youngest of President and Barbara Bush's five grown children, is preparing to move from Cape Elizabeth, Maine, to Washington this summer, the first lady's press secretary said Thursday.

Ana Perez said LeBlond, 30, will work in public relations at the National Rehabilitation Hospital, beginning Aug. 1. She will live in a house in the city with her two children, Sam, 5, and Ellie, 3.

LeBlond has been separated from her husband, William, for the past year and is in the process of getting a divorce. She had worked until recently in Maine's office of tourism in Portland.

Doro LeBlond has been a frequent visitor at the White House since her father took office 17 months ago and, Perez said, has a number of friends in Washington. ''She is happy to be here,'' the press secretary said.

BETHESDA, MD (JUNE 21) UPI - A government panel Thursday could not resolve a controversy over how best to treat about half of all breast cancer patients.

After two days of discussion, the 15-member expert panel said there was insufficient evidence to recommend all breast cancer patients who are diagnosed early should receive chemotherapy after surgery.

''The role of these treatments in improving overall survival and other important parameters such as quality of life is still being defined,'' said the panel, which was assembled by the National Institutes of Health.

Instead, the panel repeated previous recommendations that all such women - about 75,000 who are diagnosed each year in the United States - be given only the option of receiving chemotherapy.

''The decision to use adjuvant treatment should follow a thorough discussion with the patient regarding the likely risk of relapse without (chemotherapy), the expected reduction in risk with (chemotherapy), toxicities of therapy and its impact on the quality of life. Some degrees of improvement may be so small that they are outweighted by the disadvantages of therapy,'' the panel said.

Dr. Andrew Dorr of the National Cancer Institute, who assembled the panel, said he was disappointed because many doctors had hoped it would issue a more definitive recommendation. ''It doesn't clear the air,'' he said. ''At a national level, it's somewhat disappointing.''

Dr. William Wood, an associate professor of surgey at Harvard Medical School who chaired the panel, said each woman must take various factors into consideration when deciding what treatment to undergo.

''We don't want to standardize a response because women are so individual and the risk of their particular tumor for them is their values and the decisions they make as to how their treatment will affect them is individual,'' Wood said.

About 150,000 American women are diagnosed as having breast cancer each year in the United States and about 44,000 women die from the illness, making it the No. 2 cause of cancer death in the United States among women.

About half of all women are diagnosed when their cancer is in its earliest most treatable stages - before the cancer has spread, specifically to their lymph nodes under their arms.

Doctors had thought these so-called ''node-negative'' women could be treated effectively by surgically removing the cancer, without the need for any followup chemotherapy that is recommended for women with advanced cancer. Studies have shown most node-negative women can be cured by surgery alone.

But recent studies have shown that women whose cancer is detected early may benefit from chemotherapy, with the treatments significantly reducing their risk of suffering a recurrence, which are usually deadly.

The studies triggered disagreement among doctors, with some recommending followup chemotherapy for all node-negative women to avoid the deadly recurrences for some.

Other doctors argued that it was not worth subjecting thousands of women to the side effects of chemotherapy, which include nausea, hair loss and vomiting, when most can be cured without the treatment.

The expert panel recommended these women should have the relapse risk and possible benefit of chemotherapy explained to them. If they are eligible, they should be offered the opportunity to join studies evaluating followup chemotherapy, the panel said.

The panel also recommended additional research to determine who might benefit the most from followup chemotherapy.

Researchers are trying to develop ways to identify those patients most likely to suffer recurrences and therefore most likely to benefit from chemotherapy. Some tests have shown promise.

The panel also stated that most breast cancer patients could be candidates for surgery that preserves as much of the breast as possible, followed by radiation.

LAS VEGAS, NEV (UPI)- Hilton Hotels Corp. won final state approval Thursday to open the 2,000-room Flamingo Hilton-Laughlin resort in the gaming boomtown of Laughlin, Nev. on Aug. 1.

John Giovenco, who heads Hilton's gaming resort properties, said the resort was the largest ever built by Hilton, although the company has acquired larger and more expensive resorts.

Gary Gregg, vice president and general manager of the Laughlin hotel-casino, told an earlier meeting of the Nevada Gaming Control Board that a $600,000 newspaper advertising campaign was being launched to target Southern California and Phoenix customers.

The hotel's 2,000 rooms will go on line over a period of several days beginning Aug. 1 to allow employees to adjust to their new jobs, said Giovenco. He said 600 rooms would be available opening day.

Giovenco said the Laughlin hotel was completed on time and only 6 percent over budget.

He said room rates would be $31 a night in the $190 million resort with its 50,000-square-foot casino filled with 1,500 slot machines and 51 table games as well as KENO and a race book.

Giovenco said the hotel-casino, about 100 miles from Las Vegas, would employ 1,700 people. He said 7,000 job applications had been received, 50 percent from people who had never worked in the gambling resort industry.

Laughlin is expected to have full air service by December, 1991, when a 7,500- foot runway capable of accommodating Boeing 737s is completed at the Bullhead City, Ariz., airport.

A $5 million, 42,000-square-foot air terminal building currently is out for bid, according to gaming industry officials.

The Flamingo Hilton-Laughlin resort's gambling application approved Thursday listed Giovenco as president, secretary, treasurer and sole director of Flamingo Hilton-Laughlin Inc. which is a subsidiary of Flamingo Hilton Corp. which is held by Hilton Hotels Corp.

Gregg was licensed as vice president and general manager and Michael Boyle was listed as Senior Vice President of Gaming Operations.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The World Bank announced Thursday $292 million in loans to help Yugoslavia modernize and maintain roads.

The nation's $2.3 billion, two-year project is supposed to strengthen highway planning and maintenance, to upgrade roads with the aim of bolstering domestic economic activities and tourism and to improve links with neighboring countries.

Broken down by republics, World Bank loans will be made as follows: $55 million to Bosnia-Herzegovina, $75 million to Croatia, $22 million to Macedonia, $55 million to Serbia and $60 million to Slovenia. Another $25 million will go to the province of Vojvodina.

Other financing for the project will come from local road revenues, an earlier World Bank loan, the European Investment Bank and other foreign sources, the multilateral organization said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Electromagnetic fields emanating from power transmission lines and home appliances are a ''possible but not proven'' cause of cancer in people, with the strongest evidence of risk coming from studies of children, a draft EPA report said Thursday.

In a preliminary review of scientific studies of exposed humans and laboratory animals, the Environmental Protection Agency said evidence shows electromagnetic fields cause ''biological effects'' consistent with the development of cancer.

However, EPA officials said the phenomenon is still too poorly understood for researchers to draw any firm conclusions.

''At this time, such a characterization regarding the link between cancer and exposure to electromagnetic fields is not appropriate because the basic nature of the interaction between electromagnetic fields and biological processes leading to cancer is not understood,'' said the report prepared by the EPA's Office of Health and Environmental Assessment.

For example, the report said it was possible that exposure to stronger electromagnetic fields may be less hazardous than exposure to weaker fields.

''Because of this uncertainty, it is inappropriate to make generalizations about the carcinogenicity of electromagnetic fields,'' it said.

''With our current understanding, we can identify magnetic fields from power lines and perhaps other sources in the home as a possible, but not proven, cause of cancer in people.''

The study said it reviewed 40 studies involving human exposure to electromagnetic fields and that the strongest evidence of a link to cancer comes from studies of children.

It said six of the studies on children examined residential exposure from electric power transmission and distribution lines and two others looked at cancer in children in relation to the father's occupation.

''These studies have consistently found modestly elevated risks - some statistically significant - of leukemia, cancer of the nervous system and, to a lesser extent, lymphomas,'' the report said.

Those studies, the report added, ''show a consistent pattern of response which suggests, but does not prove, a causal link.''

The report noted that in one of those studies on children, researchers considered other factors that might have caused cancer, but ''no other agents have been identified to explain this association.''

The report said studies of adult exposure to electromagnetic fields were less reliable because adults are exposed to more cancer-causing agents.

However, it added: ''The statistically significant excess risks of leukemia in amateur radio operators requires further examination.''

The report said controlled experiments involving exposure of mice and other laboratory animals to electromagnetic fields produced body changes linked with the development of cancer.

''In view of these laboratory studies, there is reason to believe that the findings of carcinogenicity in humans are biologically plausible,'' the study said.

''However, the explanation of which biological processes are involved and the way in which these processes causally relate to each other and to the induction of malignant tumors is not understood.''

FORT WORTH, TEXAS (JUNE 21) UPI - Pier 1 Imports Inc., a specialty retailer of home furnishings, Thursday reported earnings of $7.7 million, or 22 cents a share, in fiscal first quarter, up from $6.7 million, or 19 cents a share, in the same period of last year.

Revenues for the quarter ended June 2 were up 21.5 percent to $138.4 million from $114 million last year.

''The sales environment for the quarter was characterized by cold and rainy weather in many consumer areas and a softness in the demand for furniture and home related items,'' said Chairman Clark Johnson. But the results were helped by strong expense control and a successful inventory balancing, he said.

Pier 1 operates 531 stores in 43 states and Canada.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Detectives believe a homeless man who was shot and critically wounded early Thursday as he slept on a Central Park bench is the fourth victim of an attacker obsessed with the 12 signs of the Zodiac, police officials said.

Detectives found a note with astrological symbols on a bench near where the victim was shot. Police document analysts believe it is the work of the person who has written three other such notes and claimed responsibility for shooting and seriously wounding three men on the Brooklyn-Queens border since March 8.

''By comparision now we're pretty well assured that the individual who has shot three other people is responsible for this fourth shooting,'' Chief of Detectives Joseph Borrelli said at a news conference. ''The content of the note and some of the markings on the note are very consistent with the prior three shootings.''

Borrelli said the shooting near the Central Park Bandshell - a departure from the previous pattern of attacks in a six-block area of near the Brooklyn-Queens border - means the attacker could be stalking victims across the city and would force detectives to expand their investigation.

''It's completely out of the area,'' Borrelli said. ''This opens up a whole new Pandora's Box for us. Now we've got the whole city now to be looking at.''

The chief said investigators believe the attacker is preying on helpless victims, noting that the first and third victims walked with canes, the second victim apparently was drunk and the third asleep.

Borrelli, who Thursday increased a task force formed Tuesday to track down the attacker, said the would-be killer may have been driven out of the Brooklyn-Queens area by increased police presence there in response to the shootings.

The homeless victim, whom police did not identify, was expected to survive the chief said.

The attacker has written cryptic letters with similar symbols claiming responsibility for the attacks to the New York Post and the CBS News ''60 Minutes'' program. A third note was found at the scene of the third shooting.

All three previous shootings have been on Thursdays in the early morning hours.

Borrelli declined to disclose the contents of the new note, saying only that it was on similar paper to the others and had a fourth sign of the Zodiac.

The victim, who Borrelli said was 30, was found about 5:15 a.m. with a gunshot wound to his chest and was taken to New York Hospital, where a spokeswoman said he underwent surgery and was listed in critical condition.

The Central Park attack differs from the three previous shootings in several ways. All three earlier victims were shot in the back or side, all were walking on the street in the six-block area along the Brooklyn-Queens border and all are light-skinned Hispanics or whites. The latest victim is black.

Investigators also ruled out any link to ''The Zodiac,'' who has claimed as many as 40 murders in a series of notes sent to San Francisco-area newspapers from 1968 to 1987.

All the New York victims were seriously wounded, and all but one, identified in Wednesday's editions of the New York Post as Joseph Proce, 78, have been released from the hospital. The letters suggest that the attacker believed all these victims had died.

The letters begin ''This is the Zodiac,'' and have a Celtic cross - a circle with a cross over it - and a second circle with three astrological symbols in pie-shaped wedges.

The letter continues with the message: ''The 12 sign will die when the belts in the heaven are seen.''

The single-page letters listed the dates and times of the three shootings, described the victims and detailed where they had been shot. The letters also said, ''No more games pigs,'' and were signed ''Faust,'' apparently after the Medieval figure who sold his soul to the devil in exchange for knowledge and power.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Nearly four-thousand people die in a powerful earthquake in Iran... the Supreme Court deals a serious blow to political patronage... and Nelson Mandela goes to church in New York City. Those and other top stories, next, from U-P-I.

The United Nations says Iran needs medical supplies and tents following a powerful earthquake that reportedly killed nearly four-thousand people today.

More than 10-thousand people were hurt in the quake that the U-S Geological Survey says registered seven-point-seven on the Richter scale.

Official Iranian news reports say the early morning quake destroyed towns and triggered mudslides in northwest Iran. Thousands are believed still buried under the debris.

The temblor was centered in Soviet Azerbaijan , some 200 miles northwest of Tehran. The hardest hit area was Iran's Zanjan province, where more than 16-hundred people died and three-thousand were hurt.

The U-N Disaster and Relief Organization says Iran needs international help, including medical supplies and tents, canned food, blankets, clothing, vehicles and heavy duty equipment.

President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani announced a nation-wide state of mourning and set up relief headquarters in the presidential palace in Tehran.

DETROIT (JUNE 21) UPI - General Motors Corp. confirmed Thursday plans to idle about 4,300 workers at its Willow Run plant for two weeks in July as it adds wagon, police and taxi versions of its large, rear-drive Chevrolet Caprice sedan.

GM will also add Buick and Oldsmobile versions of the Caprice wagon during the shutdown the weeks of July 9 and 16, company spokesman Nettie Seabrooks said.

''This is the period where we are trying to fine tune the schedules,'' Seabrooks said, noting that workers were just notified of the production plans.

Production of the Caprice wagon was scheduled to to start July 25, with output to begin at a slow pace, said Red Evans, of United Auto Workers Local 1776 which represents workers at the plant in Ypsilsanti, Mich.

The Buick version is to enter production Aug. 1, followed by the Oldsmobile wagon on Aug. 8, he said.

Willow Run began building the V8-powered Caprice sedans last December.

GM also intends to start production of the Caprice sedan at its Arlington, Texas, plant June 27. That plant has been idled since April 27.

Separately, Chrysler Corp. said Thursday it planned to idle 2,200 hourly workers beginning next week at its Dodge City truck plant in Warren, Mich. for model changeover.

That plant, which makes mid- and full-sized pickup trucks, will resume production the week of July 16, a company spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Senate killed a Republican proposal Thursday to allow rent vouchers, along with building and rehabilitation, as options to develop decent and affordable housing despite warnings that rejection would doom the first major housing bill in a decade.

The Senate beat the GOP proposal 52-45 despite a warning from Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who said, ''If this amendment fails, then we're not going to have a housing bill. Unless this amendment is agreed to ... we are wasting our time.''

The vote on the amendment, which followed party lines, was the first test between the administration and Senate Democrats over the ambitious $17.6 billion housing bill.

The amendment, offered by Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., would include the use of rental assistance as an option in the proposed HOP program. The program would be a partnership between the federal government, the states and the private sector to develop decent and affordable housing.

The $2 billion HOP program is considered the cornerstone and the major new feature of the legislation designed to set revamped federal housing policy.

Mack introduced his amendment as negotiations between the administration and Senate Democrats appeared to have slowed or possibly collapsed, following three days of intense discussions.

Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, his party's floor manager for the bill, said Housing Secretary Jack Kemp ''will not meet with us ... he will not return my phone calls.''

Cranston said that budget director Richard Darman has indicated he is ready to continue negotiations but only if Kemp comes to the table.

The administration has raised numerous obejctions to the Senate housing bill and the Senate GOP Policy Committee has warned senior advisers will urge a veto by President Bush if the objections are not resolved.

Among the administration's major sticking points are: the HOP program is geared much too heavily to construction, compared to rehabilitation; Bush's HOPE program to help low-income people buy homes is short-changed; and the cost that HUD estimates at $5 billion in new programs the first year but Cranston insists is $3.1 billion.

Cranston argued that the Mack amendment would ''gut'' the HOP program because it would do nothing to increase the pool of affordable housing.

''It may seem to be a simple effort to give mayors and governors a bit more flexibility in choosing how to provide housing,'' Cranston said. ''Instead, it would take a program that was designed to be a useful, new tool in the hands of the mayors and governors and turn it into a weapon pointed at their heads.''

But Mack said ''the only way it (the amendment) could be gutted is if the mayors and the governors around the country feel that the best way to go with the money is rental assistance.''

Mack said that in some communities - those with many vacant units - rental assistance would make up a portion of the overall plan. But in others, he said, the market would be too tight.

Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., said HOP is ''intended to serve as cornerstone of a new partnership whose primary purpose is to expand the availability of affordable housing. ... There is going to have to be some expansion of supply.''

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said the Mack amendment ''is at the heart of the flexibility we should offer the housing authorities. It allows each housing authority to make a choice.''

The $2.3 billion for existing rental vouchers and other assistance was not affected by the Mack amendment.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Manhattan, inc. will merge this summer with M magazine to form a men's fashion publication with a ''business bent'' called M. inc., it was announced Thursday.

The new venture will be aimed at an affluent male readership much sought after by advertisers, said Patricia Matson, a spokesman for Capital Cities/ABC Inc., which owns M through its Fairchild Fashions and Merchandising Group.

Financial terms of the merger were not disclosed.

The move comes as Conde Nast Inc. prepares to convert Details magazine into a men's magazine, and as Rupert Murdoch tests the waters with a new publication called Men's Life.

M inc., which will be edited by M editor-in-chief Jane Lane, would have a circulation of about 245,000, more than double that of M, Matson said.

Manhattan Inc. editor Clay Felker will remain at the new magazine as editor-at-large.

''The marketplace has been tough, but the magazines individually have been a critical success,'' Matson said. ''The challenge was how to improve the reach.''

Glossy M magazine, distinguished by a scarlet ''M'' on its cover page, is a lifestyle and features magazine launched in October 1983 by Fairchild Publications.

Manhattan, inc. began in September 1984 by Metrocorp, which also publishes Philadelphia Magazine and Boston Magazine, and quickly earned critical praise for well-written profiles and feature stories about New York businessmen and women.

Metrocorp chairman D. Herbert Lipson was named president of the new venture, but M inc. will be a Fairchild publication.

Lipson said in a statement released by Capital Cities that M inc. ''brings together all interests of the successful, well-heeled man.''

M inc. will be published from Fairchild's Manhattan offices.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The International Monetary Fund said Thursday it restored the right of Guyana to obtain loans from the multilateral organization after the South American country paid its overdue debts.

This was the first IMF case of settlement of arrears and removal of lending ineligibility.

The IMF's executive board maded Guyana eligible again to use the general resources of the fund, effective June 20, after the nation paid $140 million to fully settle its overdue financial obligations to the fund.

Guyana was declared ineligible to borrow from the IMF on May 15, 1985, after failing to pay overdue obligations to the multilateral organization.

The nation was restored to lending eligibility under a collaborative approach adopted by the IMF in 1988, which involves financial assistance from creditors and donors to support economic adjustment and structural reform programs and efforts to regularize its relations with the fund.

The IMF noted that the Guyanese authorities are implementing ''a comprehensive and far-reaching adjustment program.''

A support group for Guyana was established under Canada's chairmanship to help the country obtain external financing for its economic recovery program and to normalize its relationship with the fund and other multilateral financial institutions.

The support group consists of Canada, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy Japan, Sweden, Trinidad and Tobago, the United States and Venezuela.

(JUNE 21) UPI - The Supreme Court today ruled that political party affiliation may NOT be a factor in government hiring, firing and promotions.

The court ruled 5-4 that job decisions based on political affiliation or support infringe on First Amendment rights of free speech.

The case involved a hiring freeze started in 1980 by the Illinois state government. All hiring positions had to be approved by Governor Jim Thompson's office.

Five plaintiffs charged that the system allowed the governor to limit employment to those who belonged to the Republican Party. The state argued that the employment decision was NOT punitive and did NOT chill free speech.

The director of the Voting Rights Project for the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law... Frank Parker... called today's Supreme Court ruling the ''death knell'' for patronage.

In another case, the high court held that a newspaper column implying that a high school wrestling coach in Ohio lied under oath may be held libelous.

The 7-2 decision remanded the case to trial court.

The veto power of President Bush remains undefeated.

The Senate sustained the president's veto of legislation that would have lifted a ban on political activity by federal employees.

The 65thirds majority needed to over-ride the veto. Every one of 12 vetoes by Bush has been sustained by Congress, despite the Democratic majority.

The House voted yesterday to over-ride the veto 327-93, but both the Senate and House must act in order for an over-ride to stick.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the administration is ''pleased'' with the vote. He said the measure ''would have politicized the Civil Service.''

The bill was aimed at changing the 1939 Hatch Act that bars political activity by federal workers.

(JUNE 21) UPI - South African black leader Nelson Mandela today praised American religious leaders for their solidarity in the fight against apartheid.

The African National Congress leader made the comments in an impromptu address at New York City's Riverside Church, long a center for anti-apartheid work.

Mandela used some of the strongest statements of his visit so far to criticize those who want sanctions against South Africa lifted because of recent reforms. He said to lift the sanctions ''would be a serious political error.''

President Bush said yesterday that he would like to show appreciation for reform in South Africa.

But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater today said there would NOT be any change in the sanctions because Pretoria has yet to meet U-S legal requirements for a relaxation or repeal.

If House Speaker Thomas Foley has his way, the vote on the controversial flag desecration amendment will be the last consideration of the proposal this legislative session.

A late afternoon vote is expected in the House today on the proposed constitutional amendment, which would make desecration of Old Glory unconstitutional.

Foley says that win or lose, he will NOT allow the issue to be raised again this summer.

But Senate Republican leader Robert Dole feels differently. He says that if the measure fails in the House and passes in the Senate, the House should put it to yet another vote.

Foley says there's been a shift in sentiment against the proposed amendment, which is supported by President Bush and intended to overcome two Supreme Court rulings.

NEW YORK (JUNE 21) UPI - Venezuela is opening its economy - including its oil and petrochemical industries - to outside investment, the Venezuelan minister for promotion, Moises Naim, said Thursday.

In an interview with United Press International, Naim said that even if the state-owned PDVESA continues to control the oil industry, the private sector will have an opportunity to participate in the industry's growth.

The Venezuelan minister also said a more favorable framework has been created for private investment in the petrochemical industry.

Naim came to New York for the first plenary meeting of the Venezuela-U.S. Business Council, attended by companies and bankers from both countries.

The American delegation included representatives of American Express, AT&T Bankers Trust, Bank of America, Citibank, General Motors, Dow Chemical, Eli Lilly, Goodyear, Kraft/General Foods, Texaco and Xerox.

''We are creating in Venezuela the conditions for a maximum of possibilities of development for the private sector and that is going to produce a lot of surprises,'' Naim said.

Asked if the oil industry will be open for foreign capital, he said that according to a recent survey PDVESA is ranked fourth in the world among the better financed and administered oil companies.

The big oil concern will continue in the hands of the state but ''the private sector may participate in the growth. The joint-ventures could be one of the ways, but in the case of oil, it requires the OK by the Congress,'' the minister said.

In the petrochemical industry ''there are immense possibilities and a lot of projects,'' Naim said.

He said that in the next few days the Venezuelan government will issue a decree ''establishing a legal framework even more favorable for private investment in the petrochemical sector.''

VIENNA, VA (JUNE 21) UPI - Cable & Wireless Communications Thursday said it will lower domestic and international rates June 24 for its Excel long-distance service.

The company also will introduce discounts, term plans and customized savings options for subscribers.

Volume discount thresholds were lowered to allow customers using $5,000 a month in long-distance calls to take advantage of incremental discounts. For large, single-location users spending more than $15,000 a month, a new plan called Excel Premium will offer cumulative discounts of 10 percent to 14 percent off base rates, the company said.

Also introduced by Cable & Wireless are term discount plans which, combined with any Excel service, provide an additional 3 percent to 10 percent savings on all long-distance calls in exchange for 18-month or 36-month commitments.

In addition, Cable & Wireless said it is offering several customized savings options with Excel.

Cable & Wireless is a subsidiary of Cable & Wireless PLC, a multinational telecommunications organization. The company provides private line business communications services.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - The Environmental Protection Agency announced Thursday it will help establish an international agency in Hungary to help Eastern Europen nations solve their severe pollution problems.

The office, which will open this September in Budapest, is being set up under a charter signed earlier this week by representatives of the United States, the Netherlands, Hungary and the European Community.

The EPA said the agency would provide Eastern European nations with money, expertise and technical assistance to help them clean up massive air and water pollution resulting from decades of poor environmental practices at power plants and factories.

The agency, to be known as the Regional Environmental Center for Central and Eastern Europe, will function as an independent, non-profit operation under a 15-member international board.

The center will have an initial budget of $9 million. The United States will contribute approximately 60 percent of the money with the remainder coming from the European Community, Hungary and the Netherlands.

EPA officials said the center was one of many U.S. environmental initiatives being undertaken in Eastern Europe under the Support for East European Democracy Act of 1989.

They said EPA Administrator William Reilly will attend the opening of this center in September.

ADDIS ABABA, ETHIOPIA (JUNE 21) UPI - Prime Minister Haile Mariam Mengistu urged Ethiopians Thursday to mobilize and ''save the motherland'' from the wars threatening to destroy the nation.

''A life-and-death confrontation is under way at the moment between the army and groups supported by anti-Ethiopia forces ... the war will determine whether or not Ethiopia will continue to survive as an united and sovereign polity,'' Mengistu told Parliament.

''The enemy has intensified its attack,'' he said. ''Citizens have to mobilize themselves without delay to save the motherland.''

Ethiopia has been fighting a 29-year-old war against the seccesionist Eritrean People's Liberation Front and the hard-line Marxist Tigrean People's Liberation Front guerrillas demanding greater autonomy from the central government.

Mengistu also condemned the Eritrean rebels recent withdrawal from peace talks mediated by former President Jimmy Carter.

The two rebel groups control most of the northern provinces of Eritrea and Tigre, and have made many incursions into the Shoa province and neighboring Wolo and Gondar provinces.

The Eritrean rebels also dealt the government a severe blow last February when it captured the strategic Red Sea port of Massawa, 470 miles north of Addis Ababa.

''Complacency, minimizing one's responsibility and looking for results with indifference (will) not save the country from the onslaught unleashed by the enemy to divide and disintegrate the country,'' Mengistu warned.

In his two-hour speech to Parliament, Mengistu acknowledged that ''although peace and stability within the country have rated high on the list of priorities ..., results have fallen short of the people's expectations.''

Mengistu's main ally, the Soviet Union, two weeks ago decided to join the United States in a joint emergency food airlift to an estimated 4.5 million people threatened with starvation in the north of the African country.

The move sent a signal to Addis Ababa that Moscow, Mengistu's main arms supplier, was more interested in a solution than a continuation of the war.

Official Radio Addis Ababa, monitored in Nairobi Thursday, urged other governments to rally behind Mengistu to solve the country's problem peacefully.

Meanwhile, a clandestine radio broadcast said the Tigrean rebels were ready to talk peace. ''The problem in our country should be resolved peacefully and democratically,'' it said.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - One of the nation's largest sellers of recycled paper complained Thursday that a federal plan to define paper made with sawdust as a ''recycled'' product, saying it would hurt the fledgling recycled paper industry.

In a letter to William Reilly, head of the Evironmental Protection Agency, the president of Conservatree Paper Co. of San Francisco strongly opposed the EPA's recent proposal to federal officials that they consider paper made from sawdust and paper mill scraps as ''recycled.''

The sawdust paper plan is part of an EPA effort to get other federal agencies to buy more recycled goods. The agency says greater federal purchases will help create a market for recycled goods, helping reduce the nation's garbage disposal problem.

However, Conservatree President Alan Davis said greater federal purchases of sawdust paper would hurt, not help, the paper recycling industry and do nothing to ease the trash crisis.

''The truth is that all the paper purchased by the government could meet EPA's definition for 'recycling' and still not reduce the nation's solid waste problem by one garbage truckful,'' Davis told Reilly.

''We could sell sawdust paper and turn a profit but we know it would not deal with the nation's serious solid waste problem,'' he said. ''The public ought not be fooled into believing paper is recycled when it truly is not.''

Davis said paper mills will not install the equipment to recycle paper or buy up used paper until they are assured a sufficient demand exists for genuine recycled paper.

''The EPA has discouraged adoption of neccessary technology,'' said Davis.

Responding to Conservatree's criticisms, Terry Grogan, the EPA's chief of recycling, said the company did not approve of sawdust paper because it did not manufacture it.

''I don't think it's fair for Conservatree to label one type of paper as truly recycled,'' he said.

Grogan contended that using sawdust for paper is beneficial for the environment because large amounts of sawdust now go to landfills or incinerators.

DETROIT (JUNE 21) UPI - While General Motors Corp. insists problems with plastic door panels on its new Saturn cars have been solved, there were indications Thursday that GM Chairman Roger B. Smith may drive the first production car off the line before he retires Aug. 1 in a private ceremony not in public.

GM declined to discuss Thursday how or when the problem was fixed after news reports said earlier this week that improperly fitting door panels could cause a delay in Saturn's launch this summer from its Spring Hill, Tenn., manufacturing complex.

But Saturn President Richard G. LeFauve and other company officals said that while minor production problems may cause the company to only narrowly miss informal target dates for getting the car into full production, deliveries to buyers should still begin in November as planned.

GM may also be hoping to heighten buyer interest in its first completely new division since 1918 by shrouding Smith's symbolic drive in secrecy and then unveiling the cars with great fanfare in showrooms this fall.

GM spokesman James Crellin said Thursday that plans about Smith's drive-off ceremony have not been finalized and that there are still discussions between GM and Saturn about how it may be done.

''But Mr. Smith has also said numerous times that he would not drive the car off the line until Saturn's high quality standards have been met,'' said Crellin, adding that Saturn seems confident the event ''will still occur prior to his retirement.''

Smith has been closely associated with Saturn, a $3 billion program first disclosed by GM in 1983 to design and develop an effective import car fighter by using innovative manufacturing and assembly techniques.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 21) UPI - Police arrested 50 demonstrators at a noisy rally and march Thursday near the Civic Center to protest San Francisco's overworked community-based program to combat the AIDS epidemic.

Chanting, ''Stop passing the buck!'' and, ''Health care is a right, not just for the straight and white!'' some 300 protesters marched to the barricaded entrances of the Federal Office Building, the city Department of Public Health, City Hall and a state Office Building.

The demonstrators briefly surged inside the foyer of a building housing the state Department of Insurance, but left peacefully after spray-painting a big red ''AIDS'' across the white wall directory and unsuccessfully shouting for an audience with state Insurance Commissioner Roxani Gillespie.

The three-hour demonstration was held in conjunction with the 6th International AIDS Conference, which was under way nearby at the Moscone Convention Center. About 60 helmeted police watched as protesters staged ''exhaust-ins'' by collapsing on the street.

A foot-high pile of cardboard picket signs depicting dollar bills was set ablaze by protesters who shouted, ''(Government officials are) burning up the money instead of giving it to us.''

Police then moved in and arrested anyone who refused repeated warnings to clear the street. A police spokesman said 50 protesters were transported to jail, where they were booked on misdemeanor charges of failure to disperse.

Rondi Gerson, a member of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power or ACT UP, said the protest was to raise awareness of charges that the ''San Francisco Model,'' a program set up by the city to deal with the AIDS crisis, is inadequate.

At least 5,700 people already have died of AIDS in San Francisco, a city of 740,000, she said. Another 8,500 people have the fatal disease and between 18,000 and 35,000 residents are believed infected with the AIDS virus.

To meet the crisis, the community-based ''San Francisco Model'' is a system that includes an inpatient and outpatient clinic at San Francisco General Hospital, high-technology home health care services, community-based counseling and support services programs staffed primarily by volunteers.

The program also draws primarily on volunteers for skilled nursing facilities, hospice care, education and prevention programs, transportation services and emergency and long-term residential facilities Gerson said.

''The San Francisco model is built on a fault. That fault is inaction,'' she said.

An estimated 750 to 900 of the city's homeless have AIDS and the number is growing at a rate of about 50 percent each year, protester Josh Brandon said as he stood in front of City Hall.

Jean Harris, a staff member for city Supervisor Harry Britt, told the demonstrators that the city Health Department's annual budget is about $485 million, but the amount spent on AIDS is ''invisible.''

''They want us to be invisible as well as the money,'' she said.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (JUNE 21) UPI - A 32-year-old man set himself on fire Thursday to protest the victory by the ruling Socialist party in parliamentary elections earlier this month, the official BTA news agency reported.

Valentin Stoilov Atanassov suffered burns over 20 to 25 percent of his body before other anti-government protesters could douse the flames, BTA said.

He was among a group of activists involved in a 10-day-old demonstration in central Sofia to protest the results of the elections June 10 and 17 in which the revamped communist party won a majority of seats in the Grand National Assembly.

Before setting fire to himself, he asked other demonstrators to write a declaration for him ''expressing his resentment for the elections,'' the news agency said.

It quoted Interior Ministry officials as saying Atanassov was drunk at the time. The news agency said the opposition Union of Democratic Forces issued a statement saying it did not condone the act.

SAN FRANCISCO (JUNE 21) UPI - The following are the highlights of the first full day of the 6th International Conference on AIDS:

-Dr. Luc Montagnier, co-discoverer of the AIDS virus, reported an unusual microbe may act as an important factor spurring AIDS progression, and antibiotics attacking the microbe appear to help some patients. A small, primitive microogranism called a mycoplasma may increase the cell-killing power of the AIDS virus and thereby lead to patients' decline and ultimate death, he said. The work does not contradict past findings that HIV is the cause of AIDS but may help explain why some people get sick quicker than others, he said.

-Margaret Fischl of the University of Miami Medical School presented results supporting earlier work that showed giving the drug AZT to infected people with slightly depressed immune systems but no signs of AIDS can slow their progression to developing the deadly disease.

-A study involving 131 patients showed combining AZT with a drug called dideoxycytidine or DDC appears to can reduce AIDS symptoms while reducing the toxic side effects of each drug, said Dr. Thomas Merigan of Stanford University. Although DDC produced such side effects as feet and hand pains fewer patients than would be expected to drop out from side effects for either drug used alone, he said.

-Assistant Secretary of Health James Mason said 30,000 to 40,000 more people are being infected with the AIDS virus every year in the United States and the federal government is spending $1.6 billion for research for AIDS, second only to that spent on battling cancer. A blood supply screening program has been particularly successful, with only 11 adults being infected with the AIDS virus from tainted blood since testing of donor blood began in 1985, he said.

-The AIDS virus is more easily passed from men to women during sex than from women to men, said Nancy Padian of University of California-San Francisco. A study of about 325 California couples with one infected partner found less than 2 percent of 58 males became infected over a five-year period while about 20 percent of 269 women became infected. The average number of sexual contacts in the couples was 300 to 400 over five years.

-Smokers infected with the AIDS virus appear to develop the deadly disease faster than infected non-smokers, according to researchers at the University of California at Berkeley. Preliminary data gathered during a 56-month, continuing study of 1,000 men infected with the AIDS virus indicated smokers were nearly twice as likely to develop symptoms, the disease or die.

-A significant proportion of homosexual men may be reverting back to risky sexual behavior, threatening to undo gains made in halting the spread of AIDS. A study of nearly 400 homosexual men in San Francisco found about 20 percent of men who had adopted safe sex practices due to fear of AIDS reverted to more risky sex over four years.

-In Washington, a leading scientific journal reported a government probe apparently has failed to find proof a U.S. researcher stole credit for discovering the AIDS virus from a French scientist. There is no evidence

Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute ''stole credit'' for discovering the virus that causes AIDS from French researcher Luc Montagnier of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, Science magazine reported. Gallo in 1984 claimed credit for discovering the AIDS virus. That claim was disputed by Montagnier, who had sent Gallo samples of virus the French scientist was testing.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 21) UPI - Opponents of a flag protection amendment welcomed its defeat Thursday, but those in favor of altering the Constitution to keep Old Glory out of harms way continued to rally around their cause.

''We're disappointed,'' White House deputy press secretary Alixe Glen said after the House rejected a constitutional amendment allowing states to outlaw flag burning. ''But we hope that the vote in the Senate will be favorable.''

If amendment supporters muster the two-thirds majority in the Senate needed for passage, the White House hopes the House of Representatives will reconsider the proposed amendment.

''We will continue to seek an amendment so that the states can decide how to protect the flag,'' Glen said.

The amendment's opponents rejoiced in its defeat.

''This amendment was a bad idea from the start. It was conceived out of cynicism and advanced through demagoguery. It was defeated on its merits '' said Melanne Verveer, executive vice president of the People for the American Way Action Fund.

The amendment was introduced into Congress shortly after the Supreme Court on a 5-4 vote, struck down a federal law that forbade desecration of the American flag. The court said the law violated First Amendment rights of free speech.

To become part of the Constitution, a proposed amendment must be passed by two-thirds of both houses of Congress and approved by three-fourths of the states.

Despite being 34 votes shy of the two-thirds majority in the House, supporters of the amendment did not abandon hope.

''The fight to protect the American flag is not over by a long shot,'' declared American Legion National Commander Miles Epling.

''It's an insult to the American people that the will of the majority has been ignored by their elected representatives in Congress,'' Epling said. ''Contrary to the belief of some politicians, the memory of the American people is not short.

''If the politicians who voted against this amendment think they can abandon the flag in June, kiss babies in September and be re-elected in November, they are mistaken.''

House members in favor of the amendment expressed disappointment.

''I am disappointed that the amendment failed, but I can understand how some of my colleagues, after wrestling with their consciences, decided they did not want to amend the Bill of Rights,'' said Rep. George Sangmeister, D-Ill.

''However, despite the vote, I still don't believe our founding fathers envisoned that the physical desecration of the U.S. flag was to be protected under the First Amendment,'' Sangmeister said.

Rep. Wes Watkins, D-Okla., said, ''I am of course disappointed that the resolution failed. I think most Americans believe that the flag must be treated with the highest respect.''

President Bush had wanted Congress to pass the amendment by July Fourth, and Wednesday at a Republican fund-raiser in Alabama he vowed to ''fight for it with everything I have.'' But Thursday, as the House debated the measure, Bush made no public comment on the amendment.

During the coming months, however, Bush is expected to have plenty to say about the matter. White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, ''We will continue to speak out on behalf of the flag.''

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 22) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board has delayed Security Pacific Corp.'s $38 million purchase of a 20 percent stake in Mitsui Manufacturers Bank because of questions over the companies' community lending practices, the bank holding company said Thursday.

A spokeswoman for Security Pacific said the company would have not comment beyond saying, ''We are studying the Federal Reserve's position.''

In a letter to Security Pacific, the Fed said that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has not yet completed its examination of Mitsui for compliance with the Community Reinvestment Act, which requires banks to make efforts to provide loans to low- and moderate-income communities.

The Fed also noted in its letter that the Los Angeles City Council has asked it to hold public hearings on compliance by both bank companies.

Security Pacific and Mitsui announced the agreement last July. Security Pacific said in April that it was boosting its community involvment programs by 20 percent in California and said its efforts would total $2.4 billion over the next decade.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) UPI - The Senate killed a Republican proposal Thursday to allow rent vouchers, along with building and rehabilitation, as options to develop decent and affordable housing despite warnings that rejection would doom the first major housing bill in a decade.

The Senate beat the GOP proposal 52-45 despite a warning from Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who said, ''If this amendment fails, then we're not going to have a housing bill. Unless this amendment is agreed to ... we are wasting our time.''

The vote on the amendment, which followed party lines, was the first test between the administration and Senate Democrats over the ambitious $17.6 billion housing bill.

The amendment, offered by Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., would include the use of rental assistance as an option in the proposed HOP program. The program would be a partnership between the federal government, the states and the private sector to develop decent and affordable housing.

The $2 billion HOP program is considered the cornerstone and the major new feature of the legislation designed to set revamped federal housing policy.

But progress on the bill stopped when the Senate could not reach a vote on a proposal by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., to put the Federal Housing Administation home loan insurance program on a sound financial footing through changes that would have made it more difficult and expensive for buyers to acquire the coveted low-cost insurance.

Mack introduced his amendment as negotiations between the administration and Senate Democrats appeared to have slowed or possibly collapsed, following three days of intense discussions.

Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, his party's floor manager for the bill, said Housing Secretary Jack Kemp ''will not meet with us ... he will not return my phone calls.''

Cranston said that budget director Richard Darman has indicated he is ready to continue negotiations but only if Kemp comes to the table.

The administration has raised numerous obejctions to the Senate housing bill and the Senate GOP Policy Committee has warned senior advisers will urge a veto by President Bush if the objections are not resolved.

Among the administration's major sticking points are: the HOP program is geared much too heavily to construction, compared to rehabilitation; Bush's HOPE program to help low-income people buy homes is short-changed; and the cost that HUD estimates at $5 billion in new programs the first year but Cranston insists is $3.1 billion.

Cranston argued that the Mack amendment would ''gut'' the HOP program because it would do nothing to increase the pool of affordable housing.

''It may seem to be a simple effort to give mayors and governors a bit more flexibility in choosing how to provide housing,'' Cranston said. ''Instead, it would take a program that was designed to be a useful, new tool in the hands of the mayors and governors and turn it into a weapon pointed at their heads.''

But Mack said ''the only way it (the amendment) could be gutted is if the mayors and the governors around the country feel that the best way to go with the money is rental assistance.''

Mack said that in some communities - those with many vacant units - rental assistance would make up a portion of the overall plan. But in others, he said, the market would be too tight.

Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., said HOP is ''intended to serve as cornerstone of a new partnership whose primary purpose is to expand the availability of affordable housing. ... There is going to have to be some expansion of supply.''

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said the Mack amendment ''is at the heart of the flexibility we should offer the housing authorities. It allows each housing authority to make a choice.''

The $2.3 billion for existing rental vouchers and other assistance was not affected by the Mack amendment.

(JUNE 21) UPI - The death toll has reached 10-thousand in the Iranian earthquake, and the casualty count shows NO sign of leveling off.

The state-owned Islamic Republic News Agency confirms that more than 10-thousand people died in the quake, which struck shortly after midnight catching people asleep in their beds. An estimated 13-thousand people were injured, and thousands remain buried beneath rubble, landslides or other debris.

Other unconfirmed reports say 25-thousand are dead and tens of thousands injured.

The U-S Geological Survey in California measured the quake at seven-point-seven on the Richter scale, and an Iranian reading confirmed a jolt of at least seven-point-three.

In either case, it's one of the strongest quakes ever to hit the region, which is infamous for its earthquakes. 25-thousand people died in a 1978 quake, and twin quakes in 1981 left 11-thousand dead.

(JUNE 21) UPI - Public health officials today emphasized that with NO cure for AIDS in sight the best weapons against the disease are prevention... early treatment... and possibly, quitting smoking.

The Sixth Annual Conference on AIDS opened in San Francisco yesterday.

Assistant Secretary of Health James Mason told the conference that federal spending for AIDS research is second only to that spent on battling cancer.

Top researchers presented new evidence that treating people infected with the AIDS virus before they get sick appears to be the best way to slow the deadly disease.

Margaret Fischl of the University of Miami Medical School showed that giving the drug A-Z-T to infected people can slow their progression to acquired immune deficiency syndrome. It can take 10 years or more from the time someone is infected with the virus until he or she develops AIDS.

Other researchers reported that smokers infected with the AIDS virus appear to develop the disease faster than infected NON-smokers. Researchers at the University of California at Berkeley said immune system cells are known to be directly affected by smoking.

Outside the convention today, about 50 people were arrested protesting that San Francisco's program to fight AIDS is inadequate.

The Supreme Court says police do NOT need a warrant to search a home if officers believe that the person inviting them in has the authority to do so. The decision came on a 6-3 vote.

The case involved a warrantless search of an apartment in Chicago that turned up illegal drugs. Police argued that they did NOT need a warrant since they were invited into the apartment by the man's girlfriend, who they wrongly believed also lived in the apartment.

The dissenting opinion said the ruling takes away some of the constitutional protection against UNreasonable search and seizure.

In another case, the high court ruled that opinion and analysis articles are NOT automatically guaranteed protection under the First Amendment and exempt from libel action.

The head of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press in Washington called the decision ''disastrous''... because it will dampen public analysis of current events.

The court also ruled that party affiliation should NOT be a part of the government hiring process. Some analysts called the ruling the ''death knell'' for political patronage.

(JUNE 21) UPI - 17 Republicans joined with 160 House Democrats this afternoon to reject a constitutional amendment to ban flag desecration. The 254-177 vote was 34 shy of the two-thirds majority needed to change the Constitution.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, a Washington Democrat, made a rare floor speech in closing the debate for opponents to the amendment. He said the House should NOT memorialize the actions of a few flag burners with a constitutional amendment.

The lawmakers then rejected a bill that would have provided protection for the flag under certain circumstances. Some House members believed the statute would have withstood a Supreme Court test... but it was rejected 236-179.

At least 10-thousand people are dead... an estimated 13-thousand injured and 100-thousand homeless in northern Iran following a huge earthquake. Today's tremor was described as the nation's worst in nearly 12 years.

(JUNE 21) UPI - The majority of the House today voted in favor of a proposed constitutional amendment against desecration of the flag- but the vote fell short of the two-thirds majority required for passage. The 254-177 tally was 34 votes shy. Supporters of the constitutional amendment responded by voting against a new flag protection law designed to pass a Supreme Court test.

President Bush backed the amendment by saying he would- quote- ''fight for it with everything I have.'' But he was a NO-show today as the amendment headed for its House test. The White House issued a statement saying only that the administration was disappointed. But one Capitol Hill lobbyist cheered the amendment's defeat, saying... ''It was conceived in cynicism and advanced through demagoguery'' and adding... ''It was defeated on its merits.''

DENVER (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Bellco Credit Union Friday announced it has acquired Rocky Mountain Federal Credit Union (RMFCU).

The National Credit Union Administration (NCUA), the federal regulator currently controlling RMFCU, is transferring the operation to Bellco.

''We are a strong credit union with loyal membership firmly in place,'' said George P. Turner, Bellco president. ''We view the acquisition as a very positive move for the memberships of both credit unions.''

Bellco received assistance from the NCUA for the purchase and assumption of RMFCU's assets. RMFCU's assets totaled approximately $35 million.

Formerly the Frontier Airlines Federal Credit Union, RMFCU has experienced operational difficulties since its former sponsor, Frontier Airlines, declared bankruptcy in 1986.

Normal operations will continue at both institutions for a conversion period, scheduled through Oct. 1. During this time, Bellco will assess personnel and branch office requirements as Rocky Mountain Federal's operations are integrated into Bellco's current structure.

''Regular operations will continue at all locations under the Bellco name '' said Turner. ''Bellco is a well-capitalized, dynamic and aggressive financial services institution, and we view this acquisition as a window of opportunity -- RMFCU's field of membership encompasses many groups employed in the Stapleton Airport area and Adams County employees.''

''We're excited about our new alliance,'' said A.J. Havel, interim president of RMFCU.

''It represents the final, positive solution to our past problems. We're looking forward to joining the Bellco team and continuing to provide excellent products and services to our members.''

Based in Denver, Bellco Credit Union is a not-for-profit, member-owned, financial services institution with 71,000 members, 194 employees, $322 million in assets and nine service centers throughout the Denver metro area. Also based in Denver, RMFCU has approximately 18,000 members and 26 employees.

SAN JOSE, CA (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Madge Networks announced that the Chief Patent Justice of the High Court of the Royal Courts of Justice in the United Kingdom ruled Friday that the patent held by Olof Soderblom does not apply to token ring technology.

The issues involved in the case were identical to a case now before the Federal Court in San Francisco. In that case, filed in February, Madge Networks requested the Federal District Court in San Francisco to declare U.S. Patent Re. 31,852 invalid. Olof Soderblom's company claims that this patent covers IEEE token ring technology and recently filed suit against Madge.

In his ruling, the Chief Patent Justice, Justice Aldous, noted that: ''A claim so wide as to monopolize token ring is not fairly based.'' If Soderblom's claim could be interpreted so widely as to cover LANs, the judge noted that he would have had to rule that those aspects of the patent invalid because it would not be fair to the public to have such a broad interpretation.

The judge ruled that Madge's products and other token ring products complying with the IEEE 802.5 standard rely on ''a totally different system'' from that covered by Soderblom's patent. Soderblom's U.K. patent, issued in 1968, relates to a method of using telephone wires to connect a central computer to groups of several remote terminals, while token ring is concerned with a local area network of computers working in a peer-to-peer configuration.

Almost simultaneously, the U.S. Patent Office, in re-examining the Soderblom Patent Reissue, has rejected almost all the claims. (The Patent Office re-examined the patent reissue at the request of an anonymous party.) As a result, the claims are no longer in effect. The issues involved in the U.K. court case and the Patent Office decision were identical to the issues now before the Federal Court in San Francisco.

Madge Networks Inc. is a leading supplier of IBM-compatible token ring network hardware and software in the United States, Europe and Japan. The company's products include a full line of token ring adapters for ISA, EISA and Micro Channel buses, a Repeater, 8-Station Ringhub, Local Ringhub and token ring management software.

As a developer of the first independent NETBIOS protocol stack, Madge has played a key role in the development of token ring software for leading computer companies. Madge Networks Inc. has headquarters in San Jose.

LOS ANGELES (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Warner Technologies Inc. Friday announced that it is executing agreements for the installation of energy-efficient lighting systems at Heitman Properties (Virginia) $460,000 and for the city of Newton, Mass., $565,000, with the complete job for the city of Newton expected to total approximately $1 million.

Additionally, orders for pilot installations at Safeway, Waldbaums, and Stop & Shop stores have been received with work already in progress. Chain-wide installations are under consideration by these customers.

Sales for April and May totalled $211,894, yielding pretax profit of approximately $72,266, and placing the company at approximately breakeven for 11 months of its fiscal year to date. This abnormally high profitability was due to several unusual, but non-recurring, events, including the completion of one extraordinarily large job and also as a result of temporary salary adjustments of members of management.

Sales year to date totalled $1,640,108. Pretax profit (loss) for the first three fiscal quarters were ($161,774), $21,018 and $62,779, respectively. Management emphasizes that results obtained during any one period are not necessarily indicative of results which may be achieved over a full year or in the future.

Warner closed its S-18 offering on May 14, 1990. A total of 80 percent of the company's 3 million Class A warrants were exercised and 33 percent of the maximum 5 million share offering were sold. Net proceeds of $435,662 were used to reduce the company's notes payable by over $400,000, with the balance utilized for working capital. Working capital improved from $35,576 at March 31, 1990, to $231,963 at the end of May.

Net worth at May 31, 1990, climbed to $212,177 as a result of the additional profit and receipt of final S-18 proceeds.

Management also announced that the two-year holding period on 51,515,456 shares of restricted common stock expires as of July 8, 1990, two years from the date of Warner's merger with Maple Enterprises.

Of this number of shares, a maximum of approximately 20.3 million shares would become saleable during the three months following July 8, 1990, under the volume limitations of SEC Rule 144. As of June 20, 1990, the company has 68,162,278 restricted common shares and 10,070,100 free-trading common shares, for a combined total of 78,232,378 common shares outstanding.

The company has also issued and outstanding 50,000 shares of Series A convertible preferred stock, convertible into 5 million shares of common stock, subject to governing covenants.

There are 6,127,758 options to purchase the company's common stock exercisable at $0.073 per share, and 1,018,334 options exercisable at 12 cents per share. The $0.073 options do not have registration rights, while the 12-cent options generally do. All of these options expire worthless on June 30, 1990, if not sooner exercised.

The company also has outstanding 17.2 million additional options to purchase its common stock, generally exercisable for two-year periods, at exercise prices ranging from 5 cents to 18 cents per share.

PHOENIX (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix-based Penn Racquet Sports, the world's largest manufacturer of tennis balls, Friday announced that it will now be using recycled plastic in the production of its tennis ball cans.

Penn is the first tennis ball manufacturer to announce the utilization of recycled plastic in its manufacturing process.

In announcing the decision, Doug Fonte, president of Penn Racquet Sports noted that using recycled materials does not offer the company any cost or commercial advantage. ''Our concern centers on ways we can improve the environment and continue to produce quality products.''

Penn has worked for the past two years with Continental PET Technologies, a division of Continental Can Co. Inc., and Rutgers Recycle Research Center for Plastics to develop a tennis ball can that could utilize recycled materials.

According to Fonte, the actual plastic container will now contain a minimum of 25-30 percent recycled plastic. The end caps of Penn tennis ball cans currently are produced with 50 percent recycled aluminum.

The recycled plastic that will be used in producing Penn tennis ball cans, a form of polyester called PET (polyethylene terepthalate), was first introduced in 1979 and from which all liter-sized plastic soda bottles are made. About 20 percent of all such bottles are currently recycled and are used for such products as carpet fibers, egg cartons, distributor caps and now tennis ball cans.

Penn is also initiating a unique ''Penn Plastic Recycling Program'' at its plant and approximately 20 tennis courts in the Phoenix area. The company will provide and maintain containers to collect empty tennis ball cans and PET plastic products and deliver the recyclable products to Tri-R Systems, a Phoenix recycler.

According to Fonte, the company plans to continue its research efforts into methods of environmentally responsible manufacturing.

VENTURA, CALIF. (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Benton Oil and Gas Co. (OTC:BNTN) Friday announced that its board of directors had approved a 2-for-1 stock split of its common stock.

Holders of record of Benton's common stock on July 2 will receive one additional share for each share they own on that date. It is anticipated that the shares will be mailed from the transfer agent by July 25.

''This action is a result of the large difference between increasing demand for our common stock and the number of shares available,'' said Alex Benton, president and chairman of the board. ''Benton's stock has been somewhat thinly traded historically, due to the relatively small number of shares in the 'float.'

''The company continues to meet new segments of the investment community, including members of the larger national and regional brokerage firms. We hope that the larger number of shares outstanding will enable more investors to take positions in our company.''

Benton issued 811,000 shares of common stock in its initial public offering in March 1989. Earlier this year the company issued another 811,000 shares upon calling its outstanding warrants for redemption. According to Steve Hart, director of market planning for SkyWest (NASDAQ:SKYW), ''We're very happy about providing a new alternative in air service to Telluride. LONGMONT, COLO (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Staodynamics Inc. (NASDAQ:SDYN) Friday reported that the company realized a loss for its first quarter of fiscal 1991, ending June 2, 1990.

This loss had been anticipated and previously announced.

Sales for the first quarter this year totaled $2,119,780, down slightly from $2,167,980 for the first quarter last year. The net loss for fiscal 1991 was $(84,451), or (4 cents) per share, compared to net income of $30,564, or 1 cent per share, for the same period a year ago.

W. Bayne Gibson, Staodynamics' president, said, ''Our loss in the first quarter of our new fiscal year was due to continuing heavy cost of current wound care clinicals underway at multi-center locations, stepped up R & D on two new exciting products to be released for sale in June and November, and record sales in the last month of the fourth quarter.

''Some dealers also may have been waiting for the new Maxima III TENS product to be shipped at the end of June. Traditionally the first quarter is our lowest in both sales and profits.

''Our 1991 business plan anticipates an increase in sales of 20 percent over our record 1990 fiscal year. We expect to be profitable for the remaining three quarters of the year, '' Gibson said.

''While our sales this quarter were essentially the same as first quarter last year, we are pleased that our gross profit margins are improving in the face of severe price competition in the market place. Gross profit was $1,210,096 (57.1 percent of sales), vs. $1,177,954 (54.3 percent of sales) last year,'' he said.

Gibson also commented, ''Our sales may be somewhat affected in the short term by the adverse publicity from the recently published New England Journal of Medicine study on TENS devices. We believe that the industry and medical community response will demonstrate that the study was flawed. The publicity will draw attention to the effectiveness of TENS devices as an alternative to drugs for control of pain. This could well lead to a larger TENS industry.''

Staodynamics is a leading manufacturer of medical electronic products, primarily TENS (transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation) devices used for the relief of chronic and acute pain, and NMES (neuromuscular electrical stimulation) devices used in physical and sports medicine for muscle re-education and rehabilitation.

The company has been engaged in an extensive clinical investigation using electrotherapy for wound care, which when approved for sale within the United States, is likely to become a major portion of the company's business.

GRANDVIEW, MO (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - In a proxy statement mailed Friday, North American Savings Association notified its stockholders of a special meeting to be held on July 11, 1990.

At the meeting, stockholders will vote upon a proposed amendment to North American's Articles of Incorporation to change the association's name to North American Savings Bank.

According to North American's proxy statement, the proposed amendment would be allowed by a recently enacted amendment to Missouri law. This allows Missouri-chartered savings associations to change their names to include the words ''savings bank'' in lieu of the words ''savings association.''

In the proxy, North American said that the types of business generally associated with a savings bank more accurately reflect the business being conducted by North American. In addition, because of the changes in the financial institution industry in general and the current public perception of the savings and loan industry in particular, the board of directors believes it is in the best interest of North American to take advantage of this change in Missouri law.

North American is a $395 million financial institution that operates nine offices throughout greater Kansas City and northwest Missouri.

The association's stock is traded on the NASDAQ over-the-counter exchange under the symbol NASA.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - In a unique and highly profitable ''East Meets West'' turnaround last week, an American manufacturer of a revolutionary health diagnostic system capable of measuring electrical conductivity at acupuncture points, signed a $50 million Asian distribution deal with a major Korean firm.

Health Tech Inc. (dba Weltek, a subsidiary of Welcom Inc. of Newport Beach) developed an agreement with Technology Research Bank (TRB) of Seoul Korea to repackage, manufacture and distribute its Interro (TM) diagnostic system in Asia over the next three years.

In the letter of intent signed June 15, TRB agreed to pursue a marketing program targeted at $10 million in license revenues within the first 12 months and an additional $40 million over the remaining two years of the contract. TRB will also manufacture units to be sold by Weltek in the United States and other countries.

Health Tech's agreement was particularly good medicine for its Over-The-Counter stock (listed as Legacy Capital Corp.) as well. In addition to the distribution deal, TRB also agreed to purchase a $100,000 subordinated convertible debenture to be issued in Welcom (OTC:3LCPC), convertible to common stock.

The Interro system is an advanced diagnostic and health screening computer-based unit capable of conducting several thousand individual medical tests through a non-invasive probe which measures electrical conductivity at specific acupuncture points on the patient's hands and feet. The Interro system has undergone evaluation in over 200 clinical sites throughout Europe and the United States.

According to Welcom Chairman Emery A. Rose, ''This agreement substantially affirms the acceptance by the Asian medical community of the Interro technology which has its roots in acupuncture.

''However, the Interro system was developed in the West and this agreement validates the benefits of combining our diagnostic approaches for both Eastern and Western medicine.''

CHICAGO (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - United Airlines, seeking new air service between Chicago and Tokyo, Friday told the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) that selection of any carrier other than United Airlines for the route would ignore the overwhelming public support for its application and deny the public the superior benefits that United could offer compared with other U.S. carriers.

United's argument, presented in a reply brief filed with the DOT in the 1990 U.S. Japan Gateways Proceeding, was supported by similar comments in a brief filed by the Illinois parties, representing the State of Illinois and the City of Chicago, which strongly endorse the selection of United for the Chicago-Tokyo route.

The documents were filed in response to DOT Public Counsel's recommendation last week that American Airlines be awarded the route. United said that Public Counsel, while recently recommending American Airlines for a Chicago-Tokyo route, ignored conclusive evidence that United would provide superior benefits to the traveling public.

''Public Counsel determined that United would carry over 60,000 more passengers than American, serve more cities behind Chicago, and offer extensive service beyond Tokyo that American could not,'' United said.

The Illinois parties stated that ''Public Counsel's endorsement of American is difficult to understand. Its position is particularly puzzling given the record evidence cited in its brief. Public Counsel has acknowledged that United will benefit substantially more passengers than American.'' Among those benefits highlighted by the Illinois parties are:

-- United will provide greater public service benefits to significantly more travelers, including on-line service to Pacific Rim destinations beyond Tokyo.

-- United will provide the most effective intragateway competition with Northwest and especially with the Japanese-flag carriers who are targeting Chicago for increased passenger and cargo services.

-- United will provide greater intergateway competition with the existing interior gateways at Dallas/Ft. Worth, Detroit and Minneapolis/St. Paul.

-- United has the overwhelming support of civic parties in Chicago, in Illinois, and throughout the Chicago gateway service area.

United Airlines Chairman and President Stephen Wolf said, ''We deeply appreciate the consistent support for United from the civic parties involved in this case, and we believe eventually it will be given substantial weight by the Department in making its final decision.''

The next step in the route proceeding will be the recommendation of new U.S.-Japan routes and carriers by Chief Administrative Law Judge John J. Mathias, who is expected to render his decision by Aug. 3. The final step will be a review by the DOT and final awards of the new routes, expected in November.

MINNEAPOLIS (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Dayton Hudson Corporation today said it has been notified by the Federal Trade Commission that the waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Premerger Notification Act for its purchase of Marshall Field and Company has terminated.

Dayton Hudson expects to complete the purchase today. The purchase price will be approximately $1.05 billion subject to certain post-closing adjustments. The Marshall Field stores will become part of the department store division of Dayton Hudson.

"Target and Mervyn's continue to be our primary growth vehicles, but this was an opportunity to acquire a premier name in American retailing," said Kenneth A. Macke, chairman and chief executive officer of Dayton Hudson. "We believe the addition of Marshall Field's to our department store division will provide added value to the customers and to our shareholders. The Marshall Field's name and the integrity of its 130-year tradition will be maintained."

Macke said the department store division will be making announcements early next week regarding operational and personnel issues at Marshall

Field's. Gary Witkin, Marshall Field's former executive vice president of stores, has been named president of the Field's unit.

The cash transaction was financed with a combination of internally generated funds and a mix of debt instruments. While the new debt and existing capital requirements will raise Dayton Hudson's debt ratio by seven percentage points, Macke said the ratio at year-end isexpected to be at 65 percent. CARLSBAD, CA (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Kentana Development Inc. (NASDAQ: KDII/formerly SSII), a real estate development and apparel company, Friday announced its first profitable year in the company's 13-year history and a profitable first quarter of 1990.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, Kentana reported net sales of $4,465,200 as compared with $3,820,000 for fiscal 1988. Net profit for 1989 was $9,900, or zero cents per share, compared with a net loss of $780,900, or three cents per share, for 1988.

Stephen J. Nemergut, president of KDII, stated that the profit was due primarily to the acquisition of the real estate development division in 1989.

For the three months ended March 31, 1990, the company reported sales of $889,000 compared with $1,872,000 for the same period of 1989. Net profit for the three-month period in 1990 was $129,753 compared with a net profit of $27,515 for 1989.

The sales decrease was attributable to weak apparel sales and bad weather in Texas which negatively affected the land development division. The profit increase was attributable to lower overhead in the apparel and land development division.

In another development, the company signed an agreement with Interco Funding Group Inc. (IFG), a Miami-based investment banking firm, by which IFG agreed to use its best effort to arrange an offering of between $7 million and $20 million of convertible preferred stock of the company.

IFG has agreed to present a funding package to between three and five potential underwriters and to help assemble an underwriting group to fund the offering.

The company has paid IFG $25,000 and agreed to pay an additional $25,000 to IFG within 30 days, $25,000 of which is non-refundable should an offering fail to materialize.

Nemergut went on to state that sales for the second quarter of 1990 should be over $2 million which would be an increase of over 100 percent from the same quarter in fiscal 1989.

NEW YORK (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - S&P CreditWire 6/22/90 -- S&P assigns its 'A-1'-plus rating to the $400 million Eurocommercial paper program of ENI International Bank Ltd., an indirect, wholly-owned subsidiary of ENI International Holding B.V. (ENI B.V.), the guarantor.

ENI B.V. itself is a wholly owned subsidiary of Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi (ENI), the Italian state-owned energy company whose primary objective is to promote and carry on undertakings of national interest in the field of energy.

The rating reflects the overwhelming implicit support of the Italian government, for both ENI and ENI B.V., given ENI's preeminent role in a country reliant on imports for over 80 pc of its total energy consumption.

Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi's importance is further heightened by its position as essentially the sole natural gas supplier in Italy, and its dominance in the country's refining and marketing industry. Through its joint participation with Montedison S.A. in Enimont, ENI has a major interest in chemicals, in which Italy has a significant and growing trade deficit.

Government involvement in the group's operations is effected through the Ministry of Stateholdings whose main function is to ensure the government's strategic objectives are being observed while allowing the group to operate on a private sector basis. The principal role of ENI B.V. is to access international capital markets to finance the group's activities abroad.

ENI B.V. is also the holding company for most of the group's industrial companies incorporated outside of Italy. It has total assets of some $3 billion, and through its subsidiary AGIP International B.V., it controls the majority of the group's oil and gas reserves based overseas.

While ENI's high-debt usage gives it a weaker financial profile than that normally associated with the assigned rating category, the group has achieved significant improvement in both its operational and financial profiles in recent years. Earnings for 1989 were ITL1.61 trillion (about $1.2 billion), a 23 pc increase on 1988. Net debt to capital at year end 1989, was around 50 pc, largely unchanged from the previous year.

Although the implicit state support is the key factor for the credit rating, the maintenance of a stable financial profile will remain a pertinent factor, S&P said.

ROTTERDAM, NETHERLANDS (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Willemijn, the owner of the basic Soderblom patent covering the token ring protocol, announces that it has granted a number of additional licenses in the past several months, bringing the current total of licensees to 54.

Among those recently licensed are DCA Inc., Cabletron Systems Inc., Interphase Corp., Nokia Data Systems, Prime Computer, Thomas-Conrad Corp., Gateway Communications and Xircom.

Willemijn also announces that it will appeal the recent judgement of a British patent court in connection with litigation against Madge Networks Inc.

Willemijn notes that the U.S. reissue patent claims differ substantially from the U.K. claims and that the British court decision therefore has no effect on the U.S. patent.

Willemijn has previously announced the successful outcome of its several patent infringement suits under its U.S. reissue patent. In the U.S. patent action against Madge, a trial is now scheduled for early next January in the Federal District Court of San Jose.

In the reexamination of the Soderblom U.S. reissue patent now underway by the U.S. Patent Office, an official action has now been issued.

According to Willemijn's attorneys, the contents of the Patent Office action are as had been expected, being substantially a repeat of the contentions made earlier by the anonymous party which had requested the reexamination.

This sets the stage for Willemijn's response which will deal fully with the issues raised by the Patent Office. It is likely, according to Willemijn, that the Patent Office will issue its decision within a couple of months.

MARLBORO, MA (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - Data Translation Inc. (NASDAQ:DATX) Friday announced sales and earnings for the second quarter ended May 31, 1990.

Net sales of $9,380,000 compared unfavorably to last year's comparable period of $11,428,000 by $2,048,000 or 17.9 percent. Correspondingly, net income of $2,000 ($0.00 per share) is down from last year's $888,000 ($0.28 per share). Additionally, the company's income before taxes showed a $560,000 loss. Adjustments for tax provisions for this quarter offset this loss and brought the after-tax earnings just slightly profitable.

For the six months ended May 31, 1990, sales were $18,661,000. This represents a decrease of $3,961,000, or 17.5 percent from the $22,622,000 reported in the same period a year ago. Net income of $187,000 and $0.06 per share each decreased 89.7 percent from $1,812,000 and $0.58, respectively.

''Our sales levels are down significantly from last year and only show a marginal improvement from the last quarter,'' said Fred Molinari, president. ''As I reported last quarter, we had begun a longer term strategy to create a foundation for future success relative to sales levels and, consequently, profits. We are currently in the midst of that strategy which called for accelerated development of new products, coupled with the requisite promotion of both those new products and some of our existing offerings.

The operating expenses associated with those two investments are reflected in our second quarter financials. This has not been intended to be a 'quick fix' solution, but rather, a program designed to strengthen the company and to keep it strong.

The company's accelerated investment efforts are built around strengthening our data acquisition, image processing, and desktop video product lines. We have made strong progress in these areas and expect to announce several more new products before the end of the year and into next year. We are committed to seeing this plan through to completion, and we have maintained a healthy balance sheet that enables us to carry it out,'' said Molinari.

''Last quarter I indicated that the second quarter would, perhaps, show no improvment over the first. One more time, at least, I must reiterate that the next quarter is not likely to reflect any significant financial improvements. Hopefully, the return on our programmed effort will begin to occur toward the end of this fiscal year.''

The second quarter reflected a $560,000 loss before provision for income taxes. This loss was offset by a benefit for income taxes of $562,000 which was comprised of a U.S. net operating loss carryback of $372,000, a reversal of previously provided income taxes of $248,000 and somewhat offset by a foreign income tax provision of $58,000. An examination and analysis of the provision for taxes, as it related to the existing and completed business activities, led management to decide to reverse a portion of that provision.

Data Translation Inc. designs, manufactures and markets high-performance data acquisition and image processing board products and software that serve the laboratory, medical and industrial markets. Its products are compatible with many widely-used microcomputers, including those from Apple, DEC, IBM, Intel and Sun. Emerging markets of multimedia and color desktop publishing are also targets for new products that are increasingly pushing the company's products into more commercial markets.

NEW YORK (JUNE 22) BUSINESS WIRE - S&P CreditWire 6/22/90 -- S&P lowers its ratings on Midlantic Corp. and its affiliate Midlantic Banks, Inc.'s senior debt to triple-'B'-minus from triple-'B'-plus, Midlantic Corp.'s subordinated debt to double-'B'-plus from triple-'B', and Midlantic Funding Corp.'s commercial paper to 'A-3' from 'A-2'.

Ratings are also lowered on the certificates of deposit and letter of credit-backed issues of units Midlantic National Bank (Newark, N.J.), Midlantic National Bank/North (West Paterson, N.J.), and Continental Bank (Norristown, Pa.) to triple-'B'/'A-2' from single-'A'-minus/'A-2', and unit York Bank & Trust Co.'s letter of credit-backed issues to triple-'B'/'A-2' from single-'A'-minus/'A-2'.

About $425 million of long-term debt outstanding is affected. The downgrades reflect the serious erosion in asset quality in recent months due largely to the downturn in the New Jersey real estate market.

S&P expects nonperforming assets to continue to rise in the months ahead, which suggests that the real estate recession has not hit bottom. Also, there is the possibility of spill-over effects onto other sectors of the regional economy.

During the past decade of aggressive expansion, Midlantic increased its risk profile as exemplified by its high degree of loan leverage and sizable exposure to real estate. Because loss reserve levels are modest, S&P believes Midlantic needs to make additional heavy loss provisions, which will continue to suppress core profitability performance.

Ongoing erosion in asset quality and acquisition-related intangible assets detract from the company's equity foundation. Parent company fundamentals are strained by the high degree of double leverage, S&P said.

GROUP LED BY RIEDMAN CORP OWNS 261,750 SHARES (14.50%) OF NIAGARA EXCHANGE CORP (TICKER: NIEX) OF BUFFALO, NY.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

In connection with Niagara's March 29, 1990 announcement that it is currently considering alternatives to obtain additional capital, Riedman sent Charles Clauss a letter dated April 13, 1990 requesting the opportunity to participate in any proposal to raise capital.

Communications on this matter continued through April 27, 1990 in which Riedman continued to express its desire to compete on equal terms with third parties to provide capital to Niagara and Niagara continued to refuse to permit Riedman to do so unless Riedman would execute an agreement which would prohibit it from proceeding with its announced proxy solicitation of Niagara's shareholders.

On May 1, 1990 Niagara entered into a purchase and standstill agreement with WR Berkley Corp. pursuant to which Berkley acquired a 35 percent voting interest in Niagara.

On May 1, 1990 Berkley filed an application with the New York Insurance Dept. to acquire control of Niagara.

On May 4, 1990 Riedman commenced an action against Niagara in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware alleging that Niagara directors breached their fiduciary duties.

The action seeks, among other things, to require Niagara to allow Riedman a fair opportunity to compete to provide capital for Niagara.

On May 11, 1990 Riedman sent a letter to the NY Insurance Dept. requesting, among other things, that the dept. deny Berkley's application to acquire control of Niagara.

Riedman intends to expand its proxy solicitation at the 1990 annual meeting of Niagara's shareholders to include the rejection of the Berkley agreement.

Virgil E. Wenger, one of six nominees to Niagara's board, has been replaced by Richard W. Cutting.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) COMTEX - Sen. Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), bemoaning lax enforcement of antitrust laws, called today for the "uncelebration" of the Sherman Antitrust Act's centennial.

"We should be celebrating 100 years since the passage of the Sherman Act," Metzenbaum said from his Capitol Hill office. "This is an uncelebration because in the last 10 years, the Reagan administration has done more to turn back the clock on enforcement of antitrust than all other administrations combined.

"The 23 largest mergers in the history of our nation have occurred since Reagan took office," continued the senator, who chairs a subcommittee on antitrust. "I am cautiously optimistic this administration will do a better job."

Metzenbaum is seeking to reregulate the airline industry, committed to repealing the McCarran-Ferguson Act, which exempts the insurance industry from antitrust laws, and opposes the administration's proposal for joint venture activities.

The senator introduced a bill late last year which would establish a new independent airline policy board to regulate rates and routes of domestic carriers.

"We've gone from 26 airlines to 9 airlines," Metzenbaum said. "Service is worse and costs are higher." "I am not at all optimistic things will get better in the airline industry. It is much harder to start up an airline than to eliminate one."

The National Cooperative Research Act presently offers reduced antitrust liability for research and development of joint ventures. There are various proposals pending before Congress, including one supported by the president, to extend coverage of the act to include joint ventures for the purpose of joint production in an effort to aid U.S. competitiveness.

"I am opposed to relaxing antitrust laws with the argument that says this will help U.S. competitiveness," Metzenbaum said.

The senator also had harsh words for the state of the insurance industry.

"I believe the insurance industry is a disaster waiting to happen," he said. "For one of the largest industry's in America to be exempt from antitrust law is absurd. The very minimum we should do is repeal the McCarran-Ferguson Act."

Metzenbaum added he has no problems with insurance firms sharing data but says when they share rates it destroys effective competition.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows in a press release dated June 13, 1990, Colorado National Bank announced the offering of home purchase or improvement financing projects for people of the inner-city in Denver, Colorado. These projects were developed jointly with Metropolitan Organizations for People (MOP).

Over the past four months, discussions between representatives of Colorado National and MOP discussed the need for inner-city financial services. They came to a consensus over the real possibility of providing appropriate credit alternatives to support home purchases, home improvements and small business opportunities to low and moderate income residents of inner-city neighborhoods.

Toward that end, with advice from MOP, Colorado National developed and now offers two packaged financial products for Denver inner-city home purchases and home improvements. Since April of 1990, Colorado National has already made available a Special Checking account, requiring no minimum balance, to customers of that inner-city with limited check-writing requirements.

The New Homeowner program, available through December 31, 1990, provides a 30-year, 8.5% APR fixed rate loan to Denver inner-city residents with family incomes not exceeding $26,500. The maximum purchase price of the homes is $75,000, with no points. Closing costs are not to exceed $250. The program is being made available to owner-occupants of single family, detached homes in specific census tracts, including MOP-defined revitalization areas. The success of the program is to be evaluated by Colorado National and MOP in December of 1990.

The second homeowner offering, for home improvements, is again restricted to certain census tracts and single families not earning in excess of $36,500 per year. Loan rates of 11.25% APR for 10 years or 11.50% APR for 15 years are being offered, with loan maximums of $25,000. This offering will also end on Dec. 31, 1990.

Colorado Nation plans to set up community-based facilities to administer and market the programs. Bank employees so engaged will have as their treble objective the financial education of their clients, the development of relationships with their clients and the processing of applications.

STAMFORD, CT (JUNE 25) COMTEX - Adolph Coors Co., the Golden, Colo.-based brewer, was cited this week by both the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Colorado Department of Health for contaminating state waters during the 1980s at the company's Golden can manufacturing plant and at its waste-water treatment plant, and for failing to report the discharges in a timely fashion.

The company was served a formal notice of violation and a cease and desist order June 19 by the state health department's Water Quality Control and Hazardous Materials and Waste Management divisions, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing.

The EPA also sent Coors a formal notice of an administrative enforcement action.

The company would not estimate the amount of penalties that may be assessed, but admitted the amount allowed under the statutes could be substantial.

TOKYO (JUNE 22) - Motor vehicle production in Japan rose 10.8 percent in May over a year earlier to 1,092,568 units, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers' Association reported Friday.

It attributed the rise to an 11.8 percent increase in domestic demand, offsetting an estimated four percent decline in exports.

Of the total, cars accounted for 799,933 units, up 15.9 percent.

But production of trucks declined 1.1 percent to 289,314 units and bus output fell 3.3 percent to 3,321 units.

NEW YORK (JUNE 22) - The U.S. Government's list of foreigners barred from the United States for political reasons has more than 340,000 entries, and more than two-thirds of them were added in the past decade, a lawyer said.

The so-called "look out" book has long been secret, but the government released it earlier this month in response to a lawsuit brought by a Colombian journalist, Patricia Lara, who was denied entry to the United States four years ago.

"It's the first time that concrete dimension has been given to the magnitude and scope of this lookout system," Ms. Lara's lawyer, Arthur Helton, said Thursday.

The documents showed that the list -- known as the National Automated Immigration Lookout System -- has 353,324 entries from 146 countries, territories and other areas.

Some dated as far back as 1904 but most fell under the provisions of the 1952 McCarran-Walter Act, which lists people under the categories of security risks, political beliefs, and subversion and violent activities.

At least 341,000 entries were of people barred because of their political beliefs, according to Mr. Helton.

Since 1980, 238,140 entries were added to the list, Mr. Helton said. More than 4,000 were added in the first three months of 1990, he said.

U.S. officials, however, said some people were entered more than once, inflating the number of entries. Assistant U.S. Attorney Chad Vignola, who argued the government's case, said Mr. Helton was "simply wrong" in estimating that more than 300,000 individuals were on the list.

In ordering the release of the list to Mr. Helton last September, U.S. District Judge John Walker said the names of those listed should be kept secret for their own protection.

Tokyo (JUNE 22) - Japan should continue its market-opening efforts and boost imports so as to contribute more to world economic growth, a government report said Friday.

The 1990 trade white paper said Japan should also back up economic and technological reforms in developing nations, the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe by continuing to provide comprehensive economic cooperation.

Stressing the importance of continued cooperation with the United States, the paper also called for more economic assitance to the Asia and Pacific regions by technological transfer and direct investment, particularly in the manufacturing sectors.

The white paper, which was compiled by the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, also said Japanese enterprises abroad should promote invesments.

Japan's imports, especially of finished products, are increasing fast. Imports of finished goods accounted for 50.3 percent of Japan's total imports of 210.8 billion dollars in 1989, said the report.

Japan's trade surplus fell to 76.9 billion dollars in 1989 from a peak of 96.4 billion dollars in 1987.

The U.S. trade deficit with Japan fell 13.7 per cent to 44.9 billion dollars in 1989 from a peak of 52.1 billion dollars in 1987.

Dortmund (JUNE 22) - The West German steel and technology group Hoesch reported Friday that its business and earnings so far in 1990 had kept pace with last year's strong results, but that a slowdown might possibly set in during the year's second half.

At the annual shareholders conference, chairman Detlev Rohwedder said Hoesch saw potential danger in the economic slowdown in the U.S., but it was still too early to predict how this would affect Hoesch's overall 1990 performance.

In 1989, Hoesch achieved profits of 558 million marks (332 million dollars), surging from 292 million marks the year before. Turnover last year rose steeply to 10.7 billion marks, up 27 percent from the 8.4 billion mark volume of 1988.

The Hoesch executive board proposed a ten-mark per share dividend, up from last year's eight-mark payout.

TOKYO (JUNE 22) - Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said Friday his government would work harder to restructure Japan's economic system in a bid to improve the standard of living of Japanese people.

Mr. Kaifu made the comment in a speech to the Economic Restructuring Committee, which advises him on economic issues, Japanese officials said.

In his speech, Mr. Kaifu admitted there was a "delay in modifying the economic structure involving the people's daily life," including cutting working hours, controlling retail prices and improving housing conditions, the officials said.

In its report to Mr. Kaifu, the committee said the government should step up efforts to improve the people's living standards by putting greater emphasis on consumption, rather than on production.

The report is designed to review annual progress in Japan's restructuring efforts under a five-year plan launched in fiscal 1988, which is intended to provide the government with direction for its medium-term economic management.

PARIS (JUNE 22) - The French GAN insurance group is to increase its capital by 3.6 billion francs (about 640 million dollars) on Monday through the issue of share warrants, company chairman Francois Heilbronner said on Friday.

The state will acquire 302,361 of the 1.13 warrants issued.

Under the arrangement, subscribers will pay a total of 2.4 billion francs immediately, and the remaining 1.2 billion francs to convert the warrants into shares by December 15 1993.

Two warrants will entitle the holder to one new share priced at 2,150 francs. Existing shareholders will have priority to subscribe until July 5 up to a limit of one new share for eight old ones.

The issue will be divided into one part of 715 million francs for foreign investors and 1.072 billion francs for French investors.

The amount of official development assistance (ODA) paid to developing counties by the Japanese government in calendar 1989 dropped 1.9 percent from 1988 to 8.96 billion dollars, the ministry said.

But aid from the United States in the same year fell 22.4 percent to 7.66 billion dollars, it said.

HANOI (JUNE 22) - Vietnam's economy generally fared well in the six months to June, but problems remain in the financial sector and malpractices plagued banking, according to an official report published Friday.

In the same period, real wages dropped while unemployment increased, even though the state found jobs for 550,000 people, Vietnam's official press quoted the report as saying.

In the first six months of 1990, 118,000 state workers retired or joined the private sector, the report was quoted as saying.

State Planning Commission chairman Pham Van Khai told the current session of the National Assembly (parliament) in his report Thursday that monthly inflation hit 2.7 percent in the first five months of the year, compared to 3.95 percent in the first half of 1989.

Exports and imports both increased in value, he said. Exports, fuelled by increased sales of crude oil and agricultural goods such as rice, rubber, coffee and tea, rose 40 percent to 950 million dollars, the report said.

But cancellation of contracts from Eastern Europe following major political changes there, together with delayed payments, limited growth.

Imports were up an estimated 6.8 percent to 1,150 million dollars, while contracts for 46 projects worth a total 225 million dollars were signed with foreign investors.

The current two-week assembly session ending June 30 has been called largely to debate and approve draft laws aimed at stimulating the economy. Amendments to the two-year-old foreign investment code are also being discussed.

Details of reports Thursday by Foreign Minister Ngguyen Co Thach on external affairs and by the interior ministry on political security and social order were not given by the press.

LONDON (JUNE 22) - The British government has issued a "last warning" to the British popular press before considering legal measures against sensationalist newspapers that invade the privacy of famous personalities.

The government has been monitoring the popular press and commissioned an independent report on privacy violations, arguing that invasion of privacy has become epidemic with "scoop" photographs of famous people in their hospital rooms and tabloid obsession with the sex lives of actors and singers.

Cambridge professor David Calcutt, the author of the report, recommended that press violations against individual privacy be subject to prosecution. Calcutt also called for the creation of a complaints commission as well as a more punitive body to deal with privacy-invasion complaints.

Calcutt said the Press Council, which currently deals with freedom of expression questions and sets guidelines for the press, should be abolished. He was not in favour, however, of according individuals who make libel complaints the right of reply.

The Calcutt report was poorly received by most British journalists, who complained the recommendations would curtail their freedom of expression. The National Union of Journalists said the report was tantamount to "blackmailing" the profession.

The government commissioned the Calcutt report following the Hillsborough football stadium tragedy on April 25, 1989, when 95 fans were killed in a crush of people. Several newspapers were widely viewed as shamelessly exploiting the horror of the tragedy to sensational ends.

The government says a self-regulating code of ethical guidelines has not worked, citing the more recent example of television star Gordon Keyes, who last winter was photographed in his hospital room after his head was seriously injured in a car accident.

The British tabloids, The Sun and The Daily Mirror, are especially noted for their sensationalist coverage of the private lives of famous people, and both papers sell more than four million copies daily. But libel and defamation suits have not deterred the British tabloids from going after gossip and sensational news.

Britain's "quality" papers have said they fear stricter government measures to control the popular press could restrict freedom of expression for the press in general.

Bonn (JUNE 22) - West Germany and Poland agreed Friday on a 3-billion-mark (1.76-billion-dollar) refunding package for Warsaw, the Bonn Finance Ministry announced.

Officials said the accord, initialled Friday in Warsaw, would cover all Polish obligations through March 31, 1991 on state-guaranteed credits from West German exporters and bankers as well as payments on earlier bilateral debt-rescheduling deals.

The latest credits come within the framework of a February 1990 agreement by the Paris Club of Western creditor nations allowing Poland a moratorium on debt-payment obligations until April 1991, the officials said.

Poland currently is estimated to have a total of 41 billion dollars in debts abroad, including 28 billion dollars owed West Germany and other members of the Club of Paris.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) - The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Friday declared the rare northern spotted owl a threatened species in a move the timber industry said would costs thousands of logging jobs in the owl's Pacific Northwest habitat.

Under the owl's designation as a threatened species, which will become effective July 23, it will be illegal to harm any spotted owls or destroy their critical habitat without federal government approval.

The announcement capped a bitter dispute between environmentalists and the timber industry, which says that protection measures for the owl would curtail logging and cost up to 30,000 jobs over the next decade.

MONROVIA (JUNE 22) - The Liberian Council of Churches (LCC) is organizing a third peace march for Tuesday to condemn executions and harassment among ethnic groups by rebels and government troops at war since December, church sources said here Friday.

Church leaders denounced the "continuous intimidations, summary executions and harassment of Mandingoes, Krahns, Gios and Mizes" at the rebel-held Bong mines and in Rivercess county and other areas. The rebels were Friday said to be within 30 kilometres (19 miles) of Monrovia.

The march will also condemn the "atrocities and continuous harassment by soldiers" in and around the capital. LCC sources added that a prayer service would be held Monday for a successful outcome to peace talks due that day in Freetown.

Government officials and rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPLF) held a first round of talks in the capital of neighbouring Sierra Leone earlier this month, agreeing to exercise "restraint" but failing to reach a ceasefire accord.

Travellers fleeing from the Bong Mining Company area 70 kilometres (44 miles) north of here Friday said the rebels had set up three tribunals in the region and already sentenced about 100 people to death, executing them for "crimes against the people".

The travellers told Agence France-Presse that those executed included prominent area residents, local school adminstrators, members of President Samuel Doe's Krahn tribe and Mandingos, a group of Moslem traders accused of supporting the government.

A local chief who asked not to be named said the West German-run Bong mines were in a state of "chaos", with a total breakdown of law and order, as police and other security personnel had fled.

The rebels, led by fugitive former civil servant Charles Taylor, have also captured Careysburg, 30 kilometres (some 19 miles) north of here, independent sources said Friday. Residents told AFP that the rebels had taken over their homes.

Careysburg was the last major town on the rebels' way to the capital of this West African state.

The decision to hold Tuesday's peace march, the third in three weeks, was taken at the end of a meeting Thursday under the auspices of church leaders, which gathered representatives of the press union of Liberia, labour unions, the bar association and other professional groups.

March organizers said they expected 25,000 people to take part.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (JUNE 22) - Haiti's army high command Friday vowed to apprehend the gunmen who opened fire on a meeting of the Council of State, killing one union leader and wounding a council member and another person.

In a communique, the army high command condemned Thursday's attack by four men, two of whom were wearing military uniforms, and said it had taken "the necessary measures to identify and apprehend the perpetrators."

The attackers opened fire at delegates gathering for a meeting between the Council of State and labor and business leaders.

Union leader Jean Marie Montes was killed in the attack in the courtyard of a former hotel in Port-au-Prince, while Council of State member Serge Villard and a polital activist, Emmanuel Mani, were wounded.

Both Mr. Villard and Mr. Mani was considered out of danger after undergoing surgery Thursday.

Witnesses said the gunmen who fired at the delegates were apparently seeking council president Louis Roy, who was inside the building. A statement by the council blamed the attack on "agitators" seeking to derail Haiti's move towards democratic government.

Three men were shot dead in the streets soon after the attack on the council meeting. It was not immediately clear whether there was any link between the two shootings, but some witnesses said the attacks were the work of the same assailants.

Haitian employers associations called for a one day work stoppage Saturday in a show of "mourning and protest" over the attack.

"This escalation of blind and continually unpunished violence can only undermine the foundations of the Haitian nation," said a statement signed by 11 employers' associations and released late Thursday.

The Council of State is a civilian body which governs alongside interim President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot. She was not present at the meeting.

The council has the support of the country's main political parties, but forces linked to the former Duvalier dictatorships are demanding that it be disbanded.

The attack came as the country prepares for general elections in September following four years of instability.

ABIDJAN (JUNE 22) - The leaders of 13 of Ivory Coast's 14 newly legalised opposition parties had a brief formal meeting here Friday with President Felix Houphouet-Boigny.

Officials termed the 10-minute encounter an occasion for making initial contacts. No official statements were made, but reliable sources said there would be further meetings.

The Socialist Party of Bamba Morifere and Kouakou Mandouadja stayed away because, like some of the other parties, it objects to Mr. Houphouet-Boigny being simultaneously head of state and president of the ruling Democratic Party, which has had a monopoly of power since independence 30 years ago.

The octogenarian leader finally bowed to months of popular pressure marked by strikes and street demonstrations by conceding at the end of April that a multi-party system should be introduced.

Friday's encounter at the president's official residence was the first official meeting since then.

Communications Minister Auguste Miremont meanwhile disclosed that six more political movements had applied for registration and official recognition.

LAGOS (JUNE 22) - Nigerian President Ibrahim Babangida Friday ordered an immediate airlift of emergency relief to Liberian refugees in Sierra Leone, an official statement said in the Nigerian capital.

The refugees have fled into neighbouring Sierre Leone as Liberian rebels press an offensive towards the capital in their bid to unseat Liberian President Samuel Doe.

The ministry of external affairs should make arrangements to airlift by Sunday emergency supplies of food, clothing, medical and other relief materials to alleviate the refugees' suffering, Gen. Babangida said after a special envoy of Sierra Leone President Joseph Momoh briefed him on their plight.

Gen. Babangida also suggested activating mediation machinery recently proposed at the Economic Community of West African States (Ecowas) summit in Banjul to ''deal with the grave situation" in Liberia.

The envoy, development minister Sheka Kanu, also briefed the Nigerian leader on the suspended Liberian peace talks in Freetown which were sponsored by the Liberian Council of Churches. The talks would resume on Monday, he added.

LONDON (JUNE 22) - Although tanker rates remained at low levels over the past week, limited improvement was seen in places due to reasonably healthy demand, London brokers E.A. Gibson said Friday in their latest report.

Obviously a further increase in demand is needed to overcome the continuous build-up of tonnage availability, and this does not look imminent, they added.

Rates obtained by large crude carriers loading in the Middle East Gulf were slightly firmer, while increased interest was seen in 80,000 tonners loading in that area.

Some activity was also seen in the clean sector, but with more-than-adequate tonnage available for the second half of July, rates are not expected to improve on current levels in the short term, the report said.

Rates remained at low levels in West Africa, where demand was by no means sufficient to absorb tonnage availability.

Although there was modest activity in the Mediterranean, shipowners failed to maintain last week's slight improvement in rates.

There was no change in the abysmal conditions existing in the Caribbean area, where owners of crude carriers found difficult to obtain employment. Clean carriers fared better.

Renewed enquiry was seen in the North Sea, where vessels in a variety of sizes obtained employment.

JERUSALEM (JUNE 22) - Violence rocked East Jeruslaem's Arab suburb of Silwan for a second day straight Friday as Palestinians reported the death of a 17-year-old youth in clashes with Israeli border police.

The young man's parents removed his body before the Israeli Army was able to sequester it for an autopsy, the sources added.

Silwan had already been the scene of unrest on Thursday, when three Palestinians suffered gunshot wounds in confrontations with the border police after the violent death of a 20-year-old Arab man.

NEW DELHI (JUNE 22) - India's army chief warned Pakistan Friday that India would retaliate with "all its might" if it persisted in violating the international border in Kashmir state.

The Press Trust of India (PTI) quoted army chief of staff General V.N. Sharma as accusing Pakistan of violating the line of control in disputed Kashmir by "pushing (Moslem) militants" across the frontier.

Gen. Sharma said while addressing troops in Kashmir that India did not want a break-up of Pakistan, nor did it have any designs on its territory.

But the army chief said the Indian army would "retaliate with all its might" if Pakistan continued to violate the line of control established at the end of the third and Indo-Pakistan war in 1971.

Gen. Sharma recalled that India and Pakistan, both of which claim Kashmir, India's only Moslem-majority state, had accepted among other things that the line of control formed the international border pending an eventual solution to the Kashmir dispute.

PTI said Gen. Sharma further told troops stationed in forward areas that Pakistan was training, funding and pushing Moslem militants into Kashmir, a repeated Indian charge against Pakistan. Islamabad has consistently rejected such charges.

"We would have to confront this," Gen. Sharma said.

India and Pakistan are currently working towards a foreign secretary level meeting in an attempt to defuse the sharp escalation in tension between New Delhi and Islamabad over Kashmir.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF. (JUNE 22) - The widespread use of the drug AZT to treat AIDS patients in the United States has sparked a debate at the international AIDS conference here, with European scientists arguing the drug has not been sufficiently tested.

The only known drug capable of slowing the lethal disease, AZT is the sole medication formally approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for treatment of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), which attacks the body's immune system, rendering it defenseless against infection.

At the center of the dispute is the question of whether the drug should continue to be administered routinely to AIDS sufferers and persons infected with the AIDS virus without further clinical trials to learn exactly how AZT works and determine its toxicity.

In 1987, U.S. scientists began a double-blind test of AZT, giving the drug to half the AIDS-infected trial subjects and administering a placebo to the others.

But under concerted pressure from AIDS organizations and homosexual activists, the growing number of AIDS cases in the United States and doctors' fears of being sued for negligence, U.S. health authorities dropped the double-blind trials in August 1989 and authorized the use of AZT on all AIDS patients.

Despite clear early evidence that AZT slows the advance of AIDS, Britain and France have decided to withhold formal approval of the drug pending further clinical testing.

Thursday a French virologist noted U.S. physicians' ethical dilemma, saying American doctors, faced with a massive AIDS epidemic, found it "difficult to continue to give a placebo to patients who had more risk of developing AIDS if they were not treated."

But he disagreed with the unlimited use of AZT prior to completion of testing.

LONDON (JUNE 22) - Natural rubber prices rallied slightly after a weak start this week on the London physical market, due to renewed interest in higher grades, traders said.

The price for Ribbed Smoked Sheet No. 1 (RSS 1) for July delivery closed at 555 pounds per ton against 547.5 the previous Friday.

Traders said Korean and European demand for latex was particularly in evidence. However, European and U.S. demand for lower tyre grades remained weak ahead of the traditionally slow Northern hemisphere summer holiday period.

PARIS (JUNE 22) - Donor countries of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) urged Friday close practical cooperation with developing nations to come to grips with "serious" economic and environmental problems bound to emerge if world population growth continues at the current explosive pace.

Development aid donors grouped in the OECD's Development Assistance Committee (DAC) said the latest United Nations estimates indicate that on present trends, the populations of many developing countries are swelling at a rate which "is threatening to overtake their hopes of achieving sustainable development and alleviating poverty."

They noted that one billion people, mainly in the poorest Asian and African countries, are already afflicted with severe poverty.

A statement issued after a DAC meeting here this week said the 18 donor countries recognized that population, environment, food and energy had assumed "global significance", and that "the implications of these problems will be felt in terms of worldwide environmental damage and increasing pressures for migration."

"The year I was born, we had a world population of about two billion, but before this decade is out we are going to have a population of six billion " said DAC president Joe Wheeler, born in 1926, commenting on what he called an "extraordinary" acceleration of demographic trends in recent years.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) - Guyana has paid its arrears on debt payments to the World Bank, leaving eight countries still in violation of their payment schedules, the bank announced Friday.

Guyana, which paid 55.3 milion dollars, had been barred access to World Bank financing since December 1986.

With the payment, the South American country is now eligible for new loans from the bank.

The eight countries still in arrears to the bank are Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Sierra Leone, Syria and Zambia.

Thursday Guyana paid off 107.1 million special drawing rights (144 million dollars) it owed to the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in a settlement negotiated with the aid of several other IMF member countries, including Japan, West Germany, France and Britain.

KAMPALA (JUNE 22) - At least seven people were killed and 47 seriously injured when a passenger train derailed in western Uganda, Ugandan railway officials said here Friday.

The accident, which occurred at Kamwenge on the western Kampala-Kasese line on Tuesday, is suspected to have been caused by sabotage. Railway officials said a section of track had been removed.

According to one of the train drivers, the locomotive's engine jumped off the rails and was followed by passenger wagons which smashed into the engine.

Seven people were killed on the spot. The injured were admitted to the nearby Ibanda Hospital.

Ugandan railway officials were still at scene of the accident Friday to supervise clearing work on the line before resuming normal train service between Kampala and western Uganda.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) - Soviet authorities have begun removing nuclear warheads from sites in the Baltics and other troubled republics for fear the weapons could fall into the hands of nationalist rebels, a U.S. official said Friday.

"It's a prudent thing to do," the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said in reference to the Soviet move.

A U.S. expert on the Soviet Military, Stephen Meyers of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said Soviet officials had also told him of the shift of nuclear arms out of the Baltics and regions in central Asia.

"There is a consolidation going on," he said, adding that Soviet concerns included fears that rebels, notably in Central Asian republics, could attempt to turn nuclear warheads over to Iran or other foreign supporters.

Mr. Meyer said his conversations with Soviet officials indicated the movement of nuclear weapons into more secure parts of the Russian Republic appeared to have begun in January after violence broke out between Armenians and Azerbaijanis in the city of Baku, where nuclear warheads are reportedly stored. The incidents in Baku included attacks on Soviet military units in the area.

The Wall Street Journal, quoting unnamed experts, reported Friday that more than 33,000 warheads had been moved as part of the consolidation effort.

It said the operation involved primarily tactical weapons, like short-range nuclear missiles and artillery shells, and not long-range strategic arms.

QUETTA, PAKISTAN (JUNE 22) - Gunmen shot dead a Pakistani provincial minister and two other people at a mosque here Friday, officials said.

Four men armed with AK-47 assault rifles opened fire as Baluchistan minister Haji Eid Mohammed Notezai was entering the city's Omar mosque to say Friday prayers.

The minister died instantly while the two other people died later of their wounds, the officials said.

The assailants fled in a waiting jeep, they said, adding that three people were hospitalised with serious wounds.

Mr. Notezai, a member of the opposition Islamic Democratic Alliance, was sworn in as a provincial minister on June 9.

The officials said the killing was the result of an old tribal feud, adding that the attackers had been identified.

In a shootout here in February 1988 five people belonging to the Amirzai tribe were killed, allegedly by the Notezais.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto expressed their "profound grief" at the killing.

The provicial government has declared Saturday a day of mourning.

MONROVIA (JUNE 22) - Liberian rebels fighting to oust President Samuel Doe have captured the last major town outside the capital Monrovia in their push to unseat President Samuel Doe, independent reports said here Friday.

The news of the rebel advance sent residents here rushing to markets and stores to stock up on food as they anticipated intensified fighting between the government forces and rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) outside the capital.

Latest reports said the NPFL were just 18 miles (27 kilometers) away from Monrovia after capturing Careysburg city on Thursday. Careysburg lies 20 miles (30 kilometres) northeast of here.

People fleeing the area Friday said rebels were evacuating residents of the area to nearby Kakata some 40 miles (70 kilometers) from the capital to avoid them being trapped in a possible counter-attack by government troops.

Informed sources said the Voice of America relay station a few miles (kilometers) outside of Careysburg has not been captured by the rebels and continued to operate normally.

The sources said rebels left the transmitter alone once they noticed it was on U.S. property.

Civil servants here continued to leave their offices early to arrive home safely, as a month-long gasoline (petrol) shortage continues to pose acute transportation problems for commuters in the West African country.

Several religious organizations and professional bodies have appealed to the government and the rebels to end the fighting and bring an end to the six-month-old civil war.

The latest clashes followed the scheduling of a second round of peace talks between the NPFL and government officials on Monday in Freetown, the Sierre Leone capital.

A peace march, the third in one month, is expected to take place here under the auspices of the Liberia Council of Churches (LCC) on Tuesday.

The LCC, along with the Muslim Council, were responsible for organizing and mediating five days of peace negotiations last week in the Sierra Leone capital which failed to come up with a ceasefire agreement.

Organizers of Tuesday's march say 25,000 people from labor unions, the Press Union of Liberia (PUL), National Teachers' Association, the bar association and religious groups are expected to participate.

MANILA (JUNE 22) - Australian air transport firm TNT Ltd. will open a "hub of operation," for its air freight service in this city in the near future, the government said Friday.

TNT will provide aircraft, equipment and a ground network worth about 100 million dollars for an express air freight service that will act as a "hub and spoke" for Asia, the government statement said.

The announcement was made after William Burgess, president of TNT, met Friday with Mrs. Aquino at the presidential palace.

TNT will initially operate five, 10-ton planes, said the statement quoting Mr. Burgess

The Philippine Aerospace Development Corp., a government-owned aircraft assembly firm, has a preliminary agreement to be the local carrier for TNT the statement said.

BRUSSELS (JUNE 22) - Zaire decided Friday to expel all Belgian volunteer workers in response to sanctions imposed by Belgium after a violent crackdown on students in Lubumbashi last month in which more than 100 may have died.

President Mobutu Sese Seko also rejected a massive debt writeoff signed last July and cut the number of Belgian Sabena airline flights to Kinshasa from five to two a week, according to Zaire's AZAP news agency quoted by the Belga news agency.

Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens, coming out of a cabinet meeting Friday, made no immediate comment, saying he would talk to Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens and simply adding that the two countries had "in the past had long and difficult negotiations".

A foreign ministry spokesman said Belgium "deplored" Zaire's unilateral decision. The expulsions will concern some 700 people, since AZAP said others taken in charge by Zaire will be allowed to continue working.

The Belgian government on May 25 froze all state loans to its former colony and cancelled a meeting that would have given shape to cooperation agreements and sealed reconciliation after a long period of acrimony.

Last July, Belgium wiped out half of Zaire's government and trade debt, a sum of 11 billion Belgian francs (318.8 million dollars).

AZAP Friday said that Zaire was also closing three of Belgium's four consulates, including that at Lubumbashi, capital of Shaba Province, which lies 1,500 kilometres (930 miles) southeast of Kinshasa. Only the consulate at Matadi, on Angola's northern border, would remain open.

Mr. Eyskens has said that according to Belgian diplomats in Zaire, "about a dozen" people died when troops carried out a night raid on students at the Lubumbashi campus on May 11.

The international human rights organization Amnesty International has, however, said it had reports that security forces killed between 50 and 150 students with machetes and bayonets.

This week the Zairean government stated that the ex-governor of Shaba, Koyagialo Nagbe Te Gerengbo, who had been transferred to another province after the killings, and ten other top officials would go on trial. They included a Major Lokombe, head of the paramilitary civil guard.

SOFIA (JUNE 22) - The Bulgarian state prosecutor has opened an inquiry into a controversial video which shows President Petur Mladenov calling for military action against the opposition, official sources said Friday.

At issue is an electoral film broadcast on television by the Union of Democratic Forces (UDF) three days before the second round of voting in Bulgaria's parliamentary elections.

Mr. Mladenov is shown returning to the parliament building saying "the best thing to do is to bring in the tanks" after failing to break up an anti-government demonstration in Sofia last December 14.

Mr. Mladenov later called the video a "primitive montage bearing no relation to reality," in a television broadcast.

The inquiry must determine if the words were reproduced "authentically".

Students from six university faculties in the capital have been boycotting classes to demand a probe.

Also Friday, more than 30,000 supporters of the Bulgarian Socialist Party, the former communist party which won this month's elections, took to the streets to celebrate the party's victory in the country's first free vote In 44 years, witnesses said.

BAALBECK, LEBANON (JUNE 22) - Lebanon's opium growers, the worlds main suppliers of heroin, are facing hard times trafficking their drugs.

The harbours and little airports in the Christian enclave in central Lebanon which they usually use have been closed for the past five months owing to fighting between rival Christian forces.

Drug experts say the price of a kilo of heroin which used to sell here at 20,000 dollars last year is being given away today for a hundred. The drug would be sold for 200,000 dollars outside Lebanon.

''Tons of heroin and opium are being kept in stores and underground cellars,'' said Mohamad Shammas, a resident of East Lebanons Bekaa Valley.

Around 5,000 acres of land stretch like an endless carpet across the northern sector of this valley which borders Syria and Israel's security zone.

White, purple and yellow flowers fool the visitors. Its vicious offspring is hidden under an elegant stem holding a bell-like fruit.

Wahib Jamil, 27, whose relatives grow the seed, said 20,000 kilos of opium is produced in Lebanon every year. This yields around 3,000 kilos of pure, white heroin and 1,500 kilos of cheaper brown heroin.

The plant is processed and treated in Lebanon to be exported ready-for-use in the United States and Europe, said a report by Beirut University College issued Friday.

TEHERAN (JUNE 22) - The massive earthquake in northwest Iran has killed at least 28,950 people and left 29,128 injured, the official IRNA news agency reported, while the United Nations Press Service said 40,000 people died.

The fresh figures were considerably higher than earlier tolls issued by IRNA which said 14,100 people had died and 28,198 had been injured in the temblor, which struck early Thursday.

In New York, the United Nations Press Office put the death toll at 40,000 with 100,000 injured.

In Geneva, the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization (UNDRO) said it had been informed by the Iranian Foreign Ministry that 35,000 people had been killed and 105,000 injured.

The UNDRO said more than 105,000 had been left homeless by the quake in Gilan and Zanjan provinces. It said there were problems with water and electricity in many areas hit by the quake.

The UNDRO was to send a plane from Italy to Teheran Saturday carrying 37 tonnes of tents, blankets, water containers and other items worth 228,000 dollars.

U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar meanwhile appointed Mohammed Essaafi, the current UNDRO chief, as special coordinator to oversee aid and rescue operations to the victims of the Iranian disaster.

The earthquake was the worst ever in earthquake-prone Iran.

Destruction in Zanjan covered 130 square kilometers (52 square miles), governor general Jaafar Mousavi said, with between 40 and 60 per cent of the villages in the region demolished.

Many of the affected communities are in the mountains where rescue work is proving difficult, he added.

The quake, measuring at least 7.3 on the Richter scale, struck shortly after midnight Thursday. Northwest and central Iran have since then been shaken by at least 100 aftershocks, according to Farhad Shad of Teheran's Geophysics Center.

PRETORIA (JUNE 22) - President Frederik de Klerk said Friday that he had no doubt that the doors of opportunity are beginning to "open and reopen" for South Africa.

Speaking at an Iron and Steel Corporation (ISCOR) function, he said that businessmen and politicians were clamouring for information about the "significant tide" of change in the country, "and wish to be part of the solution."

Many new export opportunities, especially the promotion of manufactured exports, were presenting themselves, he said.

On the local front, he said that the government was determined to assume a much smaller role in the economy, affording the private sector and market forces a decisive role in determining economic growth.

He said that the violence and "measure of instability" the country was experiencing should be seen only as "growing pains" since the government had chosen a path of dynamic but orderly and well-managed change.

Commenting on his recent nine-nation tour of Europe, Mr. De Klerk said that it had brought about better comprehension of the "change-related uncertainty that manifests itself in any society in transition."

"The heartening understanding which I experienced from many of our (European) friends clearly holds the promise of a new era in the development of our country."

But he conceded that South Africa needed additional capital and technology. "Technology is one of the vital keys to unlocking our future."

BUCHAREST (JUNE 22) - The trial of 25 secret policemen, militia officers and Romanian Communist Party officials accused of mass murder in the Transylvanian town of Timisoara was adjourned Friday until August 7, the official Rompres news agency reported.

The 25 are charged either with "genocide" or "complicity in genocide" for their alleged roles in putting down demonstrations in the west Romanian town in December.

The repression in Timisoara sparked the popular uprising that toppled communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, executed on Christmas Day.

The news agency did not say why the proceedings in Timisoara, which began on March 2 and have been suspended several times, were once again put off.

Among those on trial alongside Securitate secret police and militia leaders are former communist party central committee secretaries Ion Coman and Ilie Matei, ex-deputy premier Cornel Pacoste, and the party's first secretary for the Timis region, Radu Balan.

The court has taken evidence from 110 witnesses during the trial, Rompres added.

The defendants face life imprisonment, since the death sentence has been abolished.

The crackdown in Timisoara left about 100 people dead, according to official figures.

PRAGUE (JUNE 22) - Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel called upon Cuban leader Fidel Castro in a letter Friday to free all political prisoners in Cuba "without delay."

Mr. Havel's letter, published by the Czechoslovak news agency CTK, followed heavy prison sentences handed down to seven political dissidents in Havana.

Saying he "protests resolutely" the sentences by a Cuban court, Mr. Havel said the prison terms were a "gross violation of basic human rights and an affront to the civilised world."

Mr. Havel added that "the only crime of which the jailed dissidents are guilty is demanding political pluralism, democracy, and a free-market economy -- in other words, the same changes that have occurred in former totalitarian countries here in central and eastern Europe."

Relations between Prague and Havana are at a low point since last November's "velvet revolution" that toppled the former pro-Soviet Czechoslovak regime.

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) - The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Friday declared the rare northern spotted owl a threatened species in a move the timber industry said would costs thousands of logging jobs in the Pacific Northwest.

"The biological evidence says the northern spotted owl is in trouble. We will not and cannot by law ignore that decision," said John Turner, head of the wildlife service, in announcing the owl will be protected under the Endangered Species Act effective July 23.

Less than 5,000 pairs of spotted owl survive in the ancient forests of Washington, Oregon and Northern California. Most of the owls live on federally owned lands of the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management, some of the last frontier regions that show the land as it was before man intruded.

Environmentalists have fought bitterly for protection of the docile brown owl that stands barely five centimeters (two feet) tall and weighs 616 grams (22 ounces).

Once the owl is protected as a threatened species, it will be illegal to harm any spotted owls or destroy their critical habitat without federal government approval.

Release of the as-yet unfinished formal protection plan was delayed until next week.

Interior Department and the Forest Service officials working on the plan must work out the complex issue of how to protect the owl over a huge, mostly wilderness area, in a program that will deal a blow to the timber industry and log exports, especially to Japan and China.

Under a draft plan, 1,200,000 hectares (three million acres) of virgin timberland would be set aside, an area comparable to the state of Connecticut. The plan would slash nearly 40 percent of the region's total timber harvest and costing 30,000 timber-based jobs.

Timber industry leaders estimated a more devastating impact.

Oregon Representative Denny Smith said the loss of timber jobs could affect nearly 75,000 workers.

Mr. Turner said he did not expect the plan to seriously affect this year's timber sales, although some contracts may have to be renegotiated.

"We don't see major disruptions to the logging industry this summer," he said.

XAPURI, BRAZIL (JUNE 22) - The man who allegedly killed internationally renowned environmentalist Chico Mendes in this Amazonian region was convicted and sentenced to prison Friday for the attempted murder of two other men here.

Xapuri Judge Aldair Longuini sentenced Darci Alves Pereira, 23, and his brother, Oloci, to 12 years in prison for the May 1988 attempted murder of two rubber tappers -- forest dwellers who make a living collecting and selling sap from rubber trees.

Darci and his father, 59-year-old Darli, are to be tried for the December 1988 murder of Mr. Mendes, who fought to preserve the Amazon rainforest from development and who helped organize the rubber tappers.

Thursday, some 20 heavily armed police cordoned off the courthouse here in Xapuri, in the heavily forested extreme western tip of Brazil, to ensure that the 25-hour trial proceed without violence. More than 150 rubber tappers packed into the tiny courtroom to observe the proceedings.

Five witnesses told the court that on May 26, 1988, the Alves brothers rode to the Brazilian Institute of Forestry Development on a motorcycle and opened fire on about 100 rubber tappers who were protesting the clear-cutting of large tracts of land by the elderly Mr. Alves.

The protest rally had been organized by Mr. Mendes.

Two of the protesters were seriously injurd in the shooting. After the attack, the Alves brothers fled.

Although they were recognized by several town residents, local authorities did not move to arrest them until after the December murder of Mr. Mendes, witnesses said.

PARIS (JUNE 22) - Arianespace, which commercializes the European rocket Ariane, reported moderate increases in 1989 sales and profit on Friday.

Arianespace communication officer Xavier Picard said at the stockholders' annual meeting that the firm had sales of 3.79 billion francs (about 660 million dollars) last year, up four percent from 1988.

Net profit was 135 million francs (23.7 million dollars) against 127.4 million francs for the previous year, a six percent rise.

The company has reserves of a billion francs for meeting contingencies relating to technical and exchange risks, and its capital is now 1.049 bilion francs.

Mr. Picard said the company has signed 10 contracts since the start of the year, and expects to conclude four or five more by the end of the year for launching six more satellites in 1993-94.

They are two Brasilsat satellites for Brazil, two Turksat satellites for Turkey, and two belonging to U.S. telecommunications group ATT.

"We already have 39 satellites to launch over the next four years, and we will continue to retain our 50 per centshare of the world market for launch services," he said.

Ariane launchings are to resume next month with the 37th flight, which is to orbit the French TDF-2 satellite and the West German DFS-Kopernicus-2 satellite.

The launch date has not been set because of corrective measures being taken due to the failure of the 36th flight the night of February 22, but the date should be around July 23, Mr. Picard said.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (JUNE 22) - Haiti has declared Saturday as a day of national mourning for the deaths of more than 10 people in two days of violence.

One member of Haiti's ruling council has been certified dead and several others were wounded when gunmen interrupted a meeting they were holding Thursday in a small hotel in the capital.

Although it was reported that the head of the government, Ertha Pascal Trouillot, had resigned, it appeared Friday that she was still holding on.

Nevertheless, she was not visible. The only sign of her continued hold on the government was a series of press communiques issued by the Ministry of Information deploring the violence.

Haiti is scheduled to hold general elections in September, and the former opposition - which is now the government - is trying to prevent the Duvalierista group from participating.

An electoral council of nine members has been sworn in with the duty of organizing the election. It is comprised of the same people who were on a former council for the abortive election of November 29, 1987.

Indications mounted Friday that an electoral law which has already been drafted is going to bar the Duvalierista from participating in the general election.

JOHANNESBURG (JUNE 22) - The South African police said Friday that they would not hesitate to take firm action against right-wingers who planned terror and violence in South Africa.

Police public relations head Herman Stadler also said that "serious allegations" to the effect that right-wing groups were plotting to murder nationalist leader Nelson Mandela and eventually overthrow the government in a coup were being urgently investigated.

Mr. Stadler told state-run television that the police viewed the reports, carried in the left-leaning Vrye Weekblad newspaper "in a very serious light."

"If it is found that there is an orchestrated attempt to plan these attacks, I can assure you that the police won't hesitate to act against those who are guilty," he said.

The Vrye Weekblad revealed the plot to murder Mandela on Friday, after hearing tape recordings and evidence from a spy, former security police agent Jan Johannes Smith, who infiltrated right-wing organisations.

He claimed that right-wing groups, including the Conservative Party (CP) and the Afrikaner Resistance Movement (AWB) had also planned to murder President Frederik de Klerk and top cabinet ministers and throw the country into a state of turmoil.

The AWB Friday accused the newspaper of using "strange names of unstable people to make wild statements" to create a wrong impression of right-wing politics.

The group also accused Vrye Weekblad of "atrociously misusing" one of the alleged right-wing plotters, Heinrich Beissner.

The AWB's chief secretary, Kays Smit, also denied that Mr. Beissner was a member of the movement's defence commandos.

Mr. Smit said the AWB considered it "utterly strange and deliberately mean" to put words in the mouth of "such an old man." Mr. Beissner is nearly 80.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF (JUNE 22) - A woman who refused medical treatment for her meningitis-suffering daughter on religious grounds has been convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the child's death.

The practitioner was not charged in the case.

Christian Scientists believe that disease and illnesses can be cured through prayer alone.

PARIS (JUNE 22) - With a cast of some 80 literary heavyweights assembled in a Paris TV studio, and flashbacks of interviews with such stars as Alexander Solzhenitsyn and Marguerite Yourcenar, talk show host Bernard Pivot on Friday closed the book on his 15-year-old "Apostrophes" programme.

The show, which through 724 editions became a national favourite and sparked envy among both writers and publishers all over the world, is ending because the 55-year-old Mr. Pivot says he wants a change of air.

For the last programme, Mr. Pivot brought together the cream of French writers, including Michel Tournier and Marguerite Duras, and also showed highlights from earlier shows.

Meanwhile an opinion poll carried out for Le Figaro Magazine found that for 67 percent of respondents the ending of the programme was a "major loss," -- even though only 11 percent of the same sample said they actually watched the show regularly.

Mr. Pivot, who is among a handful of television personalities to have resisted the lure of better money in the private sector to stay with the state-owned Antenne-2 channel, is due to start a new cultural programme in January next year.

Bernard Rapp, a former news announcer, meanwhile faces the daunting task of starting up a new literary show on Antenne-2 -- on the same day and at the same time as "Apostrophes" -- in September.

For writers, an appearance on "Apostrophes" brought with it the promise of almost automatic sales, and many French bookshops have made a point of setting aside part of their display window for each week's crop of titles.

RIYADH (JUNE 22) - The leaders of Saudi Arabia, Algeria and Morocco, who make up a special Arab committee on Lebanon, on Friday announced the creation of an international aid fund for the war-shattered country, with an initial capital of two billion dollars.

In a statement released here and in Algiers and Rabat the heads of state of the three countries called on Arab states and the rest of the world community to contribute to the fund.

The new institution is to hold its first meeting here on September 10 and 11, the statement said.

The decision to set up the fund was made at a special Arab summit called last month in Baghdad to discuss the Palestinian crisis.

Friday's announcement followed a meeting of the Saudi, Algerian and Moroccan foreign ministers in the French town of La Baule, where a Franco-African summit took place earlier this week. Moroccan ruler King Hassan II chaired the meeting.

VALPARAISO, CHILE (JUNE 25) - A fishing vessel was missing off the central coast of Chile Friday, a week after it radioed it was in the midst of a boiling sea apparently caused by an erupting undersea volcano, naval authorities reported.

Radio contact with the Viniker broke off shortly after it sent a distress call last Saturday, and the boat had not been sighted since either at sea or at any of Chile's ports, they said.

The authorities have not been able to determine the size of the crew.

Although the possibility of an undersea volcano in the region had been discounted, the naval authorities warned ships to stay clear of the area where the Viniker disappeared.

A team of geologists and other scientists was dispatched aboard a naval vessel to the area to study any unusual phenomena.

TRIPOLI (JUNE 25) - Libya is seeking international aid to fight an American "man-eating" fly species that has already cost it 15 million dollars and is threatening incalculable human and animal damage if its spreads to the rest of Africa.

Agriculture Minister Abdel Magid Kaud, detailing his country's efforts to contain the American blowfly, or Cochliomyia hominivorax, stressed that the insect also threatened the rest of Africa and southern Europe.

Its potential for destruction made its eradication a duty of the entire world community, he said.

The warning from Mr. Kaud, who escorted a group of journalists through infected areas here this week, came amid mounting international concern over the fly, which lays its eggs on the open wounds of mammals. The larvae, known as screwworms, infest the wound, feeding on the animal's flesh and often causing death.

Though its life span is only 10 to 15 days, a female can lay up to 5,000 eggs and fly up to 300 kilometers (180 miles) in its relentless search for a host.

Libya is the only African country where the pest has been identified, but the infected zone at one point only 60 kilometers (37 miles) from Tunisia.

The blowfly was first detected in Libya in March, 1989, and has since spread over a 20,000 square-kilometer (8,000 square mile) area around the capital, to 100 kilometers (62 miles) in each direction.

Though efforts have contained the zone, the number of cases there are increasing, Mr. Kaud said.

And the Worldwide Fund for Nature (WWF) warned last week that 80 percent of animals -- including endangered species -- were threatened in east and south Africa if the fly managed to pass the Nile valley.

U.N. organizations, meanwhile, have devised an 80 to 85 million-dollar eradication program which would involve releasing sterilized males into the infected zone, the only reliable method that U.S. and Mexican researchers have found for combating the pest.

The U.N. International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) are planning a new meeting July 15 with donor countries to try to finance the program.

TEHRAN (JUNE 22) EFE - Iraq Friday made an unconditional offer of emergency aid to Iran, with whom it is technically still engaged in the ten-year-old Gulf War, following the quake which claimed some 30,000 lives in northwestern Iran.

Iraqi President Sadam Hussein offered "any type of aid needed" in a letter sent Friday to his Iranian counterpart Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani.

The European Community, the United Nations, France, Japan and the United States have already offered aid for the rescue and medical care of the estimated 60,000 injured in Thursday's quake.

Iranian authorities early Friday sent thirty tons of food, medicine and clothes to the quake-stricken areas.

Officials in Tehran said Irak's gesture was appreciated and considered a "positive" step which would help negotiations aimed at definitively ending the Gulf War.

Iran confirmed Tuesday that the two countries had been meeting in secret to end the stalemate which has existed since August 1988 when eight years of fighting in which at least one million troops died were ended.

RIO DE JANEIRO (JUNE 22) EFE - Kidnappers have freed a Brazilian advertising magnate who helped plan President Fernando Collor de Mello's campaign, after his family paid a dlrs 2.5 million ransom, Brazilian television reported.

Businessman Roberto Medina, 41, was released Thursday in a Rio residential area, two weeks after his June 6 abduction.

Medina, a personal friend of Collor de Mello, owns the Artplan advertising agency which worked on the president's electoral campaign.

The kidnapping hit headlines after Medina's wife went on television June 16 and appealed to authorities to withdraw from the case to ensure her husband's safety.

Her appeal followed the arrest of the alleged chief of the kidnapping ring responsible for snatching Medina.

The suspect, Nazareno Tavares, is a well-known physical education instructor and was the personal trainer of former president Joao Figueiredo.

Medina's kidnapping was the 32nd in six months in Rio, although authorities believe the majority of abductions are not reported to police.

In most cases, the victims were held for only a few days and relatives negotiated directly with the kidnappers, handing over millions of dollars in ransom between them.

Police complain they are unable to halt the wave of abductions due to the lack of cooperation from the victims and their families.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 22) EFE - Church bells tolled Friday as millions of Romanians held a minute of silence in honor of their fellow countrymen who died in the popular uprising which toppled communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu six months ago.

Representatives from the newly-elected Senate and Assembly gathered in a southern neighborhood of Bucharest to place wreaths on the tombs of victims of the December revolution.

The revolt, which began when authorities cracked down on protesters in the western city of Timisoara on Dec. 15 and spread to the capital and other major cities, cost hundreds and possibly thousands of lives.

On Dec. 22, Ceaucescu and his wife Elena, who used brutal repression to maintain their corrupt 22-year-rule over the country, fled the capital in a bid to seek exile abroad.

They were captured and summarily tried and executed.

Hundreds watched Friday as Foreign Minister Sergiu Celic set flowers before a commemorative altar erected at University Square, where many of the clashes between security forces defending the Ceausescu regime and civilians occurred.

Members of the Army, which turned against the ruler during the revolt, stood at attention during the solemn ceremony broadcast on national television.

Meanwhile, students gathered to sing a Te Deum in memory of their companions who lost their lives to free Romania from Ceausescu's grip.

The commemoration unfolded peacefully, despite recent clashes between opposition groups and supporters of the new government, which is accused of representing the old communist guard and perpetuating repressive rule.

The decision of President Iion Illiescu to call in pro-government miners to violently break up an opposition student demonstration last week sparked an international outcry and has prompted fears that the government will use Ceasescu-style repression to quash opposition.

MOSCOW (JUNE 22) EFE - The five Central Asian republics, the most underdeveloped in the Soviet Union, have embarked on a project to create a regional common market, the republic of Kazakhstan's official news agency reported Friday.

The leaders of the republics of Uzbekistan, Tadzhikistan, Turkmenia, Kirghizia and Kazakhstan met Friday with Soviet Communist Party officials in Alma-Ata, the capital of Kazakhstan, to draw up the bases of the project.

Among key points to be discussed at the two-day meeting is a regional coordination of the republics' economic policies which would be aimed at industrializing the region.

The five republics' economies are currently based almost exclusively on the exploitation of raw materials.

Populated by diverse ethnic groups, most of which are Moslem, and with the highest unemployment rates in the Soviet Union, the Central Asian republics are the most underdeveloped of the country's 15 republics

The economic situation has recently been aggravated following violent ethnic clashes in Kirghizia and other republics.

At this weekend's meeting, the five leaders are also expected to discuss the ecological disaster threatening the Aral Sea.

They are likely to ask the Supreme Soviet and Council of Ministers to declare the sea a disaster zone and come up with an enviromental plan to save it.

BAGHDAD (JUNE 22) EFE - The Palestine Liberation Organization Friday called U.S. President George Bush's decision to cut off an 18-month-long dialogue an "act of support of Israel's policies of war and aggression".

In their first formal response to Bush's rupture, the PLO called for the immediate application of the resolutions decided upon in a recent emergency Arab summit in Baghdad.

In the Iraqi capital, Arab nations pledged their unconditional support for the PLO and promised to provide political and material aid toward the 30-month-old Palestinian uprising, or intifada, against Israeli rule in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"We ask Arab nations for something more than their denunciation and condemnation of this deed," the statement read.

The PLO Executive Committee, following a meeting week in Baghdad, said the rupture of dialogue "prejudices the peace process in the zone and contradicts the responsible attitude a superpower should adopt in these matters".

The decision "proves that Israel has the power to pressure U.S. policy," the PLO said, while calling for "the Arab nation and all of the forces which fight for peace and justice in the world" to back an international peace conference to resolve the conflict.

Bush cited an aborted seaborn raid on a Tel Aviv beach by the Palestine Liberation Front, a faction of the PLO umbrella organization, in his decision to call off the talks in Tunis.

The U.S. president added that talks would be renewed if the PLO explicitly condemned the attack, rather than denouncing terrorism against civilians in general as it has repeatedly done.

BRASILIA (JUNE 22) EFE - As Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello marks his 100th day in office Friday, he can boast that the economic austerity measures which so abruptly curtailed his presidential "honeymoon" period have slashed inflation as planned.

The inflation rate, which stood at 84.32 percent when he took office on Mar. 15, is estimated to be at about 10 percent this month, thanks to Collor's radical and unpopular measures such as a freeze on dlrs 95 billion out of a total of dlrs 120 billion in bank accounts.

Other measures which have stirred fierce criticism and widespread industrial action include his plan to privatize 11 state industries and his proposal to lay off up to a quarter of state sector employees -- a total of 360,000 sackings.

With only 21 representatives from his National Reconstruction Party in the 520-seat parliament, Collor has managed to push through 118 decrees and 44 provisional legislative changes.

But despite Collor's dramatic initial success, inflation is already on the rise again. Down to 3.2 percent in April, inflation crept up to 7.87 percent in May with the further rise to 10 percent expected in June.

The minimum salary has dropped from dlrs 96 to dlrs 69 per month according to analysts, and further strikes are expected in the wake of the government's failed attempt Monday to forge a truce with trade unions which are demanding index-linked salary rises.

While congratulating Collor on his initial success, observers warn that the sacrifices demanded by his austerity measures were creating high expectations among the electorate.

Failing to fulfil those expectations could mean a skydive out of public favor for the president known for his penchant for daredevil stunts.

BUCHAREST (JUNE 22) - Romanian Interior Minister Doru Viorel Ursu said Friday that university students were not involved in anti-government rioting last week, and that police had released all those arrested.

The minister said that "all of the students who were arrested the 13th, 14th and 15th of June were released."

"Since the students have not been involved in these events, it follows that you can not even speak about investigations or measures adopted against them," Ursu said.

"Rather exactly the opposite," Ursu added, "given that they showed complete respect for laws of non-violence and gave their support for legal routes."

Rioting broke out in Bucharest between anti-government protesters and miners called in by President Ion Iliescu to control dissent after riot police and army troops swept students out of Bucharest University Square, putting an end to their 53-day long protest.

"June 13th, 273 students were arrested and on the 14th and 15th a total of 176 (were arrested), and all of those innocent people were freed because they were not implicated in the riots which protesters provoked in various state institutions," Ursu claimed.

He also said, "We maintain continuous contacts and conversation with this collective (students), which began from the first moment I assumed by post."

Iliescu dismissed Ursu's predecessor, Mihai Chitac, on May 14, at the height of the rioting, for his inability to maintain order.

Ursu said he backed a recent measure approved by Romania's lower house of congress legitimizing the use of police and military force to dissolve illegal demonstrations, adding, "Not only the police must maintain pulic order, but in this mission all Romanian citizens must participate."

Asked the whereabouts of Marian Munteanu, president of Bucharest University's Students' League and accused of instigating protests, the minister indicated that following hospitalization, he was "in prison in the military hospital, where he is receiving the necessary assistance so that he doesn't suffer."

Ursu said the attorney general and Interior Ministry had the necessary proof to prosecute the student leader in connection with the disturbances, the worst violence since a December uprising overthrew the communist dictatorship of Nicolae Ceausescu.

WINDHOEK (JUNE 22) - Namibian police said Friday that they suspected white right-wing extremists as being responsible for opening fire this week on the homes of two cabinet ministers, the first such attacks since Namibia won independence from South Africa three months ago.

"While we have no concrete proof, our suspicion is that several individuals with right-wing leanings could have been responsible for the attacks," police spokesman Grigadier Siggi Eimbeck said.

Unidentified gunmen opened fire on the residences of Interior Minister Hifikepunye Pohamba and Defence Minister Peter Mueshihange on Thursday.

A security guard was wounded in the attack on Pohamba's house.

Eimbeck appealed to the public to come forward with any information which might help in the investigation into the attacks, adding, "We are going to do everything in our power to get them (the gunmen) prosecuted."

Eimbeck said the shootings were "cowardly" given government attempts to create an atmosphere of reconciliation in a country which he said had been through a long and bloody liberation war.

Namibia became independent from South Africa March 21.

MADRID (JUNE 22) EFE - Spain's ruling Socialists are expected to emerge unscathed in elections Saturday to the parliament of the southern region of Andalusia, despite a recent influence-peddling scandal involving the deputy prime minister's brother.

The relatively solid economic performance in the depressed region, a traditional Socialist stronghold, will apparently mitigate the affects of the scandal and of natural political wear and tear.

The Socialists have had an absolute majority in the regional parliament since it was set up in 1982 and have held national power since the same year.

Five million of seven million Andalusians are entitled to cast ballots at the more than 6,000 voting stations to elect the 109 regional deputies.

The cradle of flamenco and bullfighting, Andalucia is one of Spain's 17 autonomous regions and is comprised of eight provinces.

The Socialists fell one seat short of retaining their absolute majority in Spain's national legislature in October, but opinion polls show support in Andalucia of around 46 percent, similar to the last regional vote in 1986, allowing them to easily capture more than half the regional seats.

The polls knock predictions by many political commentators who had suggested Socialist credibility would be damaged by the scandal involving Juan Guerra, brother of Deputy Prime Minister Alfonso Guerra.

Courts are investigating allegations that Juan Guerra improperly used a government office and his family connections to rise from door-to-door salesman to wealthy businessman under Socialist rule.

The Socialist candidate to head the regional government is 44-year-old former labor minister Manuel Chaves, a friend of Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez.

Observers have attributed part of the Socialist popularity to the fact that both Gonzalez and Alfonso Guerra are natives of Seville, the region's capital.

Both come from modest backgrounds and broke the barriers to success in a region of traditionally rigid social structures.

But more important to the continued backing for the party is the region's economic growth, which has consistently topped the 5 percent national average of recent years.

Heavy public expenditure in the run up to the preparation of the 1992 World's Fair in Seville, and accelerated development of the country's sunny southern coasts, have boosted economic activity.

Andalucia is still one of the country's poorest regions, however, with unemployment remaining stubbornly high at around 25 percent.

The predicted runner-up in the polls, the conservative Popular Party (PP), seems unlikely to be weakened by its own corruption scandal in which several party officials in the nearby region of Valencia are alleged to have charged commissions for the award of local government contracts.

Opinion polls show the PP taking around 20 percent of the vote, slightly down from its showing in 1986.

The nationalist Andalucian Party is expected to double its vote from the last regional poll to about 12 percent to rival the communist-led United Left coalition for third place.

BUENOS AIRES, JUNE 22 EFE - Argentine President Carlos Menem has initiated a plan to partially privatize four major state-owned oil fields and completely privatize 38 others, as part of a controversial program to sell off much of the state sector.

Menem approved the measure Thursday, and Friday the government is to invite bids for the complete privatization of 38 secondary oil fields, which have some 14.3 million cubic meters of reserves.

Thirty-two domestic and foreign firms have expressed interest in the fields, which in 1989 produced 912,000 cubic meters of crude, representing 3.5 percent of Argentina's total production.

The government hopes to generate dlrs 300 million from the sale.

Four other more productive fields, which last year produced 3.3 million cubic meters of crude, will be partially privatized.

The government plans to sell 35 to 50 percent of its interest in the richer fields, located in the western province of Mendoza and the southern provinces of Neuquen, Chubut and Santa Cruz.

Several U.S., Japanese and Canadian firms are seen as potential buyers for these fields, which have a total of 42 million cubic meters of reserves.

In a related development, the opposition Radical party's senators slammed Menem for allegedly tailoring contract conditions to favor a potential bidder for the state telephone company EnTel.

The senators charged that one of several changes the government has made in the contract conditions was aimed at favoring the U.S. firm Bell Atlantic.

The legislators also slammed the telephone rate increases of more than 1,000 percent which the government has imposed since the beginning of the year.

The senators' criticism followed a demonstration at the parliament by some 2,500 EnTel workers opposed to the selloff.

A group of legislators, including some belonging to Menem's Peronist party have asked the government to suspend the planned privatization of EnTel and the state airline Aerolineas Argentinas.

EnTel and Aerolineas Argentinas are to be sold in an equity-for-debt swap.

Madrid (JUNE 22) EFE - Spain is to provide Nicaragua's soon-to-be enlarged police force with technical equipment but not with arms, under an accord signed Friday between Spanish Interior Minister Jose Luis Corcuera and his Nicaraguan counterpart Carlos Hurtado.

The agreement, under which Spain will supply vehicles, transmitors and computers, will come into force from September and will coincide with a proposed doubling of the Central American country's 5,000-strong police force announced by Hurtado.

Under Friday's accord, the two countries will also exchange information on policing methods and criminal information gathering.

However, officials stressed that the agreement did not mean Spain would supply Nicaragua with arms.

"In Nicaragua, there are already too many arms," Hurtado said shortly before signing the accord.

A nine-year war between U.S.-backed Contra rebels and the former leftist Sandinista government finally ended in April with the swearing-in of democratically-elected President Violeta Chamorro.

Since then, all but a handful of the estimated 15,000 Contras in arms have handed in their weapons.

Hurtado's announcement that the police force was to be expanded came a week after Chamorro decided the country's army would be cut to just 41,000 personnel by August, less than half its estimated strength of 90,000 in January.

Hurtado explained that the new strengthened police force is to include ex Contra guerrillas who would be deployed to patrol development areas set up by Chamorro's government for the guerrillas to resettle on.

The minister said the increase in the number of police officers by some 4,000 to 6,000 was necessary because, "Nicaragua is in a post-war situation with big civil security problems."

WASHINGTON (JUNE 22) XINHUA - U.S. SCIENTISTS HAVE CREATED THE FIRST ENZYME COMPLETELY BUILT IN THE LABORATORY, A STEP THAT SHOULD PAVE THE WAY FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF AN ASSORTMENT OF USEFUL "DESIGNER ENZYMES."

IN TODAY'S ISSUE OF THE JOURNAL SCIENCE, RESEARCHERS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO IN BOULDER USED COMPUTERS TO DESIGN THE ENZYME, DUBBED CHYMOHLIZYME-1, THEN CONSTRUCTED IT IN THE LABORATORY AND TESTED IT TO SHOW IT WORKED.

JOHN STEWART IS A PROFESSOR OF BIOCHEMISTRY WHO LED THE RESEARCH. THE RESEARCHERS BASED THEIR ENZYME ON A NATURALLY OCCURRING ENZYME KNOWN AS CHYMOTRYPSIN, WHICH IS PRODUCED BY THE PANCREAS TO AID DIGESTION.

THE RESEARCHERS ANALYZED THE STRUCTURE OF CHYMOTRYPSIN AND CONSTRUCTED A NEW ENZYME INCORPORATING ONLY THE AMINO ACID SECTIONS NECESSARY TO PRODUCE CHYMOTRYSIN'S FUNCTION, HE SAID.

CHYNOTRYPSIN IS MADE UP OF 245 AMINO ACIDS. CHYMOHELZYME-1 IS MADE OF ONLY 73 AMINO ACIDS, INCLUDING THE THREE AMINO ACIDS THAT PRODUCE THE CATALYST ACTIVITY, HE SAID.

ENZYMES, WHICH ARE PROTEINS MADE UP OF AMINO ACIDS, ACT LIKE CATALYSTS TO ENABLE CHEMICAL AND BIOLOGICAL REACTIONS, SAID STEWART.

SCIENTISTS HAVE LONG WORKED TO DEVELOP WAYS TO MANUFACTURE ENZYMES TO LEARN MORE ABOUT BASIC CHEMICAL AND BIOLOGICAL REACTION, HE SAID.

"THERE HAVE BEEN A FEW OTHER PEOPLE WORKING ALONG FOR DECADES TRYING TO SYNTHESIZE ORGANIC MOLECULES THAT MIMIC ENZYMES," HE SAID. "THIS IS THE FIRST TIME ANYBODY HAS SUCCEEDED."

"THE DISCOVERY OPENS THE DOOR FOR "DESIGNER ENZYMES" THAT MIGHT SOMEDAY BE USED IN A HOST OF LIFE-SAVING AND LIFE-ENRICHING PRODUCTS," HE SAID.

BEIJING (JUNE 22) XINHUA - SCIENTISTS HERE HAVE DEVELOPED CHINA'S FIRST ATOMIC MICROSCOPE WHICH CAN PRODUCE DETAILED, THREE-DIMENSIONAL IMAGES OF OBJECTS FAR TOO SMALL TO BE SEEN WITH THE AID OF OPTICAL OR ELECTRON MICROSCOPES, CHINESE RESEARCHERS ANNOUNCED HERE TODAY.

THE MICROSCOPE, DEVELOPED BY A RESEARCH GROUP HEADED BY PROFESSOR BAI CHUNLI OF THE CHEMICAL INSTITUTE OF THE CHINESE ACADEMY OF SCIENCES, HAS PROVIDED SCIENTISTS WITH PICTURES OF INDIVIDUAL ATOMS AND THE EVEN SMALLER FEATURES OF THE SURFACE STRUCTURES OF CONDUCTING, SEMI-CONDUCTING, AND INSULATING MATERIALS.

SINCE THE 19TH CENTURY, SCIENTISTS HAVE MADE STRENUOUS EFFORTS IN THE SEARCH FOR DEVICES THAT COULD GENERATE IMAGES OF ATOMS. BY THE 1980S THE WORLD'S MOST ADVANCED ELECTRON MICROSCOPE COULD SEE OBJECTS LESS THAN ONE TEN-BILLIONTH OF A METER, VERY CLOSE TO THE SIZE OF A TYPICAL ATOM, BUT IT COULD NOT BE USED TO THE STUDY OF SURFACES.

THE CHINESE-MADE ATOMIC MICROSCOPE PROVIDES A SHARP IMAGE OF SINGLE ATOMS. "DURING THE FIRST YEAR OF APPLICATION, WE HAVE TAKEN THE WORLD'S FIRST ATOMIC PICTURE OF AN ORGANIC FERROMAGNETIC CRYSTAL AND A DETAILED IMAGE OF THE ARRANGEMENT OF THE ATOMS ON THE SURFACE OF INSULIN," PROFESSOR BAI REMARKED.

ACCORDING TO PROFESSOR BAI, THE THEORETICAL BASIS OF THE ATOMIC MICROSCOPE IS COMPLETELY DIFFERENT FROM THAT OF THE ELECTRON MICROSCOPE. IN THE ELECTRON MICROSCOPE, A BEAM OF ENERGIZED ELECTRONS MUST BE FOCUSED ON A THIN FILM OF THE MATERIAL TO BE STUDIED. THE PICTURE PROVIDED BY THE ATOMIC MICROSCOPE IS OBTAINED THROUGH THE INTERACTION BETWEEN THE FINE TIP OF A PROBE AND THE SURFACE OF THE SPECIMAN.

AN ATOMIC MICROSCOPE WAS FIRST INVENTED IN 1986 BY NOBEL LAUREATE GERD BINNING. ONLY A SMALL NUMBER OF LABORATORIES IN THE UNITED STATES, SWITZERLAND AND FEDERAL GERMANY HAVE THE SOPHISCATED INSTRUMENT WHICH HAS YET TO BE COMMERCIALIZED.

SHENZHEN (JUNE 22) XINHUA - SHENZHEN RANKS FIRST IN THE PRODUCTION AND EXPORT OF 10 TYPES OF MANUFACTURED GOODS, THANKS TO RAPID DEVELOPMENT IN THE PAST DECADE.

TEN YEARS AGO SHENZHEN WAS A SLEEPY BORDER TOWN WITH ONLY A FEW OBSOLETE FACTORIES. ITS ANNUAL INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT VALUE WAS ONLY 60 MILLION YUAN IN THOSE DAYS.

THE FIRST SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE (SEZ) IN CHINA WAS SET UP IN SHENZHEN IN AUGUST 1980. SINCE THEN, THE CITY HAS INTRODUCED OVERSEAS INVESTMENT TO DEVELOP EXPORT-LED INDUSTRY. BY THE END OF 1989 SHENZHEN HAD 2,470 INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES, COVERING ELECTRONICS, TEXTILES, PETROCHEMICALS, METALLURGICAL PRODUCTS, BUILDING MATERIALS AND LIGHT INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS, AND PRODUCING MORE THAN 800 VARIETIES OF GOODS. THE INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT VALUE REACHED 11.645 BILLION YUAN LAST YEAR, 194 TIMES THE FIGURE FOR 1979.

ELECTRONICS HAVE DEVELOPED THE MOST RAPIDLY OF ALL THE INDUSTRIAL SECTORS IN SHENZHEN. BEFORE THE SEZ WAS SET UP, SHENZHEN HAD ONLY ONE SMALL WORKSHOP PRODUCING LOUDSPEAKERS; IT NOW HAS MORE THAN 500 ELECTRONICS FACTORIES, WHOSE OUTPUT VALUE ACCCOUNTS FOR ABOUT HALF OF THE TOTAL INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT VALUE. MANILA (JUNE 22) XINHUA - PHILIPPINE PRESIDENT CORAZON AQUINO TODAY CLARIFIED THAT THE STATEMENT MADE BY VICE-PRESIDENT SALVADOR LAUREL IN WASHINGTON ON THE U.S. MILITARY BASES ISSUE IS ENTITLED TO HIS OWN PERSONAL OPINION.

VICE-PRESIDENT LAUREL, A POLITICAL RIVAL OF MRS. AQUINO, SAID IN AN INTERVIEW IN WASHINGTON WEDNESDAY THAT HIS GOVERNMENT'S POLICY ON MILITARY BASE NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES IS "IN DISARRAY" BECAUSE OF LACK OF LEADERSHIP BY PRESIDENT AQUINO.

LAUREL, WHO IS IN THE UNITED STATES ON A PRIVATE VISIT, SAID HE ADVOCATES A GRADUAL PHASEOUT OF THE AMERICAN PRESENCE OVER A FIVE TO 10 YEARS PERIOD. THE PACE OF THE WITHDRAWAL WILL BE GUIDED BY GEOSTRATEGIC FACTORS, SUCH AS SOVIET MILITARY BEHAVIOR IN SOUTHEAST ASIA.

"THE VICE-PRESIDENT IS ENTITLED TO HIS OWN OPINION. AS I HAVE ALWAYS SAID, WE WILL HANDLE THIS MATTER OF THE BASES IN THE WAY WE DEEM BEST FOR THE NATIONAL INTEREST," PRESIDENT AQUINO SAID IN A WRITTEN PRESS STATEMENT.

BAGHDAD (JUNE 22) XINHUA - OPEC PRESIDENT SADEK BOUSSENA TODAY CALLED ON ALL OPEC MEMBER STATES TO SHOW SERIOUS COMMITMENT TO OIL PRODUCTION QUOTAS TO HELP CURB DECLINING PRICES ON THE WORLD OIL MARKET.

SPEAKING AT A NEWS CONFERENCE HERE THIS MORNING AT THE CLOSE OF HIS TWO-DAY VISIT BOUSSENA, WHO IS ALSO ALGERIA'S MINES MINISTER, ADDED THAT MEMBER STATES OF THE ORGANIZATION OF OIL EXPORTING COUNTRIES (OPEC) HAVE ALL SUFFERED FROM THE STEEP DECLINE IN PRICES ON THE WORLD MARKET, WHICH HAS APPARENTLY AFFECTED THEIR OIL-BASED ECONOMIES.

HE ATTRIBUTED THE DECLINE MAINLY TO THE NON-COMMITMENT BY OPEC OIL-PRODUCING COUNTRIES TO QUOTAS THROUGH OVERPRODUCTION, AND URGED THESE COUNTRIES TO RECONSIDER THEIR POLICIES.

BOUSSENA ARRIVED IN BAGHDAD THURSDAY ON THE FIRST STOP OF A TOUR OF MIDDLE EAST OIL PRODUCERS SEEKING TO SECURE ADHERENCE TO A MAY 2 GENEVA AGREEMENT TO LIMIT PRODUCTION TO 22.1-22.6 MILLION BARRELS A DAY AND SHORE UP SINKING OIL PRICES.

REPORTS HAVE ESTIMATED CURRENT OPEC PRODUCTION AT 23.68 MILLION BARRELS A DAY.

OIL PRICES HAVE RECENTLY SLUMPED TO 14 U.S. DOLLARS A BARREL FROM THE OIL CARTEL'S BENCHMARK OF 18 DOLLARS PER BARREL.

BOUSSENA TOLD REPORTERS THAT THE OBJECTIVE OF HIS TOUR, WHICH ALSO INCLUDE SAUDI ARABIA AND OTHER GULF STATES, IS TO STUDY WAYS OF PROPPING UP PRICES.

HE DECLINED TO NAME THE OPEC MEMBERS WHO ARE PRODUCING ABOVE THEIR QUOTAS. BUT REPORTS HAVE SAID KUWAIT AND THE UNITED ARAB EMIRATES ARE THE MAIN VIOLATORS.

HE SAID HE WILL HOLD TALKS WITH IRAQI OIL MINISTER ISSAM ABDUL-RAHEEM AL-CHALIBI ON THE WORLD OIL MARKET SITUATION AS WELL AS PROBLEMS WITHIN THE OPEC IN ORDER TO HALT FURTHER DECLINING OF PRICES.

ISTANBUL (JUNE 22) XINHUA - THE DIPLOMATIC ISSUE THAT ERUPTED IN MAY

BETWEEN TURKEY AND AUSTRIA OVER THE "AMMUNITION PROBLEM" WILL BE DISCUSSED DURING AN AUSTRIAN ENVOY'S VISIT HERE, A RELIABLE SOURCE FROM THE TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTRY SAID TODAY.

DURING THE TALKS WITH THE AUSTRIAN FOREIGN MINISTRY UNDERSECRETARY THOMAS KLESTIL, WHICH WILL START THIS EVENING, THE TURKISH DELEGATION IS EXPECTED TO GIVE PRIORITY TO THE AMMUNITION ISSUE, SAID THE SOURCE, WHO ASKED NOT TO BE NAMED.

DIPLOMATIC TENSION BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES WAS STIRRED UP LAST MONTH WHEN A LETTER FROM THE AUSTRIAN INTERIOR MINISTRY WAS SENT TO AMMUNITION MANUFACTURERS URGING THEM TO STOP SELLING MUNITIONS TO TURKEY BECAUSE THE MATERIAL COULD BE USED AGAINST KURDISH REBELS IN SOUTHEASTERN TURKEY.

ABOUT 2,500 PEOPLE HAVE BEEN KILLED IN THE REGION SINCE THE KURDISH REBELS STARTED AN ARMED REVOLT IN 1984 AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTRY STRONGLY REACTED WHEN VIENNA BANNED THE SHIPMENT OF AMMUNITION TO TURKEY, AND STATED THAT ALL DEFENSE INDUSTRY RELATIONS WITH AUSTRIA WERE "UNDER REVIEW."

ACCORDING TO TODAY'S "DAILY NEWS", AUSTRIAN COMPANIES IN TURKEY PUT PRESSURE ON THE AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT TO SEND SOMEONE TO AMEND THE STRAINED RELATIONS SO AS NOT TO LOSE THE TURKISH MARKET.

BUT AUSTRIAN EMBASSY OFFICIALS IN ANKARA POINTED OUT THAT THE VISIT WAS SCHEDULED THREE MONTHS AGO.

BESIDES THE "AMMUNITION PROBLEM," THE VISA ISSUE HAS ALSO HEIGHTENED TENSION IN THE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES SINCE THE AUSTRIAN CABINET DECIDED ON APRIL 3 TO EXTEND INDEFINITELY THE VISA REQUIREMENT FOR TURKS.

ANKARA RECIPROCATED BY SIMILARLY EXTENDING THE VISA REQUI- REMENT FOR AUSTRIAN NATIONALS.

TURKEY AND AUSTRIA SIGNED AN AGREEMENT ON VISA-FREE TRAVEL IN 1954.

BANGI (MALAYSIA) JUNE 22 KYODO - ABOUT 1,000 WORKERS OF HITACHI CONSUMER PRODUCTS (MALAYSIA) CO. WERE SACKED FRIDAY, IN THE LARGEST MASS DISMISSAL IN MALAYSIA INVOLVING A LABOR DISPUTE, AFTER ILLEGALLY STRIKING FOR FOUR DAYS.

THEY WERE PROTESTING AGAINST THE MANAGEMENT'S DECISION NOT TO ALLOW THEM TO JOIN A NATIONAL TRADE UNION.

THE WORKERS, ABOUT 80 PERCENT OF THEM YOUNG WOMEN, TURNED UP AT THE FACTORY AT THE BANGI INDUSTRIAL TRADE ZONE, 20 KILOMETERS SOUTH OF KUALA LUMPUR, ON FRIDAY AND FOUND THE GATES SHUT AND A NOTICE FROM THE MANAGEMENT SAYING "(YOU) HAVE TERMINATED YOUR OWN SERVICE."

THE COMPANY, A MALAYSIAN JOINT VENTURE WITH HITACHI LTD. OF JAPAN, OFFERED TO TAKE BACK THE WORKERS IF THEY MADE FRESH APPLICATIONS FOR EMPLOYMENT ON MONDAY.

THE WORKERS' SPOKESWOMAN ROZILAWATI RABAII SAID THAT THEY WILL NOT GO BACK TO WORK FOR THE COMPANY. "IF WE DO WE WILL BE AT THE COMPANY'S MERCY AND THE COMPANY HAS NOT PROMISED ANY IMPROVEMENT OF THE WORKING CONDITIONS."

MOST OF THE WORKERS, IN UNIFORMS, SAT IN GROUPS UNDER UMBRELLAS IN THE SHADE OF TREES LINING THE ROAD LEADING TO THE FACTORY.

THERE WAS NO HINT OF VIOLENCE OR DEMONSTRATIONS AS SEVERAL POLICEMEN STOOD ON GUARD NEARBY.

ONLY ABOUT 30 WORKERS, 10 OF THEM MANAGEMENT STAFF AND THE OTHERS NEWLY RECRUITED, WERE INSIDE THE FACTORY.

YOSHIKAZU WATANABE, THE COMPANY'S MANAGING DIRECTOR, DECLINED TO SPEAK TO THE PRESS FRIDAY.

WATANABE DISMISSED EIGHT WORKERS BELIEVED TO BE STRIKE LEADERS ON TUESDAY. ON THURSDAY, HE SAID HITACHI WAS UNABLE TO ALLOW THE WORKERS TO JOIN A NATIONAL TRADE UNION BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT HAD REJECTED THEIR APPLICATION.

LABOR MINISTRY OFFICIALS HAD ALREADY TOLD THE WORKERS THURSDAY THAT THEIR STRIKE WAS ILLEGAL.

STRIKES ARE UNUSUAL IN MALAYSIA AS UNDER THE LAW ONLY UNIONIZED WORKERS ARE ALLOWED TO STRIKE BUT ONLY AFTER CERTAIN LENGTHY PROCEDURES INCLUDING GIVING THE MANAGEMENT AND GOVERNMENT ADVANCE NOTICE.

UNLIKE ALL OTHER MALAYSIAN WORKERS, THOSE IN THE ELECTRONICS INDUSTRY ARE NOT ALLOWED TO FORM OR JOIN NATIONAL TRADE UNIONS EXCEPT IN-HOUSE UNIONS.

MALAYSIA IS THE WORLD'S BIGGEST EXPORTER OF SEMICONDUCTORS. LAST YEAR, ELECTRONIC COMPONENTS EARNED 15 PERCENT (3.8 BILLION DOLLARS) OF THE COUNTRY'S TOTAL EXPORTS EARNINGS AND THE INDUSTRY IS AN IMPORTANT PART OF PRIME MINISTER MAHATHIR MOHAMAD'S INDUSTRIALIZATION DRIVE.

THE HITACHI WORKERS HAD APPLIED TO JOIN THE ELECTRICAL INDUSTRY WORKERS UNION (EIWU) LAST YEAR BUT WERE REJECTED BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT SAID HITACHI'S PRODUCTS WERE CLASSIFIED AS ELECTRONIC AND NOT ELECTRICAL.

ROZILAWATI ARGUED THAT THE CLASSIFICATION WAS WRONG, SAYING THAT IN CUSTOMS FORMS FOR EXPORT, THE PRODUCTS WERE DEFINED AS ELECTRICAL.

THE FACTORY MAKES COMPONENTS FOR COLOR TELEVISION SETS AND VIDEO RECORDERS.

RAJASEKARAN GOVINDASAMY, A SENIOR TRADE UNION LEADER, SAID THE MALAYSIAN TRADE UNION CONGRESS (MTUC), AN UMBRELLA BODY FOR ALL PRIVATE-SECTOR UNIONS IN THE COUNTRY, WILL HELP THE WORKERS APPEAL AGAINST THEIR DISMISSAL TO THE LABOR MINISTRY.

RAJASEKARAN, MTUC DEPUTY SECRETARY, REITERATED HIS ALLEGATION THAT HITACHI HAD PRESSURED THE GOVERNMENT TO ENSURE THE EMPLOYEES WERE REFUSED PERMISSION TO JOIN A NATIONAL TRADE UNION. WATANABE HAS DENIED THE ALLEGATION.

THE STRIKE AND MASS SACKING COME AT A SENSITIVE TIME FOR MALAYSIA, WHICH IS FACED WITH THE THREAT OF HAVING ITS SPECIAL TRADE STATUS WITH THE UNITED STATES REVOKED BECAUSE LABOR GROUPS IN THE U.S. CLAIM THAT MALAYSIA VIOLATES WORKERS' RIGHTS.

THE ELECTRONICS INDUSTRY WAS SINGLED OUT IN THE FOUR PETITIONS FOR THE REVOCATION OF MALAYSIA'S ACCESS TO THE GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES (GSP) FILED BY AMERICAN AND INTERNATIONAL LABOR GROUPS.

TOKYO (JUNE 22) KYODO - THE UNITED STATES HAS CALLED ON JAPAN TO ACCEPT A SET OF TOUGH PROPOSALS THAT WOULD FORCE A COMPLETE CHANGE IN THE PRESENT JAPANESE PATENT SYSTEM, A GOVERNMENT SOURCE SAID FRIDAY.

THE U.S. CALL WAS MADE IN EXCHANGE FOR ITS AGREEMENT ON ACCEPTING THE "FIRST TO FILE" SYSTEM, DROPPING THE "FIRST TO INVENT" SYSTEM ON WHICH IT HAS SO FAR INSISTED, IN WHICH THE PATENT RIGHT IS AWARDED TO THE FIRST INVENTORS, ACCORDING TO THE SOURCE.

THE MOVE CAME AMID ONGOING EXPERT-LEVEL MEETINGS OF THE WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ORGANIZATION (WIPO), A SPECIALIZED BODY UNDER THE UNITED NATIONS, AIMED AT PATENT HARMONIZATION AMONG MAJOR INDUSTRIAL NATIONS.

THE SOURCE SAID JAPAN OPPOSES THE U.S. PROPOSALS, INCLUDING ONE THAT WOULD REQUIRE PATENT SCREENING TO BE COMPLETED WITHIN TWO YEARS.

THE U.S. ALSO ASKED THAT JAPAN START EXAMINATION OF PATENTS WITHIN THREE YEARS AFTER AN APPLICATION TO THE PATENT OFFICE.

OTHER U.S. PROPOSALS INCLUDE THE PROHIBITION OF FILING AN OBJECTION BY A THIRD PARTY TO A PATENT BEFORE IT IS FORMALLY AUTHORIZED, AS WELL AS THE ACCEPTANCE OF APPLICATIONS WRITTEN IN THE INVENTOR'S MOTHER TONGUE, THE SOURCE SAID.

THE JAPANESE PATENT SYSTEM HAS BEEN UNDER ATTACK FROM THE U.S. BECAUSE OF A SIGNIFICANT DELAY IN THE REGISTRATION OF PATENT RIGHTS IN JAPAN.

JAPAN'S REJECTION OF THE U.S. PROPOSALS WILL BE CONVEYED TO U.S. NEGOTIATORS AT THE FINAL ROUND OF STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS INITIATIVE (SII) TALKS SCHEDULED FOR NEXT WEEK, THE SOURCE SAID.

JAPAN IS LIKELY TO FACE DIFFICULTY IN IRONING OUT DIFFERENCES IN THE PATENT MECHANISM WITH THE U.S. AT A TIME WHEN OTHER MAJOR INDUSTRIALIZED COUNTRIES ARE MAKING SUBSTANTIAL CONCESSIONS TO ACHIEVE INTERNATIONAL STANDARDIZATION OF THE PATENT SYSTEM, THE SOURCE SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 22) KYODO - JAPAN HAS BECOME THE BIGGEST AID DONOR IN THE WORLD FOR THE FIRST TIME EVER, WITH CONTRIBUTIONS OF AROUND 9 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1989, THE FOREIGN MINISTRY SAID FRIDAY.

QUOTING STATISTICS COMPILED BY THE PARIS-BASED ORGANIZATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT (OECD), THE MINISTRY SAID JAPAN EXTENDED 8.96 BILLION DOLLARS IN OFFICIAL DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE (ODA) LAST YEAR, A 1.9 PERCENT DROP FROM 9.13 BILLION DOLLARS THE YEAR BEFORE.

THE UNITED STATES, THE TOP DONOR IN 1988, DROPPED TO SECOND PLACE, WITH 7.66 BILLION DOLLARS, FOLLOWED BY FRANCE, WHOSE DISBURSEMENT TOTALED 7.47 BILLION DOLLARS.

THE OECD ASCRIBED THE FALL IN UNITED STATES AID TO A CONCENTRATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS IN 1988 AND A DELAY IN DISBURSEMENTS TO THE INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION (IDA), AFFILIATED WITH THE WORLD BANK, MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID.

NET ODA DISBURSEMENTS FROM MEMBER COUNTRIES OF THE DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE COMMITTEE (DAC), A SUBORGANIZATION OF THE 24-MEMBER OECD, TO DEVELOPING COUNTRIES AND MULTILATERAL INSTITUTIONS WERE 46.50 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1989 COMPARED WITH 48.13 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1988, THE REPORT SAID.

WITH ALLOWANCE FOR CHANGES IN PRICES AND IN EXCHANGE RATES AGAINST THE U.S. DOLLAR, THIS REPRESENTS A DECREASE OF 2 PERCENT IN REAL TERMS.

ODA AS A SHARE OF GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP) FOR DAC MEMBERS COMBINED DECLINED TO 0.33 PERCENT LAST YEAR FROM 0.36 PERCENT IN 1988. THE DECREASE WAS PRIMARILY THE RESULT OF SPECIAL FACTORS IN THE TIMING OF CONTRIBUTIONS TO MULTILATERAL INSTITUTIONS, MAINLY THE WORLD BANK.

THE OECD ALSO SAID NET TOTAL RESOURCE FLOWS REACHING DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

FROM ALL SOURCES, INCLUDING DAC, NON-DAC COUNTRIES, AND MULTILATERAL INSTITUTIONS, ARE ESTIMATED AT 109 BILLION DOLLARS AGAINST 104 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1988.

NINE OUT OF THE 18 DAC MEMBER NATIONS REPORTED HIGHER ODA OUTFLOWS IN REAL TERMS, WITH SEVEN OUT OF THE NINE INCREASING THE RATIOS OF ODA TO THEIR GNP.

NORWAY, DENMARK, SWEDEN, AND THE NETHERLANDS CONTINUE TO STAND OUT AS THE COUNRTIES WITH THE HIGHEST ODA/GNP RATIOS, WITH NORWAY AND DENMARK IN FRONT AT 1.02 AND 1.00 PERCENT, RESPECTIVELY.

JAPAN, THOUGH AT THE TOP IN ABSOLUTE AMOUNT, RANKED 12TH IN TERMS OF ITS ODA/GNP RATIO AT 0.32 PERCENT IN 1989, UNCHANGED FROM 1988.

MEANWHILE, THE FOREIGN MINISTRY SAID THE GOVERNMENT WOULD NOT INDULGE IN SELF-SATISFACTION AND IS WILLING TO FURTHER BOOST ITS OVERSEAS ASSISTANCE.

THE MINISTRY ALSO INDICATED IT MIGHT BE DIFFICULT TO FULFILL ITS FIVE-YEAR AID PLAN, WHICH CALLS FOR MORE THAN 50 BILLION DOLLARS IN ODA FROM 1988 TO 1992.

"WE WILL DO OUR UTMOST IN THE REMAINING THREE YEARS ... BUT IT IS NOT CERTAIN HOW THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATE WILL AFFECT OUR CONTRIBUTIONS IN DOLLAR TERMS," A MINISTRY OFFICIAL SAID.

TOKYO (JUNE 22) KYODO - THE FINANCE MINISTRY ADVISED JAPANESE FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS FRIDAY THAT IT WOULD LIFT A BAN ON SUBORDINATED LOANS, EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY.

SUBORDINATED LOANS ARE UNSECURED LOANS IN WHICH CREDITORS' ORDER OF CREDIT FOR RECEIPT OF PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST IS LOWER THAN THAT OF OTHER CREDITORS. THAT IS, DEBT IS REPAYABLE ONLY AFTER OTHER DEBTS WITH A HIGHER CLAIM HAVE BEEN SATISFIED.

ACCORDING TO THE BANK FOR INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENTS' (BIS)'S STANDARDS ON CAPITAL ADEQUACY, SUBORDINATED LOANS ARE CATEGORIZED AS ''OWNED CAPITAL'' AND CAN THUS BE USED BY FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO ENHANCE THEIR NET WORTH RATIOS TO MEET THE STANDARDS.

THE MINISTRY'S NOTICE TO FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS SAID SUBORDINATED LOANS MUST BE GOOD FOR FIVE YEARS OR MORE AND LOAN CONTRACTS MUST BE BILATERAL, SIGNED BETWEEN A CREDITOR AND A DEBTOR.

TOKYO (JUNE 22) KYODO - CAPITAL SPENDING BY SMALL AND MEDIUM- SIZE FIRMS IN FISCAL 1989 GREW FOR THE THIRD STRAIGHT YEAR, RISING 24.4 PERCENT TO 3,911.2 BILLION YEN, A SURVEY RELEASED FRIDAY SHOWED.

THE THREE-YEAR STREAK OF DOUBLE-DIGIT GROWTH WAS THE FIRST SINCE THE OIL CRISIS IN THE EARLY 1970S, ACCORDING TO A SURVEY BY THE SMALL AND MEDIUM BUSINESS FINANCE CORP., A PUBLIC ENTITY.

THE SURVEY, INVOLVING 80,270 COMPANIES WITH 20-299 EMPLOYEES NATIONWIDE, FOUND THAT CORPORATE INVESTMENT IN PLANT AND EQUIPMENT WAS PARTICULARY STRONG FOR NEW PRODUCTS WITH COST-CUTTING AND LABOR-SAVING BENEFITS AMID INCREASED MANPOWER SHORTAGES UNDER THE CURRENT BUSINESS EXPANSION.

GROWTH WAS OBSERVED IN ALL INDUSTRIES, WITH THE CONSTRUCTION AND GENERAL MACHINERY INDUSTRIES POSTING INCREASES OF MORE THAN 30 PERCENT, ACCORDING TO THE SURVEY, RESULTS OF WHICH WERE BASED ON 11,179 RESPONDENTS.

REVERSING THE TREND IN THE YEAR ENDED ON MARCH 31, CAPITAL SPENDING BY SMALL AND MEDIUM-SIZED COMPANIES WILL DECREASE 1.7 PERCENT IN FISCAL 1990 TO 3,843.7 BILLION YEN, THE SURVEY SAID.

BUT AN OFFICIAL AT THE PUBLIC INSTITUTION SAID FINAL FIGURES WILL BE LARGER BECAUSE OF BULLISH BUSINESS SENTIMENT AMONG THOSE COMPANIES FOR THE LATTER HALF OF THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR.

"GIVEN THE BULLISH ATTITUDE TOWARD INVESTMENT IN NEW BUSINESSES AND THE POSSIBILITY OF UPWARD REVISIONS OF INVESTMENT PLANS, CAPITAL SPENDING WILL LIKELY SHOW DOUBLE-DIGIT GROWTH IN FISCAL 1990 FOR ANOTHER YEAR," HE SAID.

FROM THE BULLS:

"The blood and guts of this business are earnings and inflation," says STEPHEN LEEB, editor of "Indicator Digest." "Right now, earnings are headed up and inflation is headed down. That simply tells us that over the next 12-18 months the market is heading higher, perhaps dramatically higher." (CNBC "World Business", 6/22)

"There is still a lot of cash sitting on the sidelines," says DON HAYS, director of investment strategy at WHEAT, FIRST SECURITIES INC. "And the cash has been coming in to the buy side of the market. Even now, we've used up relatively little of the cash on the sidelines." Hays says there has been very little volume on the down side of the market, so as soon as "it gets rid of its excesses, it turns back up." He says Wednesday's trading followed a similar pattern. "I guess the bears' bark is worse than their bite." (UPI, 6/21)

FROM THE BEARS:

KEN SPENCE of SALOMON BROTHERS says investors should head for cash until the Dow finds support around 2650. Spence is worried because "there's a loss of upside momentum in the market. The rate at which the market is moving up is slowing. Also the number of stocks and groups participating on the upside is becoming very narrow." (CNBC "Business View", 6/21)

STOCK MARKET:

"There has to be some positive news before stocks go up any further," says S.G. WARBURG trader KEN DUCEY. "Until then, people are going to look for a correction before committing." ("USA Today", 6/22)

Last week we had a lot of buying," because of the options expirations, says EUGENE PERONI, director of technical research at JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT. "This week, there's a restoration of focus, on the Fed, on interest rates, on corporate earnings for the quarter. The market ... appears to be saddled in a range between the lower 2800 area and the lower 2900 area." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 6/21)

"The last couple of days the stock market has been seesawing," says ED NICOSKI of PIPER, JAFFRAY HOPWOOD. He thinks the market will be steady short-term, but will reach as high as the mid-2900s later this year. "The market doesn't have the conviction of all the people managing money, but it's being forced higher by sheer momentum." ("Investor's Daily", 6/22)

MICHAEL METZ at OPPENHEIMER & CO. looks for the Dow to skid to 2800 in the next week or two, reach 3100 or higher in August and then tumble back to 2800. "The goodies will soon be gone," he tells "USA Today" columnist DAN DORFMAN. "Decision time's today, not tomorrow. the next week or two, chiefly on market weakness, or forget it." ("USA Today", 6/22)

"I can confidently say that the broader [stock market] indexes like the Wilshire 5000 or the Frank Russell 3000 will sharply outperform the S&P 500 this decade -- though I'm not at all confident of saying that's going to happen this year or next," says ROBERT ARNOTT, president of FIRST QUADRANT CORP., a Pasadena, Calif., money manager. (WSJ, 6/22)

"A lot of traders thought the market was going to go down [yesterday]," says PETER GRENNAN, head of stock index futures trading at SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. "After Monday's drop you can allow a couple of days' rally, but no more than that." (NYT, 6/22)

STOCK TIPS:

LEVI STRAUSS & CO. is featured in the cover story of the "Money" section this morning in "USA Today" as an example of a leveraged buyout story with a happy ending. The article notes that the company is enjoying record revenue and profits and is seven years ahead of schedule in repaying its debt. "We hold up Levi as a really good model for the [clothing] industry" in efficiency and innovation, says GOLDMAN SACHS apparel analyst

JAY MELTZER. ("USA Today", 6/22)

The impact of the film "Dick Tracy" on DISNEY stock is discussed this morning in "The New York Times." The stock fell Monday after the movie's weekend opening, but has been recovering. Analysts note that Disney stands to benefit from putting the Tracy characters "to work across the company" in its theme parks and retailing efforts. "The movie's done fine " says JEFFREY LOGSDON, an analyst at CROWELL, WEEDON & CO. in Los Angeles. "It was our opinion that no matter what the film did over the weekend it wouldn't be enough for Wall Street. 'Dick Tracy' is a film that every studio would like to add to its portfolio." On Disney in general, analyst CHRISTOPHER DIXON of KIDDER, PEABODY says, "They'll have trouble matching the growth rates of the past, but they'll still generate significant returns for shareholders. Disney is clearly one of the great American franchises." (NYT, 6/22)
